Pontiff Seeks Church Union With England Back in Fold

Services Enshrine Martyrs of Church

Sir Thomas More and Cardinal Fisher Died Opposing Scihsm.

By the United Press.

Vatican City, May 19.—Pope Pius XI, leading emotoinal ceremonies creating two more saints in the Roman Catholic Church, today appealed to the Church of England to return to Rome.

The Holy Father, directing the ritual which raised the English martyrs—Sir Thomas More and John Cardinal Fisher—to sainthood, recalled the ancient glories of Catholicism and urged the English to return to the fold under his guidance.

"Let those still separated from us," the pontiff said, starting the canonization services in St. Peter's Cathedral at 8 a. m., "consider attentively the ancient glories of their church, which are both a reflection and increment of the glories of the Church of Rome.

"Let them consider and remember that this apostolic see has been waiting for them so long and so anxiously, not as coming to a strange dwelling place, but as finally returning to their paternal home."

Officiates Amid Splendor.

With the pontiff on his gorgeous throne, the two Englishmen were canonized—the first Englishmen raised to sainthood since the Reformation.

The canonization was in recognition of their fearless leadership again King Henry VIII's campaign early in the sixteenth century to seize spiritual as well as temporal power. He had them beheaded for their efforts.

The rites were marked by solemnity and pomp, the emotional appeal enchanced by the moving Gregorian chant and the magnificence of the ecclesiastical vestments in red and gold, symbolic of martyrdom.

The tremendous throng packing the cathedral and the square outside included 8,000 British pilgrims headed by the Archbishop of Westminster.

The Basilica was illuminated tonight by 6,000 torches, giving it the eerie appearance of a great floating cathedral on the horizon of the Eternal City. Huge crowds milling about the square all day long watched the ceremony of lighting up the cathedral.

Huge Cross Illuminated.

The huge cross on St. Peter's dome was illuminated first, standing out sharply against the dark sky. Attendants then swiftly lighted the torches.

The canonization service began with the papal procession from the Vatican into St. Peter's. His holiness descended from his private apartment to the Sistine chapel, where cardinals, archbishops and bishops participating in the procession awaited him.

They then passed down the Scala Regia, lined with the famous Swiss Guards in picturesque uniforms designed by Michelangelo. The cardinals made an impressive splash of color in their red cassocks, each wearing his precious mitre.

The Noble Guard, in dazzling red uniforms, preceded the Pope, walking ahead and by his side as he was borne high above the populace on his "sedia gestatoria," or open palanquin throne.

The Holy Father mounted the dais, or throne, and the traditional ceremonies were conducted. He proclaimed Sir Thomas and Cardinal Fisher saints "in honor of the indivisible diety for their exaltation of the Catholic faith and increase of Christian religion."

London, May 19.—Opinion in the Church of England, as summarized by the Rev. W. H. Carnegie, subdean of Westminster, is opposed to reunion with the Roman Catholic Church under present creeds and strict religious beliefs.

The Rev. Mr. Carnegie, former House of Commons chaplain, in an exclusive interview with the United Press, commenting on Pope Pius XI's appeal to the Church of England to reunite with Rome, said reunion would have to be on a much broader basis than is apparent now.

"Although this is far too big a question to dismiss in two or three sentences," he said, "broadly speaking, Rome is impossible for us if only because of the Italian system which long has dominated the Latin minds.

"We are Anglo-Saxons, and do not think in the same way.

"To make a political analogy, the difference is similar to that between Mussolinism and our constitutional government.

"But quite apart from that, we did not part from Rome merely by chance. We regard many of their claims as unfounded."

The American Messiahs

Installment II—The Kingfish (Part 2)

The second installment of "The American Messiahs," by the Unofficial Observer, author of the "New Dealers," which appeared last year. While "The American Messiahs" does not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Post, it is commended as a most candid discussion of the mavericks, the reformers and the radio spellbinders now booming their way across the American political stage.

IV.

Notwithstanding his wisdom of the serpent—though he has never laid claim to the innocence of the dove—reasonably impartial observers in Washington and in Louisiana think that Huey has a lot of honest "proletarian" sympathy. It is, however, so entwined with his very human lust for power and his insensate determination to avenge every personal grievance, that it is difficult to gauge its exact quantity.

For example, he frankly admits in his autobiography that his lifelong battle against Standard Oil was a grudge fight. Several of the smaller oil companies were among his legal clients in Shreveport, near which oil and gas had been found, and a good many local business men were dreaming of becoming millionaires. Huey was among them and owned an interest in some of these local oil companies. He gives this account:

Several companies in which I was interested were very successful. We finally had a very large concern. Pipe lines were paying $1.55 per barrel for oil and begging for more.

It was just at this time that the big oil companies threatened to begin pipe line embargoes, designed to force out small companies and independent operators.

(Then) all independents were told the pipe lines would take no more of their oil.

I had gone to sleep one night with transactions all ready to be closed for options and equities which meant I might some day be mentioned among the millionaires, to awake in the morning to read that nothing I had was of value, because the three pipe line companies had said so.

At a meeting called by the local chamber of commerce the next day, Huey found that Standard Oil was dominating the situation. It was adamant and the little men and independents were forced to the wall.

"You've done this before and got by with it," Huey shouted, "but this time, go do it and see when you hear the last of it."

Standard Oil has not yet heard the last of it. That incident—a very minor and typical incident in the history of any great American corporation—marked the beginning of Long's fight to tax the big oil and gas companies, a fight which has been progressively successful. In the course of the battle, Long carried a measure to have pipe lines declared common carriers all the way up to the United States Supreme Court, pleaded the case himself, and won it. He also carried his free school book law to the Supreme Court, argued it and was sustained. William Howard Taft was reported to have said that Long was the most brilliant lawyer who had appeared before the Court.

Huey makes very little effort to conceal the element of vindictiveness in all that he does or tries to do. His social thinking seems to be purely the result of experience and not unified by any philosophical basis. When he traveled through the Louisiana back country, as a young commercial salesman, he felt the need of good roads. His own struggle to get through law school impressed him with the need for free education—for free living expenses as well as free tuition for young men of talent—a proposal that he has attached as a rider to his original program for a capital levy and a sharing of wealth, by redistribution.

If he knew history and economics as well as he knows American legal practice, he might become one of the intellectual titans of his day, but, outside the field of law, he is an abysmally ignorant man. His political battles have taken the time in which he might have improved his theoretical knowledge. Shortly after he entered the United States Senate he heard that a prominent Washington correspondent had just written a series of articles which attempted to analyze the current depression in terms of the long swing of capitalism in the United States. Huey hurried to see him and got copies of the articles, following which a significant and rather pathetic conversation took place.

"Have any books been written on this subject?" Long asked.

The correspondent said there had been a good many.

"Name some," said Huey.

The correspondent named five or six that came to his mind, including James Truslow Adams' "Epic of America."

Huey yanked a roll of bills from his pocket, turned to his husky bodyguard and said, "Get those books for me."

Capital Fears Official Link To NRA Drive

Richberg Denies He Will Address 1,500 Trade Leaders.

When business leaders—1,500 strong—"march" to Washington this week to insist on two years' extension of NRA, there is not going to be any indication, if Administration leaders can help it, that the movement was "inspired." With reactions from the recent farm march fresh in their mind, they were hesitant to discuss the latest "march" yesterday.

Typical of the attitude were statements of Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board, who said he had made no arrangements to talk to the business men.

"If you talk, it looks like propaganda," he said. "These people are supporting themselves from their own contributions. Nothing is coming from NRA."

Explains Trip to N. Y.

Richberg said he went to New York at request of the Industry and Business Committee for NRA Extension several weeks ago and "answered questions."

Representative Doughton, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, which is considering the NRA extension measure, asked about the "march," replied that he was "working and not talking." Incidentally, he said, his committee expected to report a two-year extension bill to the House before end of the week. Hearings on the measure will start today.

A parallel between the NRA "march" and the farm "march" was drawn by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, active opponent of the NRA.

"There is a closer connection between this movement and the NRA than there was between the farm march and the AAA," he said.

Propaganda Drive Charged.

Code authorities scattered over the country are conducting a great deal of propaganda in connection with the proposed meeting, he said.

"Secretaries and executives of these code authorities are making $20,000 and $25,000 a year," he said, "and they don't want to lose their jobs. These code authorities are spending $50,000,000 a year. They are beneficiaries of repeal of the anti-trust laws and they don't want to lose these benefits."

Ward Cheney, chairman of the business committee, said a meeting will be held in Memorial Continental Hall at 9:30 a. m. or 2:30 p. m. Wednesday. No program has been announced. Whether the group expects to call at the White House, as did the farmers, has not been revealed. Cheney said delegations will come from New York, Buffalo, Albany, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago, Louisville, St. Louis and Boston. A New York group will come by special train.

All Depends on Court.

A statement by a legal sub-committee of the business committee declared yesterday that the Clark resolution for extension of NRA to April 1, 1936, "is designed to, and unquestionably will, bring to an immediate end the entire code program—labor provisions, trade practice regulations, and all.

"Such economic waste, definitely retarding the recovery process, should not be tolerated. The foundations already established should be utilized, not scrapped. The soundest method of accomplishing

Jane Addams, Ill, Struggles Grimly for Life

Famous Crusader, 75 Years Old, in Critical State After Operation.

By the United Press.

Chicago, May 19.—Jane Addams, who has been called "America's foremost woman citizen," clung to life tonight with what courage and strength is left to her after more than a half-century of fighting for the underprivileged.

A weakened heart and her 75 years worked against recovery of the world-famed welfare worker from an abdominal operation performed yesterday at Passavant Hospital.

Dr. Arthur Curtis, who operated after a consultation with three other physicians, described her condition as "critical."

"She is doing as well as can be expected," Dr. James A. Britton, her personal physician, said. "She is running a slight temperature today, but has withstood the operation well. The day after an operation is a very critical period in such a case as this."

Scores of floral offerings and hundreds of telegrams of inquiry came to the hospital from all parts of the country. They were a tribute to the little Quaker woman's unrelenting battle for the rights of the downtrodden.

Rally Tired Her.

Only two weeks ago she attended the Washington conference of the Women's League for Peace and Freedom, of which she had been international president. It was apparent on her return that she was

Soviets Order 3 Giant Planes To Replace Wrecked Gorky

Stunting of 'Air Hoodlum' Officially Blamed for Crash Costing 49 Lives; Pensions to Be Granted Families by Government.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, May 19.—The Council of Peoples' Commissars authorized today construction of three new planes of the same type as the Maxim Gorky to replace the world's largest land plane which crashed with loss of 49 lives in a tragedy blamed upon an "air hoodlum."

Soviet authorities announced that the new giant aircraft would be named Vladimir Lenin, Joseph Stalin and Maxim Gorky, after three of the Soviet's greatest heroes.

The victims of the crash yesterday of the original Maxim Gorky will be buried at 6 p. m. tomorrow at the old Donskoi Monastery.

The immediate move to replace the original Maxim Gorky was initiated when Mikhail Koltsoff, head of the committee which sponsored the building of the original craft, telephoned the Communist party newspaper Pravda from Paris and asserted:

"The Bolsheviks never retreat."

He demanded that Soviet Russia build a "larger, more beautiful and more powerful" ship even than the old Gorky, to serve as a memorial to the victims of the disaster.

Workers in the Moscow factories met after work today, expressed condolences to the families of the victims and announced their support of Koltsoff's project.

Bodies of the 49 victims, many of which had been dismembered, were collected and held today in a morgue for a state funeral, which may be tomorrow.

The village of Socol, where the "palace" was hurtled after its collision with a smaller stunting plane, was surrounded by hundreds of police today, keeping the curious away from places where the wreckage was strewn over a half mile of territory.

The stunting of pilot Blagin in the smaller plane, which was held responsible for the disaster, was an example of "a criminal lack of discipline" which the government and the Communist Party "are removing from the airfleet with hot

Simple Rites Set in England For Lawrence

Funeral Slated Tomorrow for War Hero, Killed by Motor Crash.

By the Associated Press.

Wool, Dorsetshire, England, May 19.—England's "Lawrence of Arabia," one of the most romantic, yet enigmatic, personalities of modern times, died today.

Death came to Col. T. E. Lawrence, 46, shortly after 8 a. m. (2 a. m. Eastern standard time). He had lain unconscious in a little tin military hospital in the countryside for 142 hours after a motorcycle collision.

For more than an hour doctors attempted to revive him by continuous use of oxygen.

Since the crash late Monday they had waited constantly for an opportunity to operate in an attempt to save the one-time "uncrowned King of Arabia," but Lawrence died without regaining consciousness.

A post-mortem this afternoon disclosed that Lawrence's brain was so badly damaged that had he recovered he would have regained only part use of his speech and sight. The funeral will be held Tuesday.

Shortly before 7 a. m. doctors and nurses saw a change in him. His

Message Finished On Potomac Cruise

By Felix Bruner.

Almost hopelessly handicapped by President Roosevelt's decision to deliver his bonus veto message in person, friends of the measure in Congress continued yesterday their efforts to obtain sufficient Senate votes to pass over the veto.

As a last-minute gesture, a group of Senators and Representatives friendly to the measure will call at the White House today for the announced purpose of attempting to persuade the President to let the bill become a law. They had no hope that their mission would succeed.

Rechecking the Senate line-up, Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, author of the bill, declared that one Senate vote will decide the issue. On the other hand, Administration leaders contended they had 35 votes to sustain the veto. Only 33 are necessary.

Expect Immediate Vote.

Preparations are being made for the President's appearance in the House of Representatives Wednesday. A total of 600 gallery tickets have been printed and they will be distributed, one to each member of the House and Senate. There still is some question of whether the meeting will just be as session of the House, with Senators present as visitors. Veto messages ordinarily go only to the House in which the bill originated, in this instance the House of Representatives.

While members of Congress were speculating on the effect of the President's unprecedented announcement that he will personally deliver the message, the President, himself, was peacefully floating down the Potomac River on a week-end cruise. It was believed he was putting the final touches to his message.

Both the Senate and the House are expected to vote on motions to override the veto immediately after the message is delivered. There is no question that the House will override the veto.

Of almost as much interest as the veto vote itself is speculation over the extent to which the President will go in opposing inflation generally.

Meanwhile, telegrams both favorable and unfavorable to the President's action continued to arrive at the White House. Among them was a message from Carl P. Dennett, chairman of the National Economy League, which said:

"The National Economy League thanks you on behalf of its 250,000 members for your splendid determination to veto the Patman bonus bill. This is good insurance against bad inflation. Every thoughtful American citizen will support the stand you have taken."

While consideration of the bonus veto will temporarily slow things up, Congress continued to show an inclination to travel full speed ahead with hopes of reasonably early adjournment. Both Houses will join Tuesday in the annual memorial service for deceased members.

Push AAA Changes.

Today the House will consider the bill increasing the capital of the Home Owners Loan Corporation to $3,800,000,000 and the Senate will take up the $460,000,000 Navy supply bill. The House is expected to follow the HOLC measure with consideration of AAA amendments, which may be passed by the end of the week.

Although the AAA amendments are not on the Administration "must" program, Democratic lead-

Anniversary of Lindbergh's Hop Recalls D. C. Excitement

Restraint and Dignity Cast Aside Eight Years Ago Today as Capital Celebrated Success of Little Known Flier's Ocean Venture.

Eight years ago today—it hardly seems that—Washington's 500,000 joined the greatest rooting gallery the world has ever known. A young fellow named Charles Lindbergh, flying solo, had taken off from New York on a nonstop flight to Paris. It was an incredible adventure; some said a "crazy" one. But by nightfall the whole world was rooting for him, worrying about him, praying for him.

The strain which the National Capital underwent for some 33 hours was deftly described by a Post reporter after Lindbergh landed in Paris.

"It was the hardest flight the city ever made," he wrote.

Few persons took the 25-year-old "Slim" Lindbergh seriously when it was announced that he would attempt a flight to Paris. The country generally had its attention focused on Admiral Richard E. Byrd. He, with Bert Acosta and George Noville, had been at Roosevelt Field for many days waiting for good weather before taking off in their tri-motored Fokker for Paris. Clarence Chamberlin and Charles Levine also were poised for a hop across the Atlantic.

Lindbergh arrived at Roosevelt Field after a spectacular, one-stop flight from San Diego, Calif., where his monoplane, the Spirit of St. Louis, had been built. Now for the first time the newspapers began to take notice. They called him the "flying fool," a sobriquet which Lindbergh's admirers later insisted be dropped.

On the morning of May 20, Lindbergh arose hours before the dawn. A light rain was falling, but the weather report for the New York-Paris course in general was promising. Lindbergh worked on his plane, while he waited for the rain to cease.

Finally, just as the sun was coming up, Lindbergh turned to a mechanic and said, "Let's go." He climbed into the cockpit, gave a farewell grin, and then soared away through the mists. The dark horse in the New York to Paris race was on his way.

U. S. Farms to Be Electrified From Palace Only Elite Knew

Electrification of a million American farm homes, most of which now are illuminated with oil lamps and candles, will be centered in one of Washington's most famous—and capitalistic—old mansions.

Rental papers have been signed and today, when employes of the Rural Electrical Administration set out for work, their destination will be not the Interior Building space, which was their quarters until last Saturday, but the palatial home where James G. Blaine once was host and George Westinghouse entertained Lord Kelvin.

Here, in this feudal castle at 2000 Massachusetts avenue, plans will be drafted in a marble staircase atmosphere for making life more bearable to farmers and their families from Bangor to San Diego.

James G. Blaine, who served his country as member of Congress, Senator and Secretary of State and was defeated by Cleveland for the Presidency, lived at 2000 Massachusetts avenue for many years. Later, it was occupied by George Westinghouse, inventor of the air brake.

Just 36 years ago Mrs. Westinghouse honored the Society of Mechanical Engineers with, to quote from one account, "one of the finest receptions ever given in a private residence in Washington."

And so the papers were signed Saturday, Randall H. Hagner & Co., representing the home's present owner, H. B. Spencer. Today REA will be a Dupont circle aristocrat.

There are indications, too, that another house with a past will be taken over by an alphabetical agency before long. It is the E. B. McLean town house at Fifteenth and I streets, now vacant and quiet in contrast to the old days when President Harding played poker there.

5,000 Gape as Big Top Rises; Circus Opening in City Today

At least 5,000 persons went out to Fifth street and Florida avenue northeast yesterday to see the circus move in.

Fine weather brought so many to the circus lot that canvasmen had trouble herding them back to lift the big top, a tent so huge that 15,000 persons can be seated and still leave enough room for the rings.

The crowd on hand by 8 a. m. was composed largely of small boys who sought—and obtained—jobs carrying small tent poles and stakes in return for tickets to the show today.

Later, when the gathering had swelled and the smaller of the 31 tents had been rigged by hundreds of roustabouts the elephants moved in to help raise the big top and to shift the brilliantly decorated cages of jungle beasts into a huge oval in the menagerie tent.

In the center of that oval the tepees of the Council of Plains Indians attracted a great deal of chattering attention, with its groups of Indian ponies and burros grazing calmly near the lines of camels and zebras.

But it was the elephants, as always, which proved the greatest attraction. The obedient animals could scarcely do their work because of the children who pulled their parents toward the wagons full of beasts the elephants were shoving about.

This afternoon the big show begins. There will be two shows today, two tomorrow. The performances will be at 2 and 8 p. m., with the big top open an hour earlier for inspection of the menagerie. Then the procession, with Indians, Cossacks, Mexican vaqueros and cowboys parading in behind Col. Tim McCoy, boss of the circus' riders, ropers and bulldoggers.

Shipyard Strike Through U. S. Looms in Vote

Balloting Set for Eastern Locals; West Coast May Follow.

The Labor Situation.

Threat of a Nation-wide strike in the shipbuilding industry spread as the executive board of the workers' union met to plan a walkout vote.

In Illinois, with utility service in 50 towns disrupted, officials prepared a campaign for municipal ownership.

In Springfield, Mass., four non-union printers were injured in a strike riot at the plant of the Springfield Republican.

The seamen's strike in France was ended. The liner Normandie, presumably, will sail as scheduled, May 29.

By the Associated Press.

Camden, N. J., May 19.—Threat of a general strike of shipyard workers spread from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts today as the general executive board of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers met to lay plans for a walkout vote in the Eastern yards.

"Word from San Francisco indicates that the three West Coast locals will be ready to support a movement for a general tie-up if a general strike call is issued," Philip Van Gelder, national executive secretary of the union, said in a statement after the board meeting.

The Pacific Coast unions—including 2,000 men at Seattle, San Pedro and San Francisco—will follow the same procedure as the Atlantic Coast employes in deciding on the strike, Van Gelder said.

A closed ballot will be taken in each local and, if a walkout is ordered, demands will be made that the Industrial Union be recognized as the sole collective bargaining agency in the yards," and that wages be increased and working conditions improved.

Leaflets and motion pictures telling of the strike of 4,600 employes of the New York Shipbuilding Co. here will be distributed before the strike vote is taken. Speakers will also be sent out to the locals in Bath, Me.; Quincy, Mass.; New London, Conn.; Newport News, Chester and Wilmington.

Municipal Ownership Planned to Break Strike

By the Associated Press.

Centralia, Ill., May 19.—With utility service to about 50 southern Illinois towns disrupted by a prolonged strike of Illinois Power & Light Co. employes, officials of cities in the stricken area today prepared to launch campaigns for municipal ownership.

Talk of municipal gas plants here was first heard several days ago. Mayor George Remnsnider of Belleville last week advocated municipally owned utilities in that town, and Edwardsville officials revealed last night that plans for city-operated plants had been presented to the legal department there.

City executives from a score of affected communities will meet in Belleville Wednesday to outline municipal ownership plans in an effort to break the strike that has paralyzed industry in the region.

Meantime, Gov. Horner's attempts to settle the trouble awaited the outcome of conversations between Electrical Brotherhood Union officials and officers of the power company. About 50 towns, some without gas and others handicapped by the lack of light and power, awaited developments.

Printers Are Injured In Massachusetts Tie-Up

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Mass., May 19.—Four non-union printers were injured, two so badly they were taken to a hospital, in a strike riot in front of the Republican plant tonight. One of the men at the hospital has a possible fractured skull, the other contusions and possible internal injuries.

The Republican and Morning Union were getting out a paper with a skeleton composing room force tonight.

Vandals early this morning obtained entrance to the composing room of the Union, one of the four papers affected by the strike of printers here, cut the belts on linotype machines, damaged some keyboards and destroyed some ads that had been set the night before. The two morning papers, the Republican and the Union, were preparing to continue publishing with the help of non-union men.

French Seamen End Walkout

By the Associated Press.

Le Havre, France, May 19.—A seamen's strike which had threatened to delay the maiden voyage to America of the French Line's mammoth new Normandie ended today.

The liner Champlain, whose crew quit May 15, beginning a walkout which spread quickly to the Normandie, sailed tonight for New York, with but 22 passengers and 500 tons of freight. It was delayed five days, during which stranded passengers and cargo were transferred to ships of other lines.

Two thousand seamen, in a boisterous meeting in a waterfront hall, agreed to return to their jobs after William Bertrand, minister of marine, promised that 50 per cent of the French Line's marine workers would get salaries throughout the year instead of being paid on a trip basis.

The strike aroused intense interest throughout the nation, as government officials pleaded with the seamen not to spoil the debut of France's hope for the Atlantic blue ribbon. The Normandie sails for New York May 29.

Between You and Me

Roosevelt May Go Foraging Among Left-Wingers On Trip West; Eccles Bill Irks Governors.

By Raymond Clapper

That summer trip which Mr. Roosevelt is planning to California will afford him an opportunity to turn his warming smile on the troublesome left wingers, who are growing more so daily.

Of course, the White House doesn't admit this is to be a political trip. Mr. Roosevelt's announced purpose is to visit the California-Pacific Exposition at San Diego and to dedicate Boulder (nee Hoover) Dam. That is a good reason for going. But the elder J. P. Morgan, who was canny in worldly ways, once said that a man usually had two reasons for doing a thing—a good reason and the real reason.

Discontented voters elected Mr. Roosevelt in 1932. He has reached the conclusion—if Democratic National Chairman Farley is right, and many White House actions indicate that he is—that his re-election will depend largely upon these same voters. The problem, as Roosevelt G. H. Q. has analyzed it, apparently is to convince the discontented forgotten men of 1932 that they have been remembered, that they are now contented or shortly will be if Mr. Roosevelt is permitted to carry on.

This does not mean at all that Mr. Roosevelt will attempt to outpromise Huey Long, Father Coughlin, Dr. Townsend or any of his other rival messiahs. Nor does it mean that he must match Upton Sinclair and raise him.

It does mean, however, that Mr. Roosevelt must convince those millions who are tempted by the glittering iridescence of the Kingfish, the mellow crooning of Father Coughlin, and the wishful economics of Upton Sinclair, who has returned to the soap box under his Pasadena fig tree, that these are false Messiahs and that if they really want butter on their bread they had best tie to Allah himself. He must convince them that he is the one and only original Pied Piper.

That is where Mr. Roosevelt shines. When Mr. Hoover was proclaiming proudly that he had fought to keep the country on the gold standard, Mr. Roosevelt promised "sound, but adequate currency." When the inflationists threatened him, Mr. Roosevelt smiled like the spider at the fly and suggested that they give him discretionary power to issue greenbacks, and receiving that authority, he promptly buried it. Once when Mr. Hoover was planning a speaking trip, he warned newspaper correspondents that if they suggested he had any political motives in mind, he would cancel the engagements. He felt degraded at having to make his eleventh-hour 1932 whirlwind campaign trip. Mr. Roosevelt, on the contrary, recognizes frankly that the Presidency is a political office and that a President has power only so long as he keeps a majority of the people with him. He will not scorn the followers of his rival Messiahs, but rather will attempt to win them over and convince them that his is the sounder program. And just as much fun!

Among the shouting messiahs the La Follette brothers are beginning to look tame, even old-fashioned. Not so long ago Senator Bob and Brother Phil, Governor of Wisconsin, were quite frankly asserting that Mr. Roosevelt was not far enough to the left, that he was too modest about public works expenditure. They organized their own Progressive Party last year. At the time it was widely proclaimed—by others—as the beginning of real third party menace to Roosevelt. But it has not so developed.

The La Follette brothers are keeping their own counsel. Distinctly they are having nothing to do with the Longs and Coughlins. Now in the first batch of works allotments the State of Wisconsin draws $100,000,000 for a balanced program of 140 projects expected to cost twice the initial allotment. Wisconsin is the first State to submit a rounded, balanced program. That might be sufficient reason for Wisconsin showing in the first money. Washington, however, which never accepts anything as a coincidence, insists on speculating whether the allotment is a reward for good behavior or insurance against the future.

Business interests fighting many features of the Administration program were crushed by the Senate passage of the Wagner labor disputes bill. They put the heat on against it, but finished with only 12 votes. Only eight Republicans stood up to be counted on the side of the employers. That vote broke the back of the business opposition to the Administration legislative program. The only real fight left is NRA and there, the Administration's trouble is political, much of it within the Democratic Party. Business as such is on the outside looking in at the Capitol now.

The United States Board of Tax Appeals which is hearing the Mellon tax case, is preparing to speed up a decision, hoping to have one by early autumn. The decision to work fast on this is the result of criticism over delay in deciding the case of Charles E. Mitchell, former head of the National City Bank. Testimony was closed a year ago. Board members ran into hard luck. Of the two members who worked on this case, one, Jed Adams, died a few months ago. The other, Chairman Van Fossen, has been tied up on the Mellon case. The board is disturbed by criticism over the Mitchell case delay.

Chief complaint against the board is that it is slow. On the other hand it does its work so thoroughly that 95 per cent of its decisions have stood up in the higher courts—a record that law courts all envy. The American Bar Association regards the Board of Tax Appeals, which is really an administrative court, as the model for its proposed consolidation of all administrative tribunals into one great administrative court which would handle cases involving customs, patents, I. C. C., and taxes.

Governors of Federal Reserve banks are not happy over the Eccles banking bill which would curb their autonomy. In past administrations it has sometimes been said that the heads of the Reserve banks—which are actually private banks owned by member banks—ran the Federal Reserve Board. At times governors of the New York Federal Reserve Bank have exercised great powers indirectly.

George Harrison, the present governor, is one of those who has been irked by the change at Washington since the Roosevelt Administration came in. A few days ago he read that the Federal Reserve Board had engaged not one, but two public relations advisers and planned to have one of them spend considerable time in New York where he would have a desk in the Federal Reserve Bank Building.

Harrison grabbed his telephone and called the Reserve Board here demanding to know what was going on in his bank. When he learned that the Reserve Board was engaging a literary assistant for itself and not for the bank, Harrison cooled off.

The Supreme Court's new building is almost finished. One associate justice was showing a friend through the new structure. After they entered the new court chamber, a vast hall walled by towering columns of pink marble, the eminent justice stood gazing silently at the grandeur. After a few moments he spoke:

"I was just thinking," he said slowly, "that when we put on our robes and march into this place we are going to look like nine little black cockroaches in the Temple of Karnak."

Albino Siren Unnerves Frogs; Contest of Hop Proves Flop

By the United Press.

New York, May 19.—'Twas ever thus—a woman was the cause of it all.

A pale, sleek creature she was, by name "Whisey," and by acclaim, the "Jean Harlow of all frogdom."

The rare Albino amphibian reigned today at the Mark Twain frog jumping derby and her very presence, in all her shimmering glory, seemed to unnerve even th lapingest of th 175 giant batrachians.

In a word, the jumping was not so hot.

But who could blame the frog athletes from Louisiana? The sight of the exotic New Yorker, Whitey, presiding over the event in her glass boudoir from the American Museum of Natural History, was enough to upset any doughty competitor.

The contest, sponsored by the Twain Centennial Committee, was patterned after the humorist's famous story of the notorious jumping frog of Calaveras County, Calif., in which the chief contender in the Angels Camp Derby was fed a load of buckshot by a rival trainer.

This was not the case in balmy Central Park this afternoon.

In the Manhattan manner, the sex appeal of the pallid lady frog was enough to play havoc with the spectacular event.

The winner, for instance, although he did better in the qualifying rounds on the greensward, won the leaping championship with a measly hop of 3½ feet.

His name was "Abbie Villaret," jockeyed by young Joseph Goldstein, of Union Settlement. Each of the competing frogs wore the colors—or a representative number—of a sponsoring boys' club.

The best jump of the day was credited to "Baby Blimp" who covered 14 feet in the three hops allowed each frog from the center of the circle. But he got lost in the semi-final shuffle, when several frogs lost their numbers and had to be replaced by "ringers."

Angels Camp, Calif., May 19 (U.P.). Zip, a light green frog boasting "million-dollar legs" and a penchant for aerial travel, won the 1935 Calaveras Jumping-Frog contest today over a field of 300 assorted croakers.

Second was Leaping Lightning, entered by Louis Robinson, also of Stockton, with a hop, skip and jump of 11 feet 7½ inches. Weegee, another Stockton product entered by Robert Gianelli hopped 11 feet 5 inches for third place; Greenback, owned by L. Teal, San Jose, was fourth with 11 feet 3 inches, and Pete, home town leaper entered by Ray Weimar, fifth with 10 feet 9 inches.

Runaway Romance Of Bigelows Collapses

Boston, May 19 (U.P.).—The runaway romance and marriage of Stephen Sohier Bigelow, 40, socially prominent Boston club man, and 23-year-old Mary McDevitt Bigelow, daughter of a deputy sheriff, is at an end.

Charging the Harvard graduate and World War ace pilot with cruelty and excessive drinking, Mrs. Bigelow has petitioned for a divorce.

Their marriage in New York in 1931 was Bigelow's second. While producing a play in London after the war he married the actress Anne Meredith, who divorced him in Paris for "indifference."

Supreme Court May Act Today On Farm Law

Schechter and Frazier-Lemke Cases Soon Due for Decisions.

By the Associated Press.

The fate of NRA fundamentals and a potential $16,000,000,000 in farm mortgages are involved in cases before the Supreme Court which some anxious Government observers believed might be decided today.

In the one case, the authority of the Federal Government to enforce codes, including their labor provisions, was at issue. Hinging on the other was the constitutionality of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium law.

As usual on Mondays, the court will meet today to announce decisions in one of only three opinion days remaining this session to deliver 19 decisions. Between the two big cases—NRA and the farm mortgage moratorium—official observers thougnt the latter more likely to receive the first ruling.

The NRA test arose from the conviction of Martin, Alex and Aaron Schecter, of the A. L. A. Schecter Poultry Corporation, Brooklyn, upon charges of violating the code for that business, and a general charge of conspiracy to violate the national industrial recovery act. Lower courts held the wage and hour limitations invalid.

Among issues presented to the high court for decision:

Was the authority given the President to approve or impose codes a proper delegation of a power vested in Congress by the Constitution?

Does the constitutional clause giving Congress authority to regulate interstate commerce, empower it to compel firms in business "affecting" interstate commerce, to adhere to the codes?

The Frazier-Lemke bill, enacted by filibustering congressional independents a few hours before the adjournment of the last Congress, was intended to alleviate the burdens of mortgage harrassed farmers.

It enabled them to obtain a court stay against foreclosure procedings, retain their property by payment of an annual rental fee and discharge the mortgage by payment of the appraised value of the land, regardless of the size of the mortgage.

500,000 Ready To Quit Mines

Setting of June Deadline Is Prod to Speed at Session Here.

By the Associated Press.

Negotiations on new wage and hour contracts for half a million soft coal miners will be renewed here today with threat of the greatest strike of New Deal days as a prod for speed.

Unless the new contracts are signed by June 16, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, says, not a miner will enter the pits the next morning.

The mine workers demand an increase from $5 to $5.50 in their basic daily pay and a cut from 35 to 30 hours in their work week.

Operators contend such contracts would ruin them and that the consequent increase in production costs would mean fresh inroads from competitive fuels into the coal market.

The picture is further complicated by the legislative situation. The operators are split into two camps over the Guffey coal stabilization bill, proposed by the mine workers to supplant the industry's NRA code. That bill would set up a "little NRA" for the coal industry and strengthen the present code's price-fixing provisions.

A large group of Northern operators and the mine workers say that strict price control is necessary to keep up miners' wages. Some large Southern operators have joined them. Most of the Southerners, however, want to keep their present code and have NRA extended another two years. Both groups say a ten-month extension would prove disastrous to the industry.

Without allowing themselves to be quoted, many operators say bituminous contract prices will have to be revised soon to meet lower spot prices unless the price structure is patched up. The union fears price competition may mean a refusal by the operators to sign new wage and hour contracts at all, with resulting wage slashes throughout the industry.

Operators favoring the Guffey bill contend little can be done about new wage and hour contracts until they know what will happen to that measure at the Capitol.

Balloonist's Ex-'Host' Will Wish Him Luck

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., May 19.—When Capt. Orvil Anderson takes his stratosphere balloon aloft at Rapid City, S. Dak., next month, a Princess Anne physician will wish him luck—and won't remind him of the Army dirigible that Anderson landed in a poorhouse wheatfield 14 years ago.

Dr. Harry M. Lankford keeps three mementos of the crash which wrecked the blimp in 1921—a tattered silk flag, a tin can and a scribbled message.

They symbolize, he explains, the friendship which sprang up after Anderson "dropped in" and stayed as a guest while ground crews salvaged the ship.

The scribbled mesage was tossed overboard in the can to a farmer and asked that he grab the trailing ground rope.

Hungry Sunday Rules in Illinois As Relief Fails

Crisis Is Expected to End Tomorrow in Passage of Sales Levy.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 19.—It was "foodless" Sunday for thousands in Illinois today, as the grim race between widespread hunger and dissolution of the relief crisis became, it was hoped, a matter of hours.

Hunger gained when last supplies of thousands of families in the metropolis and downstate were consumed.

But authorities counted on Tuesday to be the goal-post in the contest—and attempted to gather ultimate resources to stave off starvation until then.

Legislature to Meet.

On that day the Legislature reconvenes for a fifth vote in the House of Representatives on the proposal of Gov. Henry Horner to adopt the 3 per cent sales tax to raise Illinois' share of the cost of feeding its jobless.

Today, Gov. Horner and Administration leaders united in a hopeful effort to win adoption of the measure, the Governor broadcasting an appeal for public support as his trump card against Republican opposition. A compromise offered last week shortening the period of the proposed law was expected to smooth its legislative course.

In Chicago and vicinity nearly half a million indigents exhausted food handouts or husbanded sufficient only to eke out scanty meals until Tuesday. Many downstate communities were in a similar plight.

Tuesday Is Deadline.

Tuesday was generally the final day on which groceries bought with the bottom $1,200,000 scraped together by the now inactive State relief commission could be expected to last for most.

But local authorities endeavored to alleviate the most serious cases from their own funds.

"No one must starve," was the declaration of many township and private organizations.

Cook County's commissioners called a meeting tomorrow to hear an authoritative statement on the condition of its neediest. For genuine suffering, Commissioner Peter M. Kelly said, the board would appropriate funds, "right or wrong."

15,982 Families Cut From Relief in N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 19.—The Emergency Relief Bureau disclosed today that 15,982 families were dropped from the city's relief rolls during April, 3,655 of them because special investigators discovered concealed resources. The actual number of families on relief however, rose.

Largely because the applicants for relief during April were found to be eligible in greater proportion than during previous months, the total on relief rose last month to 239,332 families, as compared with 237,759 in March, the report states.

Bolton, G. O. P., Fears New Deal Is Frankenstein

Ohio Representative in Air Address Concerned for 'Ship of State.'

By the Associated Press.

Representative Bolton, Ohio Republican, said last night that "a number of us" fear the "new ship of State" being constructed by New Dealers may prove "a Frankenstein that will destroy our system of government."

The co-chairman of the Republican senatorial and congressional campaign committee told a radio audience "the New Dealers are building something undoubtedly" but that many felt "the monster will not turn out to be a new and more trustworthy ship of State."

Using President Roosevelt's own comparison of the task of creating a national welfare program to the building of a ship, Bolton said:

"A great ship is not built experimentally—through a process of trial and error like the New Deal ship. The builder does not announce he is building a new ship in accordance with a new and untried theory of shipbuilding. * * *

"Many of us believe the ship of Washington and Jefferson and the other master builders is still the best ship afloat. We agree the superstructure should be remodeled to meet the needs of changed conditions. But in the absence of specific and understandable plans for the building of a better ship, we prefer to stay aboard the one we have, because we believe its keel and hull are safe and sound."

Bolton charged that a "false type of democratic government—the bureaucratic type—was created to take care of an emergency" and contended it was "high time that it should demonstrate its worth." He said the people had been patient "under the control of the most gigantic, most meddlesome and most expensive aggregation of bureaucrats of all time."

9 Canal Zone Planes End "Goodwill" Tour

Cristobal, Canal Zone, May 19 (AP).—Nine United States Army planes returned today from a week-long goodwill flight about Central America.

League Council Meets to Study AbyssinianRow

Franco-Russ Treaty and Chaco War Also on Body's Agenda.

By the United Press.

Geneva, May 19.—Delegates arriving tonight for the League of Nations Council session opening tomorrow hoped a peaceful solution could be found for the Italian-Abyssinian crisis.

The border dispute will be one of the major issues before the council. The council dodged the Abyssinian appeal in January and April, but the question now is on its agenda for action.

Italy opposes interference by the council, demanded by Abyssinia—and some middle course may be sought.

Other major points on the program of this vital session are:

1. Settlement of the Gran Chaco border war between Paraguay and Bolivia in South America.

2. Approval of a northeastern European pact which France and Russia propose to substitute for the initial idea of an Eastern Locarno.

3. Details of the Danubian pact, to be signed at Rome next month.

4. Discussion of a Mediterranean pact on economic and political issues facing nations bordering that sea.

Push Eastern Accord.

The Franco-Soviet communique at Moscow left no doubt but that the French and Russians intend to push an accord embracing all nations originally invited to join the eastern European security accord of mutual assistance.

These are France, Russia, Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia and the three Baltic States, Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia.

The new pact will omit the mutual armed assistance provisions which were rejected by Germany and Poland in the original Eastern pact suggestions. It will be based on promise of nonaggression, consultation in case of trouble, and withholding assistance from aggressors.

Delegates from central European countries confirm reports that the Danubian pact has encountered serious obstacles. The accord is designed to strengthen Austrian independene and reinforce the status quo in the Danubian Basin. Friction between Yugoslavia and Hungary was considered one of the chief obstacles, but it was hoped the council could close this quarrel at its forthcoming session.

By the United Press.

London, May 19. — The Abyssinian foreign minister was quoted in an Addis Ababa dispath to the Sunday Times today as asserting "the league alone stands between us and war."

"The difficulties in the league's task are patent to us," he said, "and we can be relied upon not to increase them.

"There is no time to lose. If the council fails to secure Italy's agreement on comprehensive arbitration, the outlook will be very black."

He said Italy had 80,000 men and 1,000 airplanes on Abyssinia's frontiers, and that "further troops are arriving at the rate of 10,000 a month."

"Her words are not words of peace."

Leaders Will Urge NRA Extension

that result is to extend for two years the present act."

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, first head of the NRA, will enter the campaign for two-year extension in a radio talk from New York at 7:30 p. m. today.

Meanwhile, virtually every discussion and every issue hinged on the decision of the Supreme Court in the Schechter case which may come today. The case involves the entire question of constitutionality of the NRA. If the court holds against the law or part of it, the extension program may have to be scrapped and NRA abandoned, or a fresh start made. A decision favorable to the law would have tremendous influence in favor of extension, although a group of irreconcilables in the Senate are determined to permit it to go no further than the provisions of the Clark resolution.

The present law expires June 16.

Jane Addams, Ill, Fights for Life

tired physicially, but friends reported her in excellent spirits.

Her work with the league for peace and freedom, which campaigned for disarmament and peace during and after World War, won her the Nobel Prize n 1931, whch she shared with Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University.

Yesterday's operation, to correct abdominal adhesions, was believed the result of another operation she underwent in 1931. It was decided upon suddenly after other treatment failed to relieve symptoms.

News of Miss Addams' illness was a shock to immigrant residents of Halstead and Polk streets, where she built her renowned Hull House, a haven for the foreign-born. Hull House became a model for settlement houses the country over. Italian women of the teeming neighborhood, whose squalor Miss Addams had done much to alleviate, called at the house where the "Ladies of God" live.

Miss Addams has been troubled by illness since childhood, but few suspected it from her appearance, which, in spite of her dimunitive stature and gentle ways, gave one the impression of towering strength. Her sparkling humor aided her through much physical pain.

In recent years she has been unable to work so hard, but those to whom she delegated authority when she quit residence at Hull House has drawn inspiration from her cou-

Pilot, Ill, Escapes Death in Plane

Soviets to Build 3 Giant Planes Of Gorky Type

Order Disobeyed.

Orders had been issued never to stunt in the vicinity of the Moscow Airdrome, said Pravda. It termed stunters, "air hoodlums" and called for enforcement of orders against stunting.

An official explanation of the accident was that the Gorky broke up because the small plane loosened a wing, throwing a sudden strain on all other parts when the huge craft went into a dive.

Pravda declared the Soviet was in a position to construct planes of the type of the Maxim Gorky in large numbers any time it wished.

"We have other powerful air dreadnaughts," it said. "The strength of aviation is not gauged by one plane alone. Furthermore, if it is considered necessary our country is able in a very short time to construct as many planes of the Gorky type as it desires."

Explosion Denied.

It repeated official denials of reports there was an explosion aboard and said "otherwise the Maxim Gorky would have fallen in flames and the number of the victims might have been much greater." (All aboard the Maxim Gorky were killed, including several women and children, and the paper apparently referred to the possibility the plane might have spread fire in the village.)

Mikaeffe, one of the two pilots to perish in the disaster, never before in his long career had a serious accident. He was a veteran of the World War and wore a Lenin decoration, the highest award in the Soviet Union.

Once the pilot saved the life of a woman marooned in a settlement in a northern province with both legs frozen by flying her to a city for medical attention.

Among passengers on the Gorky who died were Maria Dimitrova, crack woman mechanic of the Central Aerodynamic Institute, whose employes were being given a holiday ride in recognition of meritorious work.

The wife of the institute's business manager also was killed, and Alexander Orloff, one of the plant's highest rating engineers.

An automobilist, who was passing the village of Socol when the accident occurred, said today Blagin's plane made two loops and was coming out of the second when it struck the wing of the Gorky near the point where it joined the fuselage.

"The Gorky trembled and lost altitude sharply," he said. "The pilot evidently had the presence of mind to dump the gasoline tanks. At any rate, gasoline poured down from the stricken machine. It literally rained gasoline over the village of log cottages.

"The small plane stuck for a moment in the Gorky's wing and then fell away. The whole wing of the larger ship broke off. The Gorky slipped to the other side and then went into a nose dive.

"There may have been an explosion, but if so, I think it was limited to this compartment and must have been in the motion-picture apparatus.

Tail Section Buckles.

"The whole tail part of the fuselage then buckled, came off and fell separately from the rest of the plane. I saw none of the victims thrown from the plane into the air as was asserted in some reports."

Commander Ladin, of the Maxim Gorky propaganda air squadron promised today, in a speech at a memorial meeting of the squadron at the Moscow airport, that a new machine would be built to replace the Gorky.

Among the numerous planes of the squadron, which are devoted to spreading Bolshevik propaganda within the Soviet Union is the giant Ant 14, which succeeded to the Gorky's honors as the largest Soviet plane.

Its pilot, Chulkoff, was follownig the Gorky in the air at the time of the disaster, with 35 excursionists aboard his ship, and was an eyewitness to the crash.

He told the squadron that the airport which borders the village of Socol was suddenly overrun with people rushing to the scene of the disaster. He said he had to take his shock-stricken passengers for an extra quarter hour's ride until the field was cleared.

Chief Kachoff, of the civil air fleet, issued a statement, blaming the accident on Blagin's "air hoodlumism" and asserting stricter discipline must be established among civil aviators.

'Skytrain' Arrives at Miami, Finishing Round Trp to Cuba

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., May 19.—An airplane and two gliders, flying in from Havana, landed here today to complete the round-trip flight of the world's first international skytrain.

The air innovation brought out a crowd of 6,000 at Municipal Airport, where the motorless craft, each carrying mail pouches, were detached from the powered unit for a landing.

After swaying in cross-winds over the Florida Keys, the last unit landed at 3:05 p. m., 5 minutes after the first glider settled on the field. The powered plane was last to land.

The skytrain pulled out of Havana's Airdrome de National at 9:05 a. m., while soldiers held back throngs of spectators out to witness the first glider takeoff on Cuban soil.

The airtrain, buffeted by winds over the Gulf of Mexico, averaged around 40 miles an hour on the 90-mile flight to the United States, landing at Key West at 11:40 a. m. It was in the air again at 12:30 p. m., en route to Miami, 160 miles across the Keys, three-fourths of the flight being over water.

Elwood Kien, of New York, piloted the plane, powered by a 250-horsepower Eagle Rock motor. In the trailing gliders were Jack O'Meara, pioneer skytrain glider pilot, and E. Paul du Pont, jr., of Wilmington, Del.

Each glider carried 48 pounds of mail, the letters bearing special stamps issued by the Cuban government commemorating the death of an independence leader and the first airplane flight between Miami and Havana 22 years ago today.

Augustin Parla, now attached to the department of state in Havana, made the first flight May 19, 1913.

O'Meara, du Pont and Kien will ship the gliders to Elmira, N. Y., in a few days for the annual meeting of the Glider Association. Demonstrations will be given there.

All equipment will be shipped back to Miami in July for resumption of experimental work.

Simple Funeral Set in England For Lawrence

pulse had almost gone and his breathing was weak. Injections were given in a futile effort to revive him.

His brother, A. W. Lawrence, and a number of the dying man's close friends remained at the hospital throughout the night, hoping that there might come an encouraging turn. Shortly after 7 a. m. artificial respiration was tried, but the effort was hopeless and the end came soon afterward.

In accordance with the simplicity and selflessness of his life, Lawrence's funeral will be attended only by a few intimate friends and there will be nothing of the pomp which might have been accorded the World War hero.

Lawrence, who died as plain "T. E. Shaw," a former enlisted man of the royal air force, will be buried near his country cottage.

His grief-stricken brother made the dead man's wishes known in a note to close friends this morning.

"In accordance with his own wishes and those of his family, t is desired that no flowers be sent and that only a few intimate friends attend the funeral, which will be very simple," said the note.

The body of Lawrence, wrapped in a union jack, was taken from the hospital to a little slate-roof mortuary 100 yards away. Two hospital orderlies who had watched over Lawrence since he was brought into the military camp reverently lifted the body from the ambulance and placed it in the mortuary chapel.

There, in simple state before the altar on which was a small crucifix, "Lawrence of Arabia" lay waiting for the funeral in the village church at Moreton, close to the cottage to which he had retired recently from military service.

Many Rumors on Actions.

Lawrence's self-imposed obscurity—he shunned publicity even more than such celebrities as Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Greta Garbo—led to many weird and often absurd rumors.

One of these, described as "utter nonsense" by his brother, was that Lawrence was fatally injured by assassins because of important war secrets held by him.

"He was not connected with any government work," A. W. Lawrence said.

A gentle drizzle or rain fell this afternoon as long lines of humble country folk stood in silence with bared heads, a waiting their turn to pray at the coffin.

Churchill in Eulogy.

The rumors that Lawrence, on whose head the Turks put a price of $100,000, was still engaged as a British secret agent to the last, were discounted, but his importance as a military strategist was emphasized in a tribute by his close friend, Winston Churchill, who said:

"In Col. Lawrence we have lost one of the greatest beings of our time. I had hoped to see him emerge from his retirement to take a commanding part in facing the dangers which now threaten the country.

"No such blow has befallen the empire for many years as his untimely death. The personal sorrow of all who knew him is deepened by national impoverishment."

Sir Philip Sassoon, war hero and later undersecretary of air, said "his death means not only a great loss to literature, but also to the royal air force, for which he did so much."

Lady Astor Voices Britain's Mourning

By the United Press.

London, May 19.—Lady Astor, American-born membep of Parliament, one of Col. T. E. Lawrence's closest friends, expressed Britain's mourning today.

"It is a great loss to England and the world. He was one of the most brilliant brains that ever lived, combining great gifts of military leadership with literary genius and the utmost simplicity."

Investment Bankers Find Business Better

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 19 (AP).—The industrial securities committee of the Investment Bankers Association of America today said in an interim report that "business generally throughout the country has improved" and that "prospects for further improvement are good."

The committee recommended that a system of "sound sinking fund requirements" be worked out to prevent the relaxing of safety standards in the issuance of new securities.

Stoll Kidnaper Hunted in D. C. By U. S. Agents

Police Aid Is Arrested by Mistake in Ball Park, Search Here.

Federal agents searching Griffith Stadium yesterday for the kidnaper of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll last year in Louisville, Ky., arrested Edwin Dove, secretary to Police Inspector Frank S. W. Burke.

The two agents were cruising the stands during the ball game, armed with pictures of Thomas H. Robinson, jr., whom they believed to be in Washington. He is known to be a baseball fan. He is also known to masquerade as a woman at times, and they were not quite sure in what guise they might see him.

Robinson has been sought since last October as the man who entered Mrs. Stoll's home, beat her up, gagged her maid and kidnaped her. A $50,000 ransom was paid for her release and she returned home safely.

Searching the stands, one of the agents saw Dove, a slender young man with the same dark hair, heavy eyebrows and wide mouth which distinguish Robinson, and with same quiet demeanor. They lined up on each side of him.

"Come Quietly."

"We want to talk to you, friend," one of them said. "We're Federal men. Come along quietly."

"What's all this about?" Dove asked.

"Never mind. We'll talk to you at the station. Make it quiet," was the answer.

Five minutes later they were in a taxicab headed for the Second Precinct station house. One of the agents said, with considerable satisfaction:

"We've been looking for you a long time, Robinson. Did you think you'd get away from us?"

"My name is not Robinson," Dove replied. "I am Edwin Dove, civilian employe of the Police Department and secretary of Inspector Frank S. W. Burke."

Dove was not known at the Second Precinct and his protests were ignored until he had produced letters bearing his name. Even then he was held for a while until a police official could identify him. Inspector Burke was not available. Finally, precinct police got Lieut. Cy Embrey, night chief of detectives.

"Have you got a man named Dove?" the agent asked.

"Yes."

"Describe him for us," the agent requested.

Embrey described him and the chagrined agent hung up. Both apologized to Dove and the three left for the ball game again—together.

Dove, who is 26, is described by his associates as a quiet, efficient man, who is so unobtrusive that he is almost unknown outside headquarters.

The hunt for Robinson has been prosecuted intensely since last October, when he collected the $50,000 ransom money, disappeared and was reported simultaneously in a dozen places. Only yesterday a man was arrested in Indianapolis who was thought to be Robinson. That, too, was an error.

The department has been moving the center of the hunt gradually eastward and agents yesterday were combing Griffith Stadium in the hope that he might risk his freedom for a chance to see his favorite sport.

The young kidnaper, who once was committed to an insane asylum, and whose father and mother both were indicted at Louisville for complicity in the kidnaping, has eclipsed even the most practiced criminals in his ability not only to elude police and Federal agents, but to leave only the faintest and most doubtful traces of a trail.

Since his disappearance last October he has never been positively located.

Goering, Laval Discuss Pacts Of Mutual Aid

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 19.—French dispatches from Berlin indicated tonight that France's foreign minister, Pierre Laval, told Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering at Krakow that an international set-up of mutual assistance pacts, such as the new Franco-Russian accord, is still open to Germany.

Laval refused, however, the dispatches indicated, to negotiate privately with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler.

Members of Laval's party were quoted as saying that the foreign minister tried to convince the German minister of air that France's "collective security" policy has not changed and that her recent diplomatic activity has not threatened anyone.

This activity included the Franco-Russian mutual assistance pact and recent visits of French statesmen to Moscow and Warsaw.

France's intentions to remain faithful to her alliances and friendships were reported to have been conveyed to Goering with the remark that France is ready to enter negotiations with any nation, but only "within an international framework."

This remark presumably meant that any such negotiations would be undertaken only after such parleys as the coming Danubian conference or at Geneva.

Laval was understood to have said that he considers no results would come from private conversations "outside an international framework."

Goering was described as seeking the interview with Laval, after attending the funeral of Poland's Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, to learn French views at first hand.

French dispatches said he confirmed Germany's attitude "as previously defined by Hitler."

Chaloner Critically Ill At Virginia Hospital

Charlottesville, Va., May 19 (AP).—The condition of John Armstrong Chaloner, eccentric author, artist, and former husband of Princess Emilie Rives Troubetzkoy, became critical at University Hospital here today, his attendants said.

Chaloner, suffering from an abdominal malady, who has been under medical care for more than a year, slightly over a month ago entered the hospital for closer care. Although his condition has been serious no immediate danger has been seen. Today's announcement, however, was taken by his friends here to mean that he was worse.

Gov. LaFollette Sees Day Unripe For Third Party

With the 'Messiahs'

Gov. La Follette of Wisconsin told the Progressives gathered on the party's birthday they had "laid the corner stone for the realignment of American politics." From New York Mayor LaGuardia urged support of a plan to solve present distress.

Senator Gerald Nye pictured Uncle Sam "taken for a ride" by the munitions makers, in an address at Terre Haute, Ind.

In Connecticut, Gov. Talmadge of Georgia joined in a tribute to Capt Stevens and Moses Rogers, pioneer sailors.

By the Associated Press.

Fond du Lac, Wis., May 19.—Gov. Philip F. La Follette today told thousands of Wisconsin Progressives gathered in a great show of strength on their party's first birthday that they had "laid the corner stone for the realignment in American politics," but indicated that the time was not yet ripe for a national third party.

The Governor declared that any moves toward expansion of the Progressive organization should be taken "step by step," not in "any dramatic, flag-waving method."

An enthusiastic throng overran the town, festooned in flags and buntings as party members from all over the State prepared to witness cutting of a huge birthday cake.

Originally planned as an occasion for a gathering of liberals from over the Nation, many national figures who had been bid to the party jubilation were unable to attend because of the press of business in Washington. These included United States Senator Robert La Follette, jr., and Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, who spoke to the assemblage by radio.

The New York Mayor called on Progressives of the country to unite in support of a "real honest-to-goodness platform that will have the courage to state in plain language an economic plan that will solve our present distress."

"We have been snared too many times," he said, adding that "the best Progressive thought" should outline a social and economic program behind which the movement could gather its strength.

"The responsibility of the Progressives," LaGuardia said, "will be far greater in the presidential election of 1936 than ever before in the history of this country.

Nye Says U. S. Defense Is Merely a 'Racket'

By the Associated Press.

Terre Haute, Ind., May 19.—A picture of Uncle Sam "taken for a ride" by national defense "racketeers" was drawn today by Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, in a speech here today condemning war profits.

The youngish chairman of the Senate Munitions Committee took a special thrust at the $460,000,000 naval appropriations bill, which is the Senate's business tomorrow. His address was before a meeting arranged by the local ministerial association.

The measure, Nye said, "is the largest ever known in peace time" and comes on the heels of an Army supply bill setting a peace-time record. Along with these, he said, is pending a maritime bill, "which is only another name for ship subsidy, which calls for the availability of millions for building of a merchant marine."

"In each of these three cases," Nye asserted, "the call for support is invariably in the name of national defense. The facts are that national defense has become a racket for profit and Uncle Sam is being taken for a ride by racketeers who are profiting from these mad national defense races.

"No nation on earth is spending as much getting ready for more war as are we. Our percentage of increased appropriation in the name of national defense has been far beyond that of any other nation since the year preceding the World War.'

As a remedy, Nye proposed enactment of legislation such as has been drafted by his munitions committee for taking profits out of war.

He also urged adoption of neutrality measures for preventing American money or munitions from going into a war zone and to "abdandon the necessity of protecting Americans who insist upon going into the war zones."

"Godless Men" Enemies Of U. S., Says Coughlin

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 9.—The Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin told students assembled from 65 Catholic institutions here today for a convocation that "a citizen who merely believes and does not live his life according to his belief is a dangerous, unpatriotic citizen."

Eight thousand students heard the militant radio priest speak on "religion as the basis of patriotism," as they met to reaffirm their religious principles and pledge loyalty to their country.

"Without a true religion and its vigorous practice by the citizens of a state," Father Coughlin said, "it is illogical to expect that there can be a deep-rooted patriotism within that state. The ruins of the empires and kingdoms which have perished is eloquent testimony of the truth that patriotism can not endure without religion."

Swinging his remarks to bear upon the principles of his national union for social justice, Father Coughlin said:

"Real patriotism flourishes where the common good is preferred to the class good. Real patriotism is prepared to sacrifice even life itself in order to repel the enemies from without who would invade the homeland, and to expel enemies from within who desecrate it by substituting for God's laws the errors of Goodless men."

Talmadge Pays Tribute To Steamship's Pioneers

By the Associated Press.

New London, Conn., May 19.—Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, visiting New England for the first time, joined with Gov. Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut here today in paying tribute to two ancient mariners, Capts. Stevens and Moses Rogers of the S. S. Savannah, the first ship to cross the Atlantic Ocean propelled by steam.

The ceremonies were in connection with National Maritime Day and the State's tercentenary celebration. More than 300 persons circled the final resting place of Capt. Stevens Rogers in a cemetery here.

Former Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers of Connecticut read a message of "best wishes and congratulations" from Mayor Thomas Gamble and the aldermen of the city of Savannah, Ga., to Mayor Cornelius D. Twomey of this city.

The crossing of the Atlantic by the Savannah, a little Georgia-owned craft, which was manned mainly by a New London crew, more than a century ago was hailed by Gov. Talmadge as "an epochal voyage" which ushered in "a new era in world shipping from which all civilization has ever since benefited."

The American Messiahs

and the following day a messenger carried them to Long's desk in the Senate. Then, after the manner of Senator Borah, Huey began to dress up his speeches with appropriate quotations from these haphazard authors, interspersed freely with quotations from the Bible. In particular, he seized on Adams' phrase, "The American dream," and has used it pitilessly ever since. In fact, his speech in the Senate, shortly after he acquired his 2-foot shelf, was entitled "The Doom of America's Dream."

It is a matter of record that Long's share-our-wealth movement and program for free popular higher education were not born of the depression and can not be dismissed as the insincere opportunism of an irresponsible demagogue. In "Every Man a King," he quotes a letter which appeared in the New Orleans Item on March 1, 1918, contributed by Huey P. Long at the age of 24:

Thinks Wealth Should Be More Evenly Distributed

The Editor of the Item:

A conservative estimate is that about 65 or 70 per cent of the entire wealth of the United States is owned by 2 per cent of the people. Sixty-eight per cent of the whole people living in the United States owns but 2 per cent of its wealth. From the years 1890 to 1910, the wealth of this Nation trebled, yet the masses owned less in 1910 than they did in 1890 and a greater per cent of the people lived in mortgaged and rented homes in 1900 than in 1890, and more lived in rented and mortgaged homes in 1910 than in 1900. Reports from the Committee on Industrial Relations, appointed by the President, showed that wealth is fast concentrating in the hands of the few.

But the greatest cause for industrial unrest is that of education. Authorities on education tell us that 80 out of every 100 people in the United States never enter high school; 690 out of every 1,000 never finish the fourth grade in school. Does such a condition give the ordinary man his proper return of the Nation's prosperity? What do you think of such a game of life, so brutally and cruelly unfair, with the dice so loaded that the child of today must enter it with only 14 chances out of 1,000 in his favor of getting a college education with 968 chances against his securing the lucky draw? How can this Nation prosper with the ordinary child having only 20 chances in 1,000 of securing the first part of the game?

This is the condition. North, East, South and West; with wealth concentrating, classes becoming defined, there is not the opportunity for Christian uplift and education and can not be until there is more economic reform. This is the problem that the good people of this country must consider.

HUEY P. LONG.

Long is a demagogue, no doubt, as well as a slick politician, but he has been making the same speech for 17 years. He can fairly claim to have been consistent in advocating these fundamental issues, which did not become visible to others of our leading statesmen until the depression was biting deep into an unsound economic structure.

His program, as it stands today, has been elaborated until it consists of seven points with an educational rider:

1. To limit poverty and share the wealth, so that every family shall own property worth at least $5,000, free of debt.

2. To limit private fortunes to a few million dollars, so as to make this possible.

3. To pay old-age pensions of $30 per month to persons over 60 years of age, subject to suitable income, property and labor qualifications.

4. To prevent industrial overproduction by limiting hours of work.

5. To balance agricultural production, "according to the laws of God."

6. To care for the war veterans.

7. To support the Government by taxation on big fortunes, and to use agricultural surpluses for crop holidays which will support public works.

Educational rider: The Government to assume the cost of college, professional and vocational education for all students.

This program coincides pretty accurately with the aspirations and interests of the common man and, if accepted as sincere and feasible, is calculated to muster an enormous volume of popular support for the Kingfish. His educational amendment has also aroused the interest of the white-collar groups. Last year 90 per cent of Long's mail consisted of letters written in pencil on rough note paper. Less than 5 per cent was typewritten on printed or engraved letter heads. During the first quarter of 1935, after his national radio broadcasts, the percentage of typewritten letters jumped to 27 per cent.

Neither Huey nor anyone else knows whether this new stratum he has tapped represents wavering Roosevelt strength, but, assuming Roosevelt's backing to have come from the middle and professional classes, it presumably does indicate a possible secession from the disappointed "protest votes" of 1932. A large percentage of Long's better-class mail now comes from lawyers, architects, engineers, and school teachers. He attributes this partly to the educational phase of his program, which he recently began to push. His secretaries claim that his followers include two New York millionaires and one wealthy man from Detroit, and that this trio have promised to give him all the financial aid he needs. One of them, according to Long's staff, feels really penitent about owning so much money, while the other two hope to forestall a revolution by adopting Long's capital levy as a road to the redistribution of wealth. After all, Huey's plan allows a man to own up to $5,000,000, which is not so trifling a sum.

When the warm weather came in, one of the "American Messiahs" summoned the press and photographers to his office, and there he posed in all his sartorial elegance.

His Correspondence Comes From Every State

The Long correspondence comes from every State, Hawaii, Alaska and the Philippines, and his staff asserts that the movement is spreading into Canada, with the organization of 17 Share-Our-Wealth Clubs in the single province of Ontario, and others scattered from coast to coast. There are now Share-Our-Wealth Clubs in every State of the Union, and Long's files of February 1, 1935, showed a total of 27,431 clubs, while his staff claim to have the names and addresses of 7,682,768 members on file, the number having more than doubled since November, 1934. Long's staff attribute this phenomenal rise in membership to Huey's radio broadcasts in January, February and March of this year. It can be granted that such a membership is essentially hollow and will not hold up under pressure, but merely considered as a mailing list it is formidable electioneering.

The method of organization is simplicity itself. One reason for the large membership is the lack of dues. If you write to Long on any subject under the sun, he will send you a circular on the Share-Our-Wealth movement. It contains a coupon with spaces for the names and addresses of the officers of a local club. You proceed to fill in the blanks and to add the names and addresses of your members from time to time. This makes you head of a club and you get your Long literature regularly, as fast as it is reprinted from "The Congressional Record" for distribution under the Senator's frank. Each club gets one or more copies of each new piece of Long literature, which the club's president is supposed to circulate among all of his members. The club's officers are also urged to hold regular meetings to spread the gospel. There is a charming irony in this picture of Huey Long making Big Jim Farley, Roosevelt's political Moltke, distribute free for nothing Long's anti-Roosevelt organization mail.

In addition to this, the Long forces have a national publication, The American Progress, paper which comes out once a month, the successor to Long's Louisiana Progress which ceased publication two years ago. The American Progress is published in Louisiana, but is printed in Meridian, Mississippi, the nearest press that has union labor, according to Long's crowd. At any rate, The Meridian Star is not anti-Long, as are most of the Louisiana papers, and The American Progress claims a paid circulation of over 275,000 copies. There is also an element of irony in Long's using Mississippi—the home of Huey's enemy, Pat Harrison—as a base of journalistic operations against Pat and everything for which Pat stands. As a matter of fact the distribution of Long's Share-Our-Wealth Clubs suggests that his movement is still fundamentally regional. Louisiana naturally contains the largest number of Long clubs; next in numerical importance are Arkansas, Mississippi, California (the "joiner" State), New York (the State with the largest population) and Minnesota (back-log of the Farmer-Labor movement).

Offices Are Busiest On Capitol Hill

As a result of this far-flung campaign Huey's offices on the first floor of the Senate office building are the busiest on Capitol Hill. Literature, filing cases, stacks of letters, are piled everywhere. The telephone rings constantly. The ante-room is thronged with big shots and visiting firemen anxious to see the Kingfish. Once a week, on the average, for the last several months, Huey has had to get a new filing case, for letters or for card-indices of his supporters. After Hugh Johnson's vitriolic radio attack on him and Father Coughlin, Long had to increase his stenographic and clerical staff to 21 on the day shift and 14 on the night shift, and his private secretary, Earle J. Christenberry, was brought close to a nervous breakdown.

A sardonic note was struck in the Long office this winter when two young men, apparently of independent wealth, who said that they were Harvard graduates, turned up in New Orleans and offered their services to the Kingfish, free of charge. They traveled back to the Capital with him, but Christenberry, who had heard stories about Hitler and also about Harvard men, gave them the fishy eye and they dropped out of sight. This incident was the origin of a story about Huey's "brain trust." Christenberry, who ranks as an able executive in his own right, claims that he has a "contract" with the Kingfish, under which he has complete control over Huey's secretarial and clerical staff and assumes responsibility for all of Long's business affairs. He is a former New Orleans advertising man, who has handled a good deal of business for Huey and for various business enterprises associated with Long. In its rather Medicean efforts to embarrass the Kingfish, the Federal Government tried to "get" Christenberry for violation of the income tax law, but failed to secure an indictment.

Friends of the Roosevelt Administration view its "income tax crusade" against Huey with some uneasiness. There is a suggestion of political persecution about it which does not go down too smoothly, even with those to whom the Kingfish is anathema. This Federal drive against Huey and his followers is the most intensive, according to appearances, of any undertaken by the Internal Revenue Bureau, with the possible exception of that against Al Capone and his merry men. So far, the drive has netted eight indictments, two of them against key men in the Long organization: Seymour Weiss, head of the Hotel Roosevelt Corporation in New Orleans and president of the New Orleans Dock Board, and Abe Shushan, a wholesale dry goods merchant who is also president of the Levee Board. Both of these official positions are unpaid. Other indictments have been brought against one pro-Long State Senator and one pro-Long State Representative—uncle and nephew, respectively—and against four contractors, three of whom are brothers. Long's people claim that every man in Huey's organization, including those under indictment, has been offered immunity if he would tell about his transactions with Long. Up to the end of April, 1935, not one had accepted the offer.

What is back of this? According to the Long crowd, it is an attempt to hamstring Huey's campaign-fund operations. They boast that they keep no records of their campaign collections and that all bills have been paid in cash, for the last six years if not longer. The reason they give for this practice is that the Louisiana banks are anti-Huey and that if the Kingfish kept his political funds in the form of bank accounts they might be tied up by some sort of court action. They do not attempt to conceal the fact that the Long machine levies toll from all employes of the State government and from all who have benefited from the Long regime. Since Louisiana's laws do not require political organizations to render an accounting, there is less need of concealment of these normal political practices in Louisiana than in most of the other States. Under these circumstances, it is difficult to discriminate between personal income and the money collected and spent for political purposes.

Is Long a grafter? Obviously such is the inference from the Governments' drive against his income. Yet every political machine has to maintain itself by money and gets it by levying on its own rank and file and on individuals and businesses which have benefited from the policies of the machine or hope to do so. It is an old American custom. According to all accounts, the Long machine levies the usual tolls, although until recently it was cut off from the lucrative political revenue in New Orleans and although it can not expect contributions from the Standard Oil or some of the other big business interests in the State, except by blackjack methods. It can also be assumed that the Kingfish's outfit contains about as many personal grafters as is customary in well-organized local political machines.

Power in Politics, Not Money, His Goal

But all this is far from making Long a grafter himself. According to the shrewdest observers, Long has little interest in money except to spend it advancing his political fortunes. His lust is for political power, not for money power or personal luxury. He needed money for his campaigns in Louisiana and his expenses mount every week in his campaign for the Presidency. And certainly Huey doesn't draw much of a line between himself and his party in Louisiana. Neither does anyone else. He spends money freely, but in response to a question from a fellow Senator he recently said that his 1934 income was about $25,000—the amount in excess of his Senate salary coming from his work as a lawyer.

The Federal agents who have been going around indicting and trying to indict his friends suspect, of course, that the unreported income that they have found was political money passed on to Huey. But the Kingfish really is gambling for the biggest stake in the country, if not in the world—the Presidency of the United States. If he had been in politics for money, there are plenty of dignified precedents which suggest that an orator of his ability and legal acumen could have made a fortune by representing wealthy corporations. His own brief interlude as a political lawyer in Shreveport showed he could pile up the shekels as suavely as a Stimson or a Hughes.

Such is the man who constitutes the greatest individual challenge to Franklin Delano Roosevelt and to his New Deal policies. No one who senses the acceleration in world affairs or the vitality of the economic and social issues raised by Long would care to prophesy the outcome of his enterprise. Yet there are controlling factors which suggest that the Kingfish, so far as the immediate future is concerned, may be regarded as a constructive factor in our national life and a valuable adjunct to the New Deal.

He is, for the first time since Jackson's day, giving a voice to the economic untouchables of the Baptist Belt. He is uniting the poor white farmers, the tenants, the croppers—and even the Negroes—behind his program, and bids fair to make himself the master of a rejuvenated social system in the Lower Mississippi Valley.

Doubts Are Expressed On His Radicalism

There is, on the other hand, considerable doubt expressed by the liberal publications of the North and East as to the quality of Long's radicalism. The New Republic, for example, points out that after seven years of Huey's control Louisiana still lacks minimum wage and child labor laws, unemployment insurance and old-age pensions, although other States possess these intermediate measures of social justice. Moreover, Long has begun to hobnob with Talmadge, the anti-labor Governor of Georgia—though that would be natural, for Talmadge is also fighting Roosevelt. Long has also been extremely cautious about identifying himself with the share-cropper movement in adjoining States, probably because most of the share-croppers don't vote on account of inability to pay the poll tax. Share-croppers won't help Long much to take Arkansas away from Robinson, for example—because they can't. But if Long gets control of Arkansas, he probably will see that the poll tax is abolished, and endeavor to consolidate his position with the help of share-cropper votes. There is also some uneasiness at the Kingfish's quiet efforts to convince Wall Street that he is far less radical than Roosevelt and so deserves the support of Big Business, as well as at the fact that a serious Long candidacy in 1936 would assist in the election af a conservative Republican to the Presidency. These undeniable facts cast a bar sinister across the Long movement and go far to justify the label of "Fascist" which is applied to it. Yet they can also be fitted into the Long technique of dividing the opposition, and even radicals should not forget that the social and economic cost to conservatives of a really effective counter-revolution is only less than the cost of revolution itself and that the lot of Germans and Italians under Fascism is not markedly inferior to the lot of the Russians under Communism. For it is a final—and sobering—consideration that if you push far enough to the extreme Left you will find yourself cheek by jowl with the extreme Right—and vice versa.

But finally, by raising the threat of disruption of national politics and by grasping the indispensable technique for a capital levy, Long may sufficiently alarm the affluent 2 per cent of our people into effecting a real redistribution of national income as an alternative to violent revolution and economic chaos. It is a sad fact—but true—that people do not part with power or privilege, except out of fear of the immediate personal consequences of not making the necessary concessions. The New Deal has been persuasive, suggestive and—above all—even-tempered in its efforts to convince the privileged classes of the desirability of reconstructing our economic system. Long's campaign is calculated to make these same classes realize the necessity of doing so as an act of self-preservation. It is true that the velvet glove and the iron fist adorn different hands, but the final result may be the same. One thing is certain—that without Long, without Coughlin, without political and social and economic dissent in the air, Roosevelt would find it extremely difficult, if not altogether impossible, to move forward with those orderly changes by which he proposes to attune American life to the fact of plenty. It is the thunder on the left which produces political change; for without that thunder even the most trivial reforms would be labeled as unsound and un-American by the beneficiaries of economic chaos and the heirs of irrational privilege and arbitrary power.

Special Training to Be Sought For Virginia's 'Forgotten Boys'

Educator Asserts 200,000 Are Out of School or Employment.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 19.—A well organized movement to acknowledge society's responsibility to the "forgotten youth" of Virginia—the out-of-school group in the "no-man's-land" between the classroom and useful employment—will be initiated this summer, Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of instruction, announced today.

The first concrete action toward caring for this almost neglected group, Dr. Hall revealed, will be the operation of training schools at Blacksburg and Petersburg for the instruction of teachers who later will conduct classes for the "out-of-school" group from 14 to 24 years of age.

A preliminary step necessary to the subsequent organization of classes will have been completed by that time, he explained. This is a State-wide canvass to determine how many "forgotten youths" there are, what their present status is, and what they aspire to do in life. This survey, which has been in progress for several months, will be concluded by June 15, Dr. Hall said, and tabulations will be completed before the training schools open about July 1.

200,000 in Group.

From statistics on record in his department, Dr. Hall has estimated that there are approximately 200,000 youths between 14 and 24 in the State who are not in school and have not been absorbed in employment.

In order to finance the training schools for the large number of teachers required, Dr. Hall has applied to the Federal Government for $18,500 relief funds. He is confident that the plan will be financed.

The training school for white teachers will be held at V. P. I. at Blacksburg, and the one for Negro teachers at the Virginia State College for Negroes.

To Teach Fundamentals.

Cources at both colleges will be designed to train teachers in the types of instruction likely to be needed by their students. These include fundamentals like the "three R's" and their extensions, vocational training such as mechanics and home economics, cultural courses including music, and recreational instruction.

The objectives of the proposed assimilation of the "forgotten youth" into the educational plan, Dr. Hall explained, include maintaining the morale of the students, providing them with training for a useful and profitable vocation, and saving them and society from the tragic costs of discipline and punishment in State institutions which might result if their energies were left undirected.

West Virginia Parish Observing Centennial

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fairmont, W. Va., May 19.—Christ Church parish, which embraces all of Marion County in the diocese of West Virginia of the Episcopal Church, this morning opened the observance of the centennial of the holding of the first Episcopal service in what is now Marion County with a five-day program, closing Thursday night.

The Rev. Clarence W. Brickman is rector.

A high light of the celebration will be the centennial festival at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, when the full vested choir will sing Gounod's St. Cecelia's mass. Another feature will be the second annual Bach concert of the Christ Church Choir School, composed of 40 boys ranging from 6 to 16 years old. The Bach concert will be held on Wednesday evening.

Monday night there will be a reception for all former rectors and Tuesday there will be an all-day session of the Northwestern convocation.

Forest Veterans Lose Jobs at Mont Alto

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., May 19.—Dismissal of Harry Thomas, Glen Furny, near here, after a service of 27 years as forest ranger of the Mont Alto Forest District, has been announced by the department of forest and waters of Pennsylvania. Dan C. Bittinger, of Quincy, has been named Thomas' successor.

Miss E. Ruth Simmers, of Mont Alto, senior stenographer in the Mont Alto Forest and Nursery office for 15 years, and C. Vernon Fitz, of Waynesboro, in the Research Institute of the Commonwealth at Mont Alto, also were dismissed. No reasons for any of the dismissals have been given, but it was believed that political considerations entered into the changes.

80,000 Acres Sought For Monongahela Park

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkins, W. Va., May 19.—Acquisition of more than 80,000 acres of forest lands in Randolph County to be added to the Monongahela national forest is under consideration by the Federal Government, although purchase plans have not been officially announced. Owners of lands say negotiations for sales are progressing.

The Monongahela forest has been increased from time to time in the last two years until it is now the largest east of the Mississippi River.

Henlein Party Wins Majority In Czech Ballot

German Opposition May Usurp Premier Malypetr's Bloc as Leaders.

By the United Press.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, May 19.—Late returns tonight indicated that overwhelming success of the German opposition voters under the banner of Konrad Henlein's party featured today's general parliamentary elections in the German sections of the country.

The Henlein candidates, partial counts showed, will have a majority in the 70-odd German parliament seats and may even usurp the place of Premier Jan Malypetr's Czech agrarians as Czechoslovakia's strongest party.

Henlein's chief gains were at the expense of the German Socialists and the German League of Farmers, each of which is represented in the government. This may mean an all-Czech government bloc will be formed, since Czech leaders deem Henlein "unqualified for governing." They may refuse to include his party in the government.

The returns indicated there even was a possibility that the German League of Farmers, headed Public Health Minister Franz Spina, will be unable to achieve 20,000 votes in any of the 22 districts necessary for a parliament seat.

Changes in the Czech sections of the country were small, with the opposition national league candidates seemingly losing as often as gaining.

Early returns indicated the government would emerge victorious in the country as a whole, despite Henlein's winnings in the German sections.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

ACTIVELY continuing a movement to obtain Federal funds to promote a home-building project, Government machinists discussed plans for organizing a planning corporation in a mass meeting held over the week-end in the Naval Lodge Hall, Fourth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast. The meeting was sponsored by Columbia Lodge, No. 174, of the International Association of Machinists, and was attended by machinists from every department of the Government.

BAKER.

The plan, as outlined by Clem Maples, member of Lodge No. 174 and chairman of the Washington Central Labor Union committee on rents, is to organize Government machinists into a Hollywood Park Planning Corporation. It is proposed that this organization is to attempt to obtain Federal funds for building homes to be paid for by the machinists at a low amortization rate. Under this plan approximately 600 building sites would be purchased and houses built in 50 units at a time on lots to be purchased in sections convenient to the Navy Yard, where the majority of the machinists are employed.

Four regulations as proposed by Mr. Maples are: 1. The price shall be regulated according to the location of the lot. 2. Specifications shall be in accordance with the Engineering Department of the District. 3. House specifications and costs shall be in accordance with individual desires. 4. Resale shall conform to the District code. It was further suggested that if a member desired to sell his property he should first offer it for sale to the corporation or some member in the corporation.

Tentative plans indicate that lots will have a 50-foot frontage. Depth will be worked out by the individuals and the engineers.

Mr. Maples stated that the committee on housing had fixed $40 a month as the maximum amortization rate, ranging over a 20-year payment plan. He asserted further that the monthly payment would, in most cases, probably be much less than $40.

Much interest was shown by the large delegation of mechanists who want to own their own homes.

Arthur F. White, Bureau of Statistics, and formerly of the co-ordinator's staff, has been appointed to the bureau as principal cost analyst. Mr. White, before his connection with the commission, was with the Southern Pacific Co. in San Francisco for 15 years. Miss Rosalie Z. Robinson (C), of San Antonio, has been appointed to the stenographic room.

Attorneys H. K. Kirby and J. S. Higgins, Bureau of Valuation, have been transferred to railroad reorganzation work in the Bureau of Finance.

Cecil A. Smith, Bureau of Valuation Accounting, has been assigned to the field party on duty at Portsmouth, Va., which is engaged in examining the records and accounts of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad Co.

Miss Emma Hayward, Bureau of Safety, has been elected president of the Past President's Club of the of the Daughters of the Union Veterans of the Civil War.

Miss Mabel Stiles (P), Bureau of Lands, can no longer boast "single bliss," for she is now Mrs. Nash.

James A. Burroughs and D. P. Thompson, Bureau of Engineering, have returned from New York, where they were working on the Western Union Telegraph. A. C. Chandler has returned from Tallahassee, Fla.

Walter L. Rhinehart (P), National Training School for Boys, was selected by a faculty committee at George Washington University as one of the outstanding members of the senior class and was placed in the hall of fame of the Cherry Tree, university year book, which will be released today. President of his class and recently elected president of the G. W. U. Chapter of Omicron Delta Kappa, national honorary activities fraternity, Rhinehart has had an important part to play in the senior class campus activities.

When Rexford C. Parmelee (C), young business specialist, returned from a honeymoon trip he found his desk in Division of Economic Research, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, transformed into a mass of gay symbols of a wedding. He married Miss Sylvia B. Paine, a graduate of Wellesley and the University of Illinois, in Urbana, May 11.

AAA Invitations Accepted.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace, AAA Administrator Chester C. Davis, Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, and many other Government officials have accepted invitations to the installation of officers of AAA Lodge, No. 116, American Federation of Government Employes, in the auditorium of the Agriculture South Building, Independence avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets southwest, tomorrow night.

An Official Episode.

The chief of a Government bureau spent a month away
And the work went along all right, they say.
A clerk, well versed in the affairs of the place,
Was off one week and they had not the space
On his desk to store the work that was not done.
(Now this is the truth and not all said for fun.)
So the moral, dear reader, for you to select
Is to develop your muscle and too much brain reject.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

The pros and cons of chain letters occupied an air spot on WJSV yesterday, when Bill Bivens cavorted around in front of the Earle Buliding, grabbed folks by collars or elbows and practically forced them on pain of receiving a chain letter, to tell all.

Bill's straw hat created enough disturbance, and this headgear, plus the inevitable green suit, was quite enough to draw crowds. He got several good responses, some for, some against, and some believing that chain letters are just good, clean fun.

Acknowledged—a very interesting letter from Reader Saloman. Would like to have his opinion on the ideal radio column.

High spots:

Secretary Roper advocates an interest in foreign trade, WMAL, 11:45 a. m.

NBC will carry the President's message on the bonus bill, probably around noon Wednesday. They don't know which station (WRC or WMAL), so you might as well try both. They hope to broadcast the President's message from the floor of the House, but aren't sure but that they may have to broadcast a reading of it.

Release says Gen. Johnson will plead to "Save the NRA" on WMAL at 7:30 p. m. Radio Joe and Budget Boys are scheduled to go on at that time, so either one or the other must be canceled. Tune in and see what you get.

Another fine British play, "Old Bannerman," is on WMAL at 3:30 p. m.

Kiwanis Clubs hold individual programs all over the country, while Dr. William J. Carrigan, international president, is heard on WJSV at 10 p. m. in the "Fellowship Hour."

"The Doctor's Choice," a comedy, is on WMAL, 8:30 p. m.

Another of Kate Smith's talent hunt broadcasts is on WJSV, 7:30 p. m.

Lee Announces For Board Post At Arlington

Contractor Asks Support in Democratic Primary on August 6.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

C. Watt Lee, a resident of Arlington County for more than 15 years, has announced his candidacy for membership on the county board, subject to the Democratic primary August 6.

Lee is a charter member of the Arlington County Men's Democratic Club, member of the Jefferson Civic League and the Jefferson Fire Department.

Harry K. Green, commissioner of revenue, and his assistants will be at the Lyon Park drug store tomorrow evening, and at the firehouse at Virginia Highlands Friday night from 7 to 9 o'clock for the purpose of assisting taxpayers in the preparation of their local and state income returns.

All persons residing in Virginia on January 1 must make a tax return either in person or by agent on all tangible and intangible personal property.

Mrs. O. B. Fitts, of Cherrydale, has been elected president of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Washington-Lee High School.

Other officers are Leland J. Williams, first vice president; Mrs. Arnold Rowell, second vice president; Mrs. Norman Sims, third vice president; Mrs. A. L. Phillips, recording secretary; Miss Alexander, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Clarence Simmons, treasurer; Mrs. Nat Lines, historian, and W. B. Gilmore, parliamentarian.

Election of officers will feature the annual meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the James Monroe school tonight. The meeting will be held in the school auditorium at Aurora Heights at 8 o'clock.

Gilbert Hall, member of the board of trustees of the Arlington Hospital Association, will be the guest speaker. He will speak on "The Need of a Hospital in Arlington County."

Work of the pupils of the school will be on exhibition.

The board of governors of the Lyon Park Community Center will sponsor a benefit roast beef dinner in the Community House tomorrow evening from 5:30 to 8 o'clock. The proceeds will be applied to the fund being raised to paint the building.

Mrs. P. C. Dyer is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Plans for the remodeling of the building recently purchased by the Clarendon Citizens Association as its future home will be considered by the Clarendon Citizens Holding Corporation at its meeting tonight. The meeting will be held in the offices of H. W. Beattie in the Clarendon Postoffice Building on Wilson boulevard.

Committee chairmen as announced by the president are as follows:

Mrs. C. C. Apple, finance and budget; Ralph Turner, program; Mrs. Lee Ranck, hospitality; Mrs. Russell Johncox, membership, and Mrs. Morgan Dye, publications.

Chevy Chase Body Will Meet Tonight

May Dissolve If Interest Doesn't Increase.

Seven questions affecting residents of Section Three, Chevy Chase, Md., are being submitted to the local citizens by the Community Association of the section in an effort to increase interest in this civic organization.

The association will hold its final meeting prior to recess for the season at 8 p. m. today at the Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church. A letter signed by H. B. Atkinson, president; G. E. Harris, vice president, and M. G. Lloyd, secretary, has been sent to every local resident advising that the association will be disbanded if tomorrow's attendance is not sufficiently large to indicate an interest in the organization.

Questions presented to the residents include better lighting, correcting blind street corners, police and fire protection, annual audit of the accounts of the citizens committee, restricted parking, a prize flower or garden contest, and representation in the county civic federation.

Ayars to Give Lecture On Iris Cultivation

Col. Charles W. Ayers, who was awarded the silver medal given by the American Iris Society at the Takoma Park Horticultural Club's iris show held Friday and Saturday, will address the garden department of the Takoma Women's Club at a meeting at 1:30 p. m. today.

The meeting will take place at Col. and Mrs. Ayers' home, 217 Maple avenue, Takoma Park, Md. "Iris-Varieties and Cultivation" is the speaker's subject.

Banquet for Citizens Scheduled at Laurel

A citizens' banquet will be held Thursday night at Laurel (Md.) High School. Proceeds will be used to pay for the stage curtain.

Funds for the curtain were furnished in part by the Prince Georges County board of education. The banquet will be under charge of Mrs. Albert Ricks, president of the local Parent-Teacher Association. Members of the Laurel Women's Club will be hostesses.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., May 19.—Ample supplies of the legal rope, with which Elkton's "marrying parsons" tie the wedding knots for almost half a thousand couples each month, was ready today as this matrimonial mecca of five States prepared for a record trade.

The well-oiled machinery which adds the finishing touches to examples of Cupid's labors from Virginia to New York was functioning smoothly, as latest available figures indicated the last 15 days of May will see the 1934 marriage record go a-glimmering.

An attempt by the recent Legislature to ban billboards and other advertising means used by Elkton ministers as methods of attracting business died in committee and Bigger and better signs is the watchword.

A taxi company here, which employs the Rev. Charles M. Cope on a salary basis, thus far enjoys "best pickings." The company snatches up its prospects at the railway station and speeds them to the Rev. Cope's home, where the ceremony is a matter of minutes.

Along the highway entering the city, booths are maintained by many of the "independent" preachers, where altar-bound couples may receive explicit directions to clergymen's homes, and where, if need be, a guide will be provided.

During the first half of May, 259 marriages topped the mark for the same period last year by 56.

New Building For Rockville School Is Ready

140 in Primary Grades to Move From Old Academy Tuesday.

Primary grades of the Rockville Elementary School will move into their new building on the old Rockville Fair Grounds tomorrow morning. Miss Mary Brewer is in charge of the school.

The approximately 140 children of the three primary grades will report to the old Academy building at 9 a. m. as usual. They then will be formed and march to the new building to take possession. The procession will be led by the school boy patrol.

The new building contains four classrooms and a cafeteria and was erected at a cost of $40,000 as part of the county school building program. It marks beginning of a program for Rockville which eventually is planned to include all academic activities for the county seat in buildings on the 28 acres of the old fair grounds which was purchased by the county.

The plan includes provision of a stadium and recreation grounds for countywide celebrations and picnics, as well as athletic and other scholastic activities.

The remaining grades of the elementary school will remain at the old Academy building until the next section of the unit has been erected. This section will contain six additional classrooms and is part of the school program now pending before the PWA. Kindergarten classes also will remain at the old Academy building, according to Superintendent of Schools E. W. Broome, who yesterday announced opening of the new school.

Randolph Names Park Committee

Berkeley, Morgan Citizens to Assist Project.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 19.—A committee of Berkeley and Morgan County residents was named yesterday by Representative Jennings Randolph, while on a short visit to this city, to assist in a project, initiated and sponsored by him, for establishment of a national park area in either Morgan or Berkeley County, or both, under the National Park Service.

The project has been advanced already to a point, he said, where a survey by the National Park Service will be made. Several possible areas are being considered, Randolph said. Under the plan the Federal Government would purchase the territory, possibly involving as much as 50,000 acres, would lay it out as a part of the national park system, and equip it fully for recreation.

The National Park Service, he said, became interested when he pointed out that the areas under consideration are within a 2½-hour drive of the National Capital.

The committee as named and announced Saturday included W. N. McClung, chairman, Inwood; Charles Scott, vice chairman, Berkeley Springs, W. Va.; Marlin Eckerd, Martinsburg; H. F. Householder, Berkeley Springs; Vernon Johnson, Berkeley Springs; Sam Harmison, Berkeley Springs; A. M. Staubly, Martinsburg; C. T. Whitacre, Martinsburg; Robert Peery, Martinsburg, and King Masters, Ganotown.

Transients Burned In Train Wreck

Gasoline Cars Start Blaze on Illinois Central.

By the Associated Press.

Monroe, La., May 19.—Several transients, reported from two to five, lost their lives in a fire which followed upon partial derailment of an eastbound Illinois Central freight train, three miles west of here early today. Three transients were injured.

Twelve freight cars and nine gasoline tanks were destroyed by the fire which engulfed wreckage immediately after the derailment and spread to four or five empty cars on a nearby spur track. None of the train crew was injured.

Injured brought to a hospital here were Will Fuller, White of Dubech, and J. H. Hardy, of Monroe, and Carter McKinley, of Lake Providence, Negroes.

Engineer H. L. Clark, of Bossier, said the derailment occurred after the engine passed over some hard object on the track.

Liquor Case Begins Fifth Trial Week

Cundiff May Be Called in Roanoke Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 19.—The fifth week of the trial of alleged Franklin County liquor conspirators will begin here tomorrow morning with Tom C. Cundiff, among a quartet who pleaded guilty April 22, and several alleged co-conspirators yet to testify.

The prosecution, expected to rest either Wednesday or Thursday, has not indicated whether Cundiff, sentenced to three years in the State Penitentiary for felonious assault in Franklin, will be called, but three others who pleaded guilty—D. Wilson Hodges, former sheriff; Leonard L. Fralin, and H. J. Wright, illicit distillers—are Government witnesses.

Cundiff escaped from jail at Rocky Mount but later gave himself up to Federal officers. Thirty of 55 alleged co-conspirators have testified.

Smoke-Stained BerwynChurch Marks 50 Years

Recent Fire Fails to Cut Anniversary Service Attendance.

Although the interior of their church had been damaged by fire a week before, members of the congregation of the Presbyterian Church, of Berwyn, Md., yesterday celebrated the church's fiftieth anniversary as scheduled.

The Sunday school room, scorched and its walls streaked by smoke, was filled to capacity at each of three services, more than 800 persons attending.

The Rev. Andrew B. Matzen, pastor, presided at the services. At the morning session congratulations were offered by former superintendents of the church.

Pastors from neighboring churches voiced congratulations at afternoon services, as did also Dr. Albert F. Woods, former president of the University of Maryland, who is a member of the congregation. Congratulations of the Washington Presbytery were delivered by the Rev. Hobart D. Evans, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Hyattsville.

Other pastors who spoke were the Rev. C. H. Cannon, of Branchville-Beltsville Presbyterian Church; Dr. Walter F. Egleson, Sherwood Presbyterian Church, and Dr. William A. Eisenberger, Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. David A. Reed, of Greenwich (N. J.) Presbyterian Church, a former pastor of the Berwyn church, preached the sermon, noting how the church had grown from the "small way" in which it started. Mrs. Elmore Powers read a historical sketch.

There was a tea and social hour, and, at the evening services, the Rev. Mr. Matzen and the Rev. Mr. Eisenberger spoke on the church's function today.

Rockville Chamber To TalkBusService

Report of Pupils' Deaths to Be Given Tomorrow.

The proposed elimination of the street car service and the substitution of bus service from Rockville to Washington by the Capital Transit Co. will be discussed at the meeting of the Rockville Chamber of Commerce tomorrow at 8 p. m. The Bethesda Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations have been advocating this change for several years. It is understood a survey is to be started to determine the most effective setup for meeting the requirements of residents who have long been served by this line.

The elimination of the Baltimore & Ohio grade crossing, at which 14 Williamsport, Md., school children lost their lives recently, will also be discussed. A committee composed of Donald A. DeLashmutt, chairman; O. W. Anderson and Raymond Karge will report the progress of investigation made by the joint committee from the chamber of commerce and the town council on proposed elimination projects.

Louis J. Ryan, chairman of the membership committee, will report on a current membership drive.

Fairfax Court To Begin Term This Morning

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 248, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 136-J.

The May term of the Circuit Court of Fairfax County, Va., will open today at 10 a. m., with Judge Walter T. McCarthy presiding. An unusually light docket of new cases is to be considered.

The grand jury will hear the cases of Jesse Shimeth, of Loudoun County, charged with housebreaking with intent to commit larceny; Alfred Goodspeed, charged with larceny, and Louise Carpenter and Mary Lucy Carpenter, of Herndon, both colored, charged with arson.

Three appeals from convictions in the court of County Trial Justice Paul E. Brown are pending, all involving charges of driving while drunk.

In addition to new cases, the court has 74 old criminal cases on its docket. A number of civil cases are scheduled for this term.

Virginia Tech Plan Cornerstone Rites

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Blacksburg, May 19.—In addition to its usual sixty-third commencement exercises June 7 to 11, Virginia Tech will lay the cornerstone of its teaching and administration building and auditorium which is being erected as part of the PWA grant of $1,066,000.

This exercise will take place Monday, June 10, when approximately 1,000 alumni are expected to be here for class reunions and other alumni activities. Dr. William Moseley Brown, Alexandria, past grand master of the Virginia Masons, will make the address at the cornerstone laying.

The Rev. Dr. Thomas W. Cooper, Culpeper, grand master, has called a meeting of the Grand Lodge for the purpose of laying the cornerstone with Masonic ceremony.

Ashton Dovell, Williamsburg, member of the Virginia House of Delegates, will make the graduation address at exercises to be held Tuesday morning, June 11. More than 300 degrees will be conferred by Dr. Julian A. Burruss, president of Virginia Tech, as there are, according to the registrar, 269 candidates for the B. S. degree, and 35 for the master's degree. Candidates for the B. S. degrees will take their final examinations between Monday, May 27, and Friday, May 31.

Poetry, Hope Ridings Miller tells us, is not what poets create; it's what creates poets. And we think Hope Ridings Miller should know, because (1) she's a poet herself, and (2) she selects the column of modern verse which appears on the woman's pages of The Post each Monday morning.

This column of verse, which was started months ago (we suspect it was to provide a safety valve for the poets that bloomed in the Spring, tra la), has become one of the best features of its kind in the United States, and has won National recognition. For one thing, it's different: the verses scan and the poems make sense. Hope, you see, doesn't care much for odes to the Washington Monument, or sonnets to some other woman's left eyebrow. The common, or terrible, variety of poet who gushes forty stanzas over the first robin must gush somewhere else. It takes more than a rhyming dictionary and a hackneyed theme to make her column.

During the week, Hope reads through seventy-five magazines devoted to poetry, carefully selecting only the very best verse, which is reprinted on Monday morning. Too, she believes that Washington has some pretty good poets despite Congress, and she publishes much of their work. Strange as it seems, some of these poems are so good that even the linotypers who set them into type have been seen gazing abstractly into space, muttering about the gardens between dawn and sunrise. It's so good we read it ourselves.

Writing about her column of poetry has about convinced us that one thing wrong with this country is that we don't read enough poetry The average man thinks about it once during a few Spring-times in his youth, and if he mentioned a poem to his wife, she'd probably faint . . . but she'd like it. And the man who isn't married yet . . . well, if he'd try reading a little poetry before he called on his Best Girl, he'd discover a lot of new ways to tell her how much he loved her, and she'd listen more carefully. You know, you can get quite drunk on poetry, and when you do, it's much more intoxicating than wine . . . and the hangover isn't so bad.

If you haven't been reading any poetry lately, or if you think that poetry died with Swinburne and Tennyson, we sincerely advise you to look at the woman's pages this morning and read Hope Ridings Miller's column. You'll be surprised to discover how vital and truthful modern poetry can be . . . and we're sure that your entire week will be brighter because of it. Let Hope Ridings Miller bring the contemporary poets to you each Monday morning in

'Waste' by TVA Up for Inquiry In HouseGroup

Directors to Retort That 9 Munitions Firms Gave Identical Bids.

Charges that the Tennessee Valley Authority squandered $100,000 in awarding contracts for dynamite and powder and through other alleged irregularities will be investigated by the House Military Affairs Committee at secret hearings opening today.

The three directors of the authority—Arthur E. Morgan, David Lilienthal and Harcourt A. Morgan—have been summoned before the committee for questioning.

The inquiry comes as the Administration is bring full pressure upon the committee to report the bill which provides more money for the TVA and increases its scope of operations. A similar measure passed the Senate last Tuesday.

There are 18 Democrats and 8 Republicans on the committee. A poll of the group shows nine Democrats and one Republican in favor of the measure, four Democrats and one Republican doubtful and the remainder determined to fight it to the end.

Every effort thus far to dislodge the bill has failed. Unless the committee acts soon, Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, will offer a petition in an attempt to force the measure to the floor where its passage is generally conceded.

"I'm getting tired of this stalling," Maverick said. "Unless we get action soon in the committee, I'll offer a petition to discharge it."

Meantime, the TVA directors will make a blanket denial of gross irregularities in connection with the operation of the gigantic New Deal project. The inquiry is being pushed by Representatives Andrew J. May (Democrat), Kentucky; Numa F. Montet (Democrat), Louisiana, and Donald H. McLean (Republican), New Jersey, all of whom are opposed to the pending measure.

Furthermore, the United Press learned, the TVA is prepared to make a few disclosures of its own, chief of which concerns the submission of uniform bids by nine munitions companies.

Reports to the committee are to the effect that the TVA paid $900,000 to the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. of Delaware for $800,000 worth of dynamite and powder needed to continue blasting operations last April. Lilienthal and his colleagues, the United Press learned, will explain the entire expenditures of the TVA for material of this kind will not total $900,000.

They will also show, it was said, that last April the TVA advertised for three consignments of muntions in 150, 50 and 22 ton lots. Nine companies submitted bids. The first bids opened were for the 50-ton consignment and the prices submitted were all uniform.

The TVA then sought from each company a guarantee that would protect the authority in the face of possible price fluctuations for a year. Other companies offered guarantees for from two to five months. The Dupont company offered a nine-months' guarantee and was awarded the contract.

Bids on the other consignments were not opened until three days later, during which time the rival bidders had an opportunity to revise their estimates. None took advantage of the opportunity and again their prices were uniform. The Du Pont Co., it was learned, won the other two contracts by being able to offer a longer price guarantee period.

The charge that the TVA has followed a practice of awarding contracts to preferred bidders will be denied emphatically, it was said, and proof will be submitted to show that only emergency purchases have been made without first advertising for bids.

The committee, it was learned, will question Lilienthal about a trip he made to England and Ireland in the summer of 1934 to study first-hand extensive development by public authority in the field of electricity in those countries.

The accusation that the TVA was granting allowances for overtime work to regular employes will be denied, as will reports that the TVA has made loans to co-operative associations without obtaining proper security.

Three Narrowly Escaped Death Here

Three persons were only slightly injured in this car which turned over three times at Seventh and Gallatin streets northwest yesterday, just one of the week-end crop in which 11 were hurt.

11 Injured in Motor Mishaps; 3 Cheat Death as Car Upsets

Motor mishaps yesterday brought injuries to 11 persons in the District and nearby territory.

Three motorists miraculously escaped serious injury when the car in which they were riding overturned three times, throwing them clear, in a near-collision at Seventh and Gallatin streets northeast.

The car, a roadster, operated by Allen Heap, 26, of 1504 Spring place northwest, was going south on Seventh street. He swerved it sharply to avoid a collision with an automobile operated by Helen Stuart, 25, of 412 Hamilton street northwest.

Heap was treated at Emergency Hospital for injuries to the shoulder. His companions, Milton Day, 34, of 414 Aspen street northwest and Doris Renneberger, 19, of 800 Whittier place northwest, were also treated for minor injuries.

In a head-on collision on the Rockville pike near Halpine, Md., one person was seriously injured and four others were less seriously hurt. One of the cars burst into flames after the impact.

Austin Stewart, 28, colored, who lives with Johnson, was burned when their car overturned and caught fire. He is at Emergency Hospital. Johnson was taken to Georgetown Hospital with a fractured skull. His condition is serious.

Others injured are Williams, injuries to the head and legs; Estelle Ezell, 25, of 1734 New Hampshire avenue, bruises and shocks, and Louis Pritchard, 23, of 1625 Massachusetts avenue northwest, injuries to the shoulder and ankles.

Bert Mesley, 23, of 4325 Fourth street northwest, was slightly injured when his car ran off the Defense Highway near Bowie, Md. He was treated at Providence Hospital and was taken home.

Sazama Funeral Held in Annapolis

Playmates of Drowned Boy Attend Services.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 19.—Attended by many of his playmates, funeral services for Frank Sazama, 7-year-old son of Frank Sazama, swimming instructor at the Naval Academy, and Mrs. Sazama, were held at St. Martin's Lutheran Church at 3 p. m. today. The services were conducted by the pastor, the Rev. S. G. Schick, assisted by Commander William N. Thomas, chaplain of the Naval Academy. Burial was in Cedar Bluff Cemetery.

The pallbearers, members of the Elks Lodge, and close friends of the boy's father, were Adolph C. Braun, Barney Berman, Charles H. Sherman and William B. McCrady.

The boy's body was found Friday in Weems Creek after a concerted search Wednesday and Thursday by county police officers and scores of friends of the family, augmented by planes from the Naval Academy and a company of 240 midshipmen. He was last seen when he left the West Annapolis School at 3 p. m. Wednesday. His body was found less than 200 yards from the Sazama home. It is believed the boy had been playing on a bridge and fell into the creek. Police Magistrate Louis Straus, of Annapolis, acting coroner, returned a verdict of accidental drowning.

Rubber Demand, Rigid Supply

WHY the corporate milkman pays different prices for milk from the same cows is a persistent riddle to the consumer.

The public hears that the milkman pays one price for milk sold as fluid milk.

And it also hears that he pays another price for milk used in making butter, cheese, evaporated milk, condensed milk, ice cream, milk powder and the like.

There is nothing mysterious about the so-called "classified plan" of purchase and sale.

The reason is plain to see.

A higher price can be paid for milk to be immediately sold in bottles than for milk which must be processed into by-products.

Suppose the corporate milkman gets 6c a quart of the price of fluid milk sold to the consumer.

Then suppose—and the supposition is the ever-present fact—that the supply exceeds the demand.

Some of the excess fluid milk will be worked into butter. Say also that butter is selling at 30c a pound, and it takes 10 quarts of milk to produce a pound of butter.

The logic of the situation is irresistible.

The milkman cannot pay the fluid milk price for milk thus processed and stay liquid himself.

He must know simple arithmetic as well as milk.

LOU GEHRIG, home-run star of the N. Y. Yankees, has played in more than 1500 big league games without a single "day off." Such an athletic achievement takes "wind"—healthy nerves—"condition." Lou says: "For steady smoking I pick Camels. They're so mild they never get my 'wind' or my nerves."

"THEY DON'T GET YOUR WIND" ATHLETES SAY

So mild, athletes smoke as many as they please—and that's real mildness!

Of course you want mildness in a cigarette. And the athletes—to whom "wind," healthy nerves, "condition" are vitally important—these men and women insist on mildness. Not just a mild taste—but mildness in fact.

Lou Gehrig says: "For steady smoking I choose Camels. Why? Because Camels are so mild they never get my 'wind.' And I ought to know. I haven't missed a ball game with the Yanks since 1925."

Other stars noted for their "condition" agree. George Barker, intercollegiate cross-country champion, says: "Camels are so mild, they don't cut my 'wind' in any way." Bobby Walthour, Jr., star of the six-day bike grinds, says: "I've got to have 'wind' in bike racing. For my cigarette I long ago chose Camels."

Tommy Armour, speaking for the golf stars, Bruce Barnes for tennis, and Betty Bailey for the aquatic sports—all agree: "Camels don't get your 'wind.'"

What this mildness means to you!

It means you can smoke as many Camels as you please. Athletes say Camel's costlier tobaccos never disturb your nerves—never tire your taste—never get your "wind."

GOOD NEWS!

Most of the pleasant things in life are doubly pleasant when you're "in condition." That's why it's such good news to hear that Camel's costlier tobaccos are so mild you can smoke all you please. Athletes say Camels never get your "wind."

SO MILD YOU CAN SMOKE ALL YOU WANT!

Camels COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

● Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

An Impending Retirement.

When Gen. Johnson retired from the NRA, Donald R. Richberg undertook to save that organization from threatened disintegration. A virtual breakdown of the administrative machinery, a confusion of plans and a lack of well-defined policies made the task exceptionally difficult. Mr. Richberg has devoted himself unreservedly to the work of rehabilitation. He has endeavored to profit by the mistakes of the past by restricting NRA's scope of activities and trying to make the system more workable as well as to fortify it against legal assaults.

While there is room for great differences of opinion concerning the future trend of the recovery administration, there is no doubt that Mr. Richberg has earned the right to express his views openly and forcibly. If he believes that the Clark resolution to extend the NRA temporarily in a much changed form is "folly," it is not treasonable to say so. Senator Clark's assertion that Mr. Richberg is a "Mussolini" whose criticism of the Senate is "arrogant" implies that the recovery administrator is trying to establish himself in a position of entrenched power.

To that implied charge Mr. Richberg has returned a most effective answer by announcing his desire to return to private life by July 1 and resume the practice of law. His purpose is obviously to perpetuate the life of the NRA under conditions which in his opinion will insure its survival, and provide a job for his successor. The fact that he has fought for his views so determinedly and aggressively is a tribute to his disinterested concern for the preservation of the organization which he heads—not a reflection upon his methods or his motives.

Untouched By Culloden.

Dispatches from Scotland tell of the ceremonials attending the hundredth birthday of Sir Fitzroy Donald MacLean, patriarchal chief of all the MacLeans, McLeans, MacLaines, McLanes and McClains in the world.

The tribal tradition has survived in Scotland to a degree unknown in other civilized countries. The clans still occupy, in great measure, the lands where their forefathers dwelt in the days of the Druids. The line of descent of their chieftains is as carefully noted as the lineage of any king. To this day, bearded keepers of the herds will tell, in the land of the MacLeods, of the iniquities of the MacGregors, and the MacQuarries will lament their expulsion from the Isle of Ulva where they lived for "only 800 years," as the guide-book phrases it. The ancient castles still stand, and not all of them are in ruins. Indeed, many are occupied by the lairds whose forefathers built them seven and eight and nine centuries ago.

The birthday of The MacLean is a Scottish event of importance, recognized with the grave reserve of ancient rivalry by The Campbell, who is known elsewhere as the Duke of Argylle, by The MacIntosh, The MacLeod and the other proud men who count their ancestry back to the days of the Crusades.

Concerning Tanbark.

There is probably no moral to be drawn from it, but Americans—since they are the only ones who really know what a circus is—are pretty well divided into those who like them and those who do not. Very seldom is a man lukewarm about circuses. And, de gustibus notwithstanding, those who do like them have a happier time living this season of the year. At least, so say we, writing with ears cocked toward the window for the first whoopings of the "kallyope."

We like circuses. We like the piping professionalism of the midget and the bronzed benignity of the giant. We like the jolly fat lady and we like the morose thin man with his velveteen loin cloth. We like the musty smell of elephants—for a few minutes each year—and we like to hear seals blowing "My Country 'Tis of Thee." We like the clowns—if there isn't a house-on-fire act it isn't a circus. We like the taut hush of the high-wire act. We like the little dogs who run around backwards inside the wagon wheels.

And we like the flying acrobats: some day when we grow up we're going to be a flying acrobat. Also, we wish we could crack a whip like the ringmasters in the horse acts. We like the calloo-callay of the wild West show. We like the awful moment when the men have slipped down into the cannon and everyone is waiting for the chest-flattening "boom!" We even like the little children with strawberry ice cream all about their gaping maws.

And if we can possibly get through with that piece about the President's new banking policy early enough this afternoon, look in the center section near the front where the lions run out into their cages. We'll be there, all right.

The Nine And The 4,000.

Two delegations of farmers came to Washington last week to express their views about the new deal for agriculture. The first was received with great fanfare and official jubilation. For it came to praise the AAA and to ask only that benefit checks continue to flow into the agricultural regions as they have for the last two years. The second delegation seems to be composed largely of stragglers who have made their way to Washington in spite of the acute hardships imposed upon them by the crop curtailment program.

Very little attention has been given to these stragglers, who represent the tenant farmers of the South. Instead of being invited to the White House, they are picketing outside of the Agricultural Department Building. For they have come to Washington with complaints against and not encomiums for the AAA. The 4,000 who came to thank the Administration for favors received were lauded as a fine group of representative farmers. But the nine who seek to improve the lot of "forgotten men" on the farms of the South are dismissed by AAA officials as "radicals."

Those who know the background of these two groups will not attach much importance to the great difference in their size. Virtually all of the 4,000 have been paid by the Government for not planting cotton, tobacco or some other crop. Their status has undoubtedly been improved—at least temporarily. But the tenants who formerly cultivated land which the Government has now withdrawn from cash crops have not fared so well. They are not able to finance an elaborate demonstration in the Capital City. But that fact, even in these days of glorified press agentry, should not necessarily detract from their cause.

Perhaps the delegates of the Tenant Farmers Union are radical. Many investigators who know the conditions under which share-croppers and their families live would say that they have cause to be disgruntled. Reports from the cotton belt indicate that many tenants have been displaced under the AAA program. In one county 40 per cent of those on relief are former share-croppers. Some effort has been made to protect the interests of these landless farmers, but even official investigators for the AAA admit that the bounties distributed from Washington are not evenly divided.

After a survey of conditions resulting from the crop curtailment policy in the South, Dr. Calvin B. Hoover, economic adviser for the AAA, concluded: "The standard of living which results from a situation in which an entire family depends for its income on half of the product of some 15 acres of cotton can not be corrected by the present program of acreage reduction . . . It is plainly the duty of the AAA . . . to spare no effort in preventing the unequal distribution of the advantages of the acreage reduction program, and particularly to prevent the operation of that program from making the situation of any class of producers worse." A more outspoken report by Mrs. Mary Connor Myers is said to have been suppressed.

The contrast between the response of officials when this problem is laid at their door and when jubilant farmers meet to ballyhoo the AAA is not a happy commentary on the current farm policy.

Man's Struggle With Air.

Saturday was a black day for aviation. Fifty-three persons died in three air accidents. The destruction of the mammoth Maxim Gorky near Moscow was the most ghastly, not only from point of view of the number of victims—49 in all—but also because a smart-aleck pilot stunting in an accompanying plane precipitated the disaster. In addition to his own death, he may be said to have killed two of Russia's ace pilots and, more pathetically, a company of workers and their families who had been awarded an excursion in the air for meritorious service in the very plant where the plane had been constructed.

Inexcusable human negligence also accounted for the death of three persons in Flint, Mich., where a plane made an unsuccessful forced landing. Inspection of the wreckage revealed the sickening fact that the fuel tanks were absolutely empty. And in the death of Stanley Hausner, of transatlantic fame, who was flying over ceremonies in Detroit commemorating the death of Marshal Pilsudski, structural deficiencies were aggravated by the strain of his exhibition maneuvers.

It is not playing the Pollyanna, however, to remark two other aviation developments which may be fairly construed as offsetting some part of the day's gloom. Lieut. Comdr. Tomlinson added three new world's speed records and two new American records to the fourteen he had set earlier in the week. Speed is a prime factor in safe and efficient air travel, inasmuch as cumbersome and weighty fuel loads decrease as the running time between land stations is cut down. The new records, then, mark a further advance in the conquest of the air.

On the same day announcement was made of a regular round-the-world air service, to begin within a few months. A new dirigible for the North Atlantic service is nearing completion in Germany, the European base on the schedule. In securing the services of the redoubtable Hugo Eckener, Germany's air veteran, whose record for safe flying stands without equal in aviation annals, the sponsors may congratulate themselves that they have some part of the best genius that contemporary aviation can offer to aid in the furtherance of their hopes.

So the struggle continues. The day's victims are mourned by the world. Their deaths re-emphasize the weaknesses in man's attack. Human frailties yet must be supplanted by more perfect mechanisms, such as the gyro pilot and the homing compass. The day can not be long dawning when the elements of the air will be brought to heel to serve with all the constancy already accorded by the land and the sea.

An Employment Policy.

Interest in the work relief program naturally centers in the jobs it is expected to create. On the type of employment to be provided the act itself is vague and uncertain. Congress left the problem of determining wages, working conditions, etc., almost entirely to the President. But White House advisers, it appears, have not been able to agree upon a general policy. As a result some members of Congress are trying to revive the "prevailing wage" issue on Capitol Hill.

It appears unquestionable that Congress has surrendered any right to control the labor policy to be followed. The fight for compulsory payment of prevailing wage rates on all work relief projects was clearly lost in the Senate. Attempts to thresh out that issue again would only delay important legislation and hamper the Administration's efforts to get job-creating machinery into operation.

Within the executive ranks, however, a number of momentous decisions must be made and each of them will have a vital bearing upon the character of this latest recovery venture. How will wages be fixed? Will the beneficiaries be chosen only from the relief rolls? How many hours of work per week will be permitted? Will preference be given to the most efficient applicants or to those who appear to have the greatest need? These questions can not be satisfactorily answered in a day.

It is typical of the work-relief program that discussion of these significant problems is still going on after more than a billion dollars has been tentatively allocated and when construction operations are expected to begin almost immediately. The absence of a clear-cut employment policy, and of machinery to carry it out, may easily prove serious. But the Administration appears to be so anxious to spend its enormous appropriation that it is going forward before the most essential guide posts have been set up.

If all that is effected is a haphazard transfer of men from relief rolls to pay rolls financed by the Government, the possibility of repeating the mistakes of the CWA will be great. But if the Administration works out a systematic employment policy, utilizing the job-placement machinery already available, a permanent contribution to stability may be made. In an undertaking of such magnitude one of the first steps should be an arrangement for the orderly employment of the 3,500,000 persons expected to participate in its benefits. If the Government is really going to separate employables from unemployables, and turn over to the States responsibility for care of the latter, systematic use of the Federal employment exchange service will be imperative.

Aircraftsman Shaw.

After constantly defying death from hardship, war and dangerous intrigue, Lawrence of Arabia finally met it face to face last week on one of the quietest, most peaceful, country roads in rural England. At the time of the accident which cost him his life, Aircraftsman Shaw, as he preferred to be called, was roaring along a Dorsetshire lane on "Boanerges" (sons of thunder), the name which he invariably gave to his successive motorcycles. The crash came when he swerved aside to avoid hitting a child. It seems ironic that he, who loved it so intensely, should have fallen a victim to what he termed "the lustfulness of moving swiftly."

At the age of 26, Lawrence, already possessed of a flair for living and cognizant of "the unpledged allegiance" of the Arabic mind, determined to lead the Arabs to a victorious rebellion against the Turks. It was this campaign, waged on the trackless battlefields of the desert, that raised Lawrence to legendary stature. His uncanny understanding of the hooded peoples; his crusader's spirit which enabled him to organize in the name of the intangible; and his unerring judgment in military strategy won legions of followers willing to stand or die by his decisions.

And yet Lawrence, for all his ability to view life and war from the panoramic aspect of a saga, was a glutton for detail and possessed an extraordinary memory. Upon losing a 400,000 word manuscript, he immediately set to work to re-write it and a friend, who saw both texts, declared that they were similar almost word for word. Likewise his translation of Homer's Odyssey from the Greek is a memorial to the meticulousness of his mind.

Perhaps no one but himself really knew what Lawrence contemplated for the future. A few were prophesying at the time of his death that he intended a Messianic reclamation of postwar youth. But this is doubtful in view of his belief that "perfection, even in the least of things" would "entail the ending of the world." His hopes and ambitions, therefore, must forever remain as uncertain as the obscure resolves which motivated his years of action. Ascetic in his tastes, heroic in his conceptions, Lawrence voiced an expression that may well serve as his epitaph when he said that ". . . all my life objects had been gladder to me than persons, and ideas than objects."

The ears and throat are sympathetically connected, according to a physician. This may explain why so many things we hear give us a pain in the neck.

Success is something which we buy with liberty, and we usually get cheated in the deal.

"My demands are simple."—Townsend. An understatement, if ever there was one.

Never Used!

During the temporary absence of Mr. Elderman, The Post's cartoonist, a symposium of editorial reaction to current national and foreign affairs will be published from day to day in this space. The reprinted drawings will not necessarily represent our own viewpoint, but are selected as reflections of considered opinions on the passing scene. Letters To The Editor

Ol' Man River.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You may agree with me in the view that the Mississippi River and tributaries is United States' Enemy No. 1; it has destroyed an estimated half of our natural resources; it has cost us in divers ways many times the national debt; its total in annual tolls in human lives can't be computed; its floods have uprooted forests that would have built an empire; its cost in houses, livestock and crops can never be counted; the volume of soil it has vomited into the Gulf is planetary in its magnitude; its silt has slimed the sacred precincts of countless homes; its miasmal curse has bred annual scourges of sicknesses. As it roars gulfward it boasts, "Control me, or I'll destroy you. Harness and direct me, and I'll become your willing slave, your greatest economic force!"

We have millions crying for work and bread, and billions of dollars with which to pay them. This, the greatest task that ever confronted any nation, must, this time, have its share. GEORGE E. GARY.

Rome, Ga., April 25.

Sermon In Street Car.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Should we stagger the working hours further—and make the weary citizen stagger less? Or is there something else that should be staggered? Surely the poor human has staggered long enough getting to and from the scene of labor; not only staggered but he has been tossed and thrown about. And, if the facts were known, more than one strong man has lost his footing completely and fallen, a victim of the Washington trolley car system, a blanket term to include equipment, manipulation and service.

But then the argument has been offered that sedentary employment calls for exercise, and even such vicious forms as the trolley rider is compelled to take in his daily pilgrimage are beneficial, the muscles being strengthened by jerking and pulling, and the digestion improved by standing particularly when the period covers twenty minutes to half an hour). Certainly many gifted souls are able to read sermons in stones and to find good in everything.

Washington's Trees.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Right now, while the contractors are erecting the stands for the Shriners' parade, is the time to assure protection for the beautiful trees across from the White House and elsewhere. Every time one of these stands is built the trees suffer terribly.

When I think of all the trees that have been slaughtered in Washington either by official ukase or accident! ELGIE.

Fifteen-Day Anchors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who has attended and enjoyed to the fullest the series of travelogues at the Masonic Auditorium, both this year and last, I want to voice my appreciation of the privilege, but I wonder whether The Post, which sponsored these delightful entertainments, realizes how tantalizing those fascinating trips are to ye Government clerk, whose annual leave has been cut from 30 to 15 days.

This most unkindest cut of all has put an effectual quietus on the roving propensities of thousands of Federal employes who, notwithstanding their restored pay, must still content themselves with week-end visits and see-this-part-of-America-first jaunts in place of any worth-while tours, for it is sad but true that one can not go very far from home, spend very much time exploring distant spots, get back again and save any leave for emergencies, on a 15-day allowance.

The sympathetic attitude of the press on the subject of restored leave is appreciated, and if its influence in our behalf should some day bear fruit, the railroad, steamship, bus and airplane companies will notice a difference in their receipts.

GERTRUDE E. MACKENZIE.

Washington, May 14.

Advice To Mussolini.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mobilization for Abyssinia! Certainly such a prospect is not pleasing in the face of the "nervous jumpiness" now extant in an insane world.

Yet, what else can we expect? Il Duce has for years been urging his subjects to have more babies, although the population of Italy is already too dense. The surplus must go somewhere; rather than see Italians lose their racial identity by emigration to foreign lands, Mussolini conceives the idea of conquering a large slice of Africa as a field for colonization. Japan's recent seizure of Manchuria arose from a similar cause.

Il Duce claims that Ethiopians have trespassed on sacred Italian soil—they must be punished. Why doesn't he stop such pussyfooting? Why not admit the real cause of the anticipated conquest, which is already known to thinkers the world over? At least, we could then admire his frankness.

PLEBEIAN.

Washington, May 10.

Relief And The Bonus.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having served 3 years 4 months and 18 days as a volunteer on the Mexican border and during the World War, I naturally favor the payment of the adjusted service certificates which represent money due ex-service men who have rendered the most valuable service a man can for his country—that is, to save the day in time of war.

It costs lots of money appropriated for relief to actually distribute the money to the people. What will it cost to figure up and pay by writing a check for the payment of an adjusted-service certificate? I will say not more than $1. Spend about $1 on each certificate and you will send relief money which is actually due to every neighborhood in the country. Which will cost the most, the distributing of $2,000,000,000 for so-called relief, or distributing something over $2,000,000,000 to pay the bonus? Either or both will put money in circulation where it is needed. I say, pay the men who saved the country when the country needed a savior.

FITZHUGH L. WHITFIELD.

Clinton, N. C., May 10.

Who Is The Smarter?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a letter printed in your May 11 issue under the caption "Spinsters' Efficiency," the Government's policy of refusing to hire married women whose husbands are gainfully employed has the disapproval of Mr. Fisher.

He says this policy "is installing a system of false economic reasoning which places job spreading above ultimate efficiency." Mr. Fisher further states that "as a general rule, the most intelligent women are to be found among the ranks of the espoused." I suppose he refers in particular to those intellectuals who picked husbands capable of supplying their wives with commercial employment throughout their wedded existence, since these are the ones whose cause he is pleading. Mr. Fisher's whole theory is based on his supposition that the spinster remains single chiefly because she can not meet the competition of the more "intelligent" members of her sex.

Has Mr. Fisher considered the fact that thousands of attractive, intelligent and unselfish girls, actuated through a noble spirit of self-sacrifice, have remained single through choice that they might continue to aid persons dependent upon them and which duty they could not fulfill were they to conscientiously accept matrimony with its natural resultant responsibilities? As for "intelligence," who is the smarter—the girl who remains single until such time as she finds a man capable of supporting her and allowing her to assume her rightful position in the home, or the girl who grabs at the first straw she sees and gets "pot luck" with the "opportunity" to continue working at a Government desk? HENRY HARVEY.

Washington, May 13.

In Defense Of Spinsters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of May 11 I notice under the title "Spinsters' Efficiency," a letter on the subject of "Working Wives" in Government, which seemed to me a bit raw on our single sisters.

It is true of course that efficiency alone should decide the point but no need to insinuate married women are smarter than spinsters because they have landed a man. Brilliant men have married nitwits, you know.

No class should be discriminated against and no employer (including Uncle Sam) has any right snooping into the private lives of employes who are serving them faithfully.

Having passed a civil service test, having given several years of faithful service seems to mean nothing in Government service today and if the Government can break faith in this way, loyalty will be very scarce among its employes, as human beings can not be loyal to an employer who may let them down at any time.

NOT A NEW DEALER.

Gum Chewing in China.

China is having great trouble learning American chewing-gum etiquette. When the confection was first introduced into that country by our enterprising manufacturers, the Chinese first tasted, then chewed some 32 chews after the Gladstonian rule, and thereupon proceeded to swallow, as they would naturally swallow any tidbit. And for a while nothing could be done about it.

And now that the Chinese have learned the way to chew gum the habit is spreading among them so fast that many of the more enterprising American chewing-gum manufacturers are opening plants in Shanghai, Peiping, Nanking and other cities. They employ Chinese girls, and this opens new avenues of wage-earning for the daughters and wives of small shopkeepers, rickshamen, policemen and the like. Only very old Chinese, set in their ways, now swallow their gum, though it is said that Chinese housewives rather encourage the practice, which they prefer to the sophisticated chewer's habit of leaving abandoned globules of gum on chairs and tables and underfoot.

The Post Impressionist

Greenroom Evergreens.

Post Office, Monday.

WHY is it that nothing moves the memory so quickly as some reference to the theater of yesterday?

The Post-Impressionist may cast the cleverest of bait, on the best concealed of hooks, into the historic or literary fish-ponds and not get a bite for two days. But the ink isn't dry on a column of theatrical reminiscences—yes, we know we are shifting the metaphor—ere our desk is heaped with approval and condemnation, confirmation and correction.

* * *

Our casual remarks upon the George Arliss of those days before George Arliss "went on the screen" and our bold criticism of the Henry Irving legend have been flies—back to the original metaphor!—which started an Olympic of trout-jumping. We should be false to our standards if we didn't publish some of the catch. We should be surrendering to false modesty if we didn't choose for publication a letter that, at least mildly, commends us.

* * *

"Unfortunately," writes Mr. Joseph Danziger, "I missed your comparison of Arliss with Irving."

But he heard about it, anyhow.

"I have, however, heard echoes of it," he pursues, "and I believe I am with you—if those echoes are correct and if my recollections of Sir Henry are.

* * *

"The city: Chicago. The theatre: McVickar's. The top-price: $2.50—and I had, and had paid for, a front seat. (How the barkeep of Stillson's glared at my raids on his free-lunch during the balance of that week!)

"The piece was 'The Bells'. For months thereafter, I used to bury my head on the table and repeat:

"'It is the night of the a-iteenth of December, A-iteenth, A-iteenth—aigh!'"

* * *

That is Mr. Danziger's phonetic spelling. He defends it: "According to the way you are quoted to me, you err in your record of Irving's characteristic grunt. He deaspirated the sound."

* * *

"But Doc Hall is right in his estimate," Mr. Danziger continues; "also, in most other respects, you seem to be. Irving was a great stage-manager. In fact, he re-made the stage.

"And he was a great actor in one role; namely, that of Sir Henry Irving.

"Perhaps," Mr. Danziger suggests, "Americans were spoiled in those days. They had Mansfield."

* * *

As to Arliss, Mr. Danziger asks whether that actor was not "Lord Steyne" in the "Vanity Fair" that Mrs. Fiske produced. "Or," he adds, "was that two other fellows?"

It was at least one other fellow, we are pretty sure.—Respectfully referred to Mr. Nelson Bell.

Nevertheless, to the best of our knowledge and belief, Arliss did make his first American appearance with Mrs. Fiske: he was the absinthe-drunkard in "Leah Krishna", and a better performance of the sort we never saw. The Post-Impressionist remembers lunching with Arliss then and wanting him some day to star in such a role. Since, we have urged it on him many a time.

Alas, he now prefers the temperate Wellingtons, the abstemious Richelieus!

"I first saw him on the living stage and as the Minister of War in 'The Darling of the Gods'," says Mr. Danziger—"and I thought him great. But if his screened 'Disraeli' was good, it was so because he had previously been 'Disraeli' on the stage. Since he has gone into the movies, he is best as George Arliss."

Obviously, Mr. Danziger is strong for "the good old times."

* * *

Does he see any hope in the present?

Just, perhaps, a glimmer. For he concludes:

"Did you see the filmed 'Naughty Marietta?' If not, please do—and then do a column about it. Do it with reminiscences of Victor Herbert—Fritzi Scheff in 'Mademoiselle Modiste'—Montgomery and Stone in 'The Red Mill'—and all the other dear memories.

"Why, in the days when men were men, and not wisecracking chauffeurs, they would have drawn Jeanette MacDonald's carriage down Pennsylvania avenue. And they would have drunk her health, in champagne, out of her slipper!"

Well, well, the Post-Impressionist himself bears no grudge against the stars of yesteryear, nor of this year, either. Moreover, we met Herbert, heard Miss Scheff in grand opera and light, knew Montgomery, know Stone—and we have had the pleasure of presenting Miss MacDonald to an audience almost as enthusiastic as Mr. Danziger's imaginary crowd on Pennsylvania avenue.

If Mr. Danziger will send us a ticket, perhaps . . .

Our Lobbying Visitors.

ALTHOUGH concern and surprise have been expressed by many of the unlettered over the recent demonstrations of farmers and the expected pilgrimage of NRA supporters, students of trends say they are nothing more than what we might have expected. Students of trends are students who study trends, of course, and it is certainly a trend or something that has occurred in the past two years. So it was but natural that they should study it.

This trend has shown a decided movement away from private industry and initiative to dependence upon the Government. Now, we have always been a convention-going people. In the past every field of endeavor, profession or trade, had its annual convention. The doctors would go off once a year to meet with their fellow doctors to get new ideas. They would relate their unusual experiences, tell of their unusual cases. The result was that every doctor would go back to his practice with a broadened mind. Similarly, the dentists, the lawyers, the merchants, the industrialists had their conventions.

Inasmuch as the main business in the country today is to get something out of the Government, the students of trends say, it is but natural that there would be frequent conventions here where the various interests can exchange ideas on how to get this something from the Government.

The farmers, after talking with their fellow farmers and with Government officials, must have gone back home greatly enriched in the matter of ideas. They must have gotten all sorts of idea, for example, about congressmen from the way the later kept stretching their necks and trying to get before the camera in the picture which was made of them and Mr. Roosevelt from the south portico of the White House.

One may rest assured that the NRA fellows will go away even more enriched than the farmers.

Naturally, the arrangements for the NRA fellows will differ from those for the farmers. Their discussions will strike a different note. They will have different cheers and different speeches. The Administration has so many officials here that an entire new set will be provided to address them.

There won't be any whoopeeing which characterized the farmers' gathering. Rather, the NRAers are expected to have their own particular yells, such as, for example, "Rah, rah, rah, the Blue Eagle's a gay old bird; to kill her would be quite absurd." And also, "Richberg, Richberg, sis, boom, bah; are we to kick him out in the air?" You have to pronounce "air" with a broad "a" to make a go of that one, but there's no reason why it can't be done.

There will have to be something for Mr. Ward Cheney, of course, because the movement is his idea. Probably something on this order: "Cheney, wheney, hurrah; he'll get us farrh."

• • • •

The public generally should attend their experience meeting and hear how the NRA has brought them success, hear one man tell how cutting out all the other ice men in town brought more ice business to him, hear the story of the successful cleaning and pressing man who under the old order had to compete with three other cleaning and pressing men and was this creating a chaotic condition in his shop. For one thing they resorted to unfair methods such as making deliveries, keeping longer hours and being courteous to customers. But thank goodness, under NRA all of this cutthroat competition has been eliminated along with the three other cleaning and pressing men.

"And, my friends, my business has increased two-fold. It has doubled, my friends. That is what NRA has done for me."

Unquestionably, a lot of small businesses have survived the NRA and there is still a lot of competition left. But there is no reason why the minds at this meeting can't evolve ways and means of crushing these remnants, so to speak, of the old order.

One of the most important things probably to be taken up will be the matter of code assessments. Several code authorities have been having trouble making the boys chip in to maintain these authorities. Mr. Roosevelt can be appealed to do something about this. The code boys must get along.

It is not believed the meeting will find the NRA wholly unneedful of improvements. Some suggestions to be taken up are for revision of the act to permit the businesses to have any kind of code they want and to keep the employes from organizing.

"Whee! Now we're getting somewhere!"

The League Assembles

Assembly Opens Today To Consider Chaco While Council Opens Question Of Italy And Abyssinia, With Feeling That Mussolini Will Continue His Program Regardless.

By Stephane Botchev,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

THE Assembly of the League of Nations has been convoked in extraordinary session for May 20, to take up the interminable problem of the Chaco. At the same time the regular session of the League Council will open in Geneva, with Abyssinia as the principal question to be discussed.

It appears that direct negotiations between the South American states are going to diminish the importance of the Assembly's work. On the other hand, there is talk of a fresh adjournment of the Council's study of the Abyssinian complaint. Even if the Council, as seems most probable, does take up this complaint, it cannot be expected to make any real decisions in the matter. Thus, the chief interest in Geneva is concentrated, for the present session, on private conversations among the delegates, whose principal subject will be the problem of central and southeastern Europe.

The extraordinary Assembly, which occupies itself exclusively with the conflict between Bolivia and Paraguay, will have to take note of a report from the so-called Chaco committee. This committee, whose chairman is the Portuguese delegate, M. de Vasconcellos, has been meeting in Geneva from the 16th to the 20th of May. Its report to the Assembly is to contain an expose of the development of the situation since the last session of the extraordinary Assembly, and must, in particular, take account of the replies which the different governments have made to the league's invitation of January 16 to lift the arms embargo against Bolivia, while maintaining it against Paraguay.

It must be admitted that in this measure, aimed indirectly at the covenant-breaking state, Paraguay, the league has failed. Many states replied in an evasive manner, and there are even some plainly negative replies, such as the recent Norwegian note, which announces the maintenance of the embargo against both countries, without distinction. In face of this failure, it will be difficult for the committee to go farther than merely reporting past events.

BUT the league must from now on either go into action or else simply let events follow their own course. It will be recalled that the Assembly has already spoken in this affair by a report and a definitive resolution. Since this resolution has been accepted by Bolivia and is not being observed by Paraguy, all that remains for the Assembly to do is to impose its will on the violator of the covenant, or renounce the business altogether. Unfortunately, one can not expect any energetic acts from the league. It is not yet at the stage of development which could permit it to perform them. And to make grave decisions, without having the prower to execute them, is to invite ridicule. One may thus suppose that the Assembly will prefer to do nothing, and will adjourn without having changed anything in the present situation.

The question presents itself a little differently with Abyssinia. Or rather, to put it more exactly, the Abyssinian affair is in a different stage of development than that of the Chaco. The Chaco is a Manchuria about to end, and Abyssinia a Manchuria about to begin. In the Chaco case the league has already done all that it could—adopted a report and a resolution, and at present it is aware that it can not do any more than that. In the Abyssinian case the business has only just begun—the affair has only just developed in acute form.

But in this case, as well as in the other we can not expect anything more than a resolution. Even if one leaves out of account all the political circumstances in favor of Italy, one must reckon with the weight of precedent. Manchukuo, first precedent; Chaco, second precedent. Why should the council not permit Italy to act, when it has tolerated action by Japan and Paraguay? Why do any more here than there—i. e., a resolution?

BESIDES, it is seriously doubted here in Geneva whether in this affair the council will even go as far as a resolution against Italy. Indeed, since last fall, when the council began to handle the case, a significant fact has been remarked. It is that in the council itself there is no general unfavorable opinion against Italy, as there was against Japan in the Manchukuoan affair, and quite strongly against Paraguay in the Chaco. On the contrary, all the council members are singularly obliging to the Italian delegate.

The text of the minutes of the private meeting held at the beginning of the last extraordinary session of the council is particularly instructive in this regard. Abyssinia wanted to place its complaint on the agenda of the council at the session convoked to examine the French complaint against Germany. The council refused. From the minutes of the session, which have now been made public, we see that Baron Aloisi had very general support in obtaining this result.

There was only Sir John Simon to indicate that it might be desirable to hasten direct negotiations; the others were unanimous in pronouncing (and Sir John as well, as a matter of fact) that the council should not examine the affair before the present session, in view of the "sincere desire" of the two governments to settle directly with each other. And Abyssinia had to go on applying the 1928 treaty, which provides for arbitration betwene Italy and Abyssinia, but only after conciliation—which may take a long time.

IT APPEARS, then, that Italy is in a very strong position in the Council. It is even thought that she may try to postpone the question once again. At any rate, it is certain that even if the Council should give serious consideration to the affair on the twentieth, nothing which could seriously hamper the Italian preparations would come out of it. It is generally admitted that Mussolini will let procedure under the 1928 treaty drag out a little longer, in order to complete the transport of troops and material and the improvement of the Eritrean roads, and that action will be initiated late in the summer.

With these two questions before it—that of the Chaco, a very recent and very evident failure, and that of Abyssinia, a sure future proof of the weakness of the Geneva institution—the present session of the League takes on a rather melancholy aspect. The negotiations which will take place on the side, in private meetings of the delegates, will not alter the color of the picture. These conversations will prepare the new alliances in Central Europe, contrary to the Covenant and to the spirit of the League, which are to follow the Franco-Russian alliance. The discussions, which will center in the problem of Austrian independence, will also take up that of the guarantee of this independence, and the still larger question of the guarantee of the status quo in Central and Eastern Europe in general.

On the result of these preliminary conversations in Geneva will depend the importance, and even the date, of the Rome negotiations. In this connection it is now being said in Geneva that the Rome meeting will probably be adjourned from June 3 to the middle of the month.

Summer Course Listed In Government Study

A joint summer program to provide advanced undergraduate and graduate students with a first hand introduction to the Federal Government through internships, classroom work and round table discussions was announced yesterday by American University and the National Institution of Public Affairs. Students will come to Washington from June 10 to September 7 for internships and for the Summer Institute of the university's School of Public Affairs.

Women's Club Closes Season With Exhibition

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., May 19. The final meeting of the year for the Harpers Ferry Woman's Club at the home of Mrs. J. C. Newcomer here was arranged by the reading circle in honor of its leader, Mrs. Louise W. Brackett. An exhibition of her paintings was shown. Mrs. Brackett's paintings consisted of portraits, many sketches from nature and of houses in and near Harpers Ferry.

Health Unit Planned.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., May 19.—A movement to establish a county health unit in Culpeper was opened at a recent meeting of the Culpeper Red Cross Chapter. Funds were allotted for securing a nurse. The chapter is under the leadership of Mrs. Alfred S. Brand.

Ashby to Collect Taxes.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Oakland, Md., May 19.—The Garrett County Commissioners have authorized the present treasurer, Jesse J. Ashby, jr., to continue collecting the taxes for a period of one year. The inability of Walter Iman, elected treasurer last fall, to file the necessary bond of $60,000 caused the board of commissioners to act.

Two motor buses transported the pupils and their faculty advisers, M. A. Black and Archie D. Varner, to Washington.

No End of Books

Tea For The Lions.

NEW YORK. "Good Lord," said Ernest Boyd to me, looking quizically down his noble length of nose and clipped red beard, "I thought by some horrible mistake I'd got into a church!"

And it was, for a while, a very odd literary tea. Isa Glenn, Isabel Paterson, and I scarcely dared walk in the door. We'd been wafted 21 stories up in the Empire State Building to the Empire Club; had been directed by a train-announcer-like flunkey where to put our things (including two very awkward packages of herbs, maple syrup and what-not which Henry Beston of "The Outermost House" had just sent Mrs. P.). And when finally we'd been shunted on through panelled halls and over 4-inch thick rugs to the company itself, we halted. They were sitting around in silent and solemn rows, for all the world like the preparatory trance of an "experience meeting," listening to a stocky florid figure in a frock coat who sat square and alone in the center, dandled a knee, and laid down the law. At least Al Smith had no opposition.

Now Isabel Paterson is just about as accustomed to these literary teas as the rest of us are to luncheon at Childs. Every week her "Turns With a Bookworm" column in the Sunday Herald-Tribune mentions two or three such shindigs. But expecting the hurly-burly that only the book gentry can make when they get together, even she was given pause. It felt somehow sacriiegious to enter. Then we caught a few eyes, sidled in, and sat back to see who was who.

• • • •

TO begin with, I'd never have known Mrs. P. herself. It may have been the sharp, twisting, edged remarks she puts in her peripatetic column; it may have been her renown for being able to make one bite out of anybody but Sinclair Lewis or G. H. Wells in conversation. Somehow, you see, I'd fancied her as something of a tall and raging blonde. Ah, well! She is slight, very gentle-faced, very quiet. Perhaps I shouldn't have told her that she reminded me of all my aunts rolled into one—she was not amused—but I meant it with a sudden sense of affection. For she seemed so at home and natural in the company round about.

And there were others I wouldn't have known without help. Cass Canfield, head of the house of Harper, leaned forward to listen to Al Smith. Lee Hartman, editor of Harper's Magazine, I would have taken for Gorham Munson. Leonie Zugsmith, with still, oval face and carved black hair, seemed to resemble Fannie Hurst. Then Robert Cantwell, of "The Land of Plenty," suddenly looked like his photographs, and I began to get my bearings.

Ramona Herdman, publicity head for the Harper books, had come over to sit with us, and there were others who pressed close for a word of greeting with Isa Glenn, and before we knew it our non-Al-Smith end of the room had begun to be "literary tea," whole cloth and a yard wide.

• • • •

"CARL, I never really saw before how much you look like a Dutchman," says Isabel Patterson to Carl Van Doren (his fine, strong face is almost pure Zuyder Dee, though the famous bangs are thinning)—and he straightway spouts some low German as if to bear her out.

"You could not get me to Bermuda if you paid me a movie star's salary," remarks Ernest Boyd. "I am an urban. I do not swim, play games; I do not even like the sun."

"Just tell Tom Gill you saw me," says William Lengle, editor of Liberty, referring to our adventure story writer on Sixteenth street, whose last book is "Starlight Pass"—not, as the column had it, "Starlight Mesa."

"Young people ought to travel all the time," states Mrs. Patterson. "But when you're over 40, what the hell! I hate to see middle-aged women traveling. I'm never going anywhere any more."

"I still think Stanley is Herald-Tribune at heart," says Mrs. Stanley Walker. Her husband is perched on the arm of a chair, looking like a young owl, and Al Smith tells him stories of northern New York. Mr. Walker's next book, by the way, is to be called: "Mrs. Astor's Horse: A History of Bad Taste in America." Grand title, but I wish I'd asked him what the allusion meant.

And I seem to have heard that the whole affair was in honor of Al Smith's new book, about which nobody at all said a word.

2 Suits Ask $40,000 For Injuries in Fall

Clarksburg, W. V., May 19—Edward E. Welch, this city, seeks Circuit Court judgments totaling $40,000 for alleged injuries suffered by him when steps in the rear of an ice cream plant at Church and East Pike streets collapsed in May, 1934.

The court action consists of two companion suits of $20,000 each. One is against the Pure Ice Cream Co., operator of the plant, and the other against Blanche Crummitt and others, owners of the building.

Good Weather Boosts Business in Chicago

Chicago, May 19 (AP).—The Association of Commerce said today that "good weather brought good business to both Chicago retailers and wholesalers last week" with buying of early summer wares in retail establishments assuming "long-awaited volume."

"Wholesalers were kept busy by out-of-town merchants rushing to replenish inventories for a seasonal demand that has long been delayed," the report said. "Mail-order houses also had their share of the spurt."

Congress to Honor Memory of Dead

Memorial for 5 Members Set Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

The smallest number of Congressional deaths since joint memorial services were started a decade ago will be commemorated tomorrow by Senate and House members assembled in the House chamber.

But for the first time in that period a presiding officer of one of the bodies will be memorialized—Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, the late Speaker. The last Speaker who died in office was Michael C. Kerr, who died August 19, 1876.

Only one Senator was on this year's list of deceased members, the late Bronson Cutting, of New Mexico, killed in an airplane crash May 6. There were five House members, George F. Brumm, of Pennsylvania; Thomas C. Coffin, of Idaho; Rainey, Frederick Landis, of Indiana, and Anthony Griffin, of New York

A brief program of musical numbers and biographical speeches will constitute the simple service.

Asks New Generation to Ban Nationalism.

By the Associated Press.

A summons for a "new and alert generation" to banish war by sweeping aside nationalistic spirit and striving for "universal well-being" was made last night by Senator Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, in a radio address.

He branded as "merely palliatives" the various arms limitations proposals and revised resolutions for adherence to the League of Nations, adding:

"We are, indeed, forced back on the decision whether peoples and nations, fearing and hating war, can practice before it is too late the ancient preaching: All for each and each for all. • • •

"Peace will never be permanently gained until men and women are organized for fraternity, not hostility; disinterestedness, not prejudice; science, not wanton waste. To banish war is the stupendous task set before a generation in some respects ill-prepared to meet it."

Officers Re-Elected By Education Group

Officers of the Education Association of the District were reelected at a meeting yesterday at National Park Seminary. They are: E. C. Higbie, president; Hugh E. Conversation As An Art

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

MR. DEANE S. PAINE, of the Portland (Me.) Publishing Company, which issues three daily papers, has been kind enough to send me a page from the Portland Transcript of Saturday, March 30, 1850.

It contains a two column account of a Lyceum Lecture delivered by the Rev. Dr. Gannett, of Boston. He made the interesting point that although there were regularly taught in colleges and schools and to private pupils elocution, declamation, and public speaking, there had never been any provision for teaching the art of conversation. Here are some extracts.

• • • •

"And in the absence of other teachers, each one should teach himself to talk well. There were two kinds of speech. That of the orator, the public speaker; and that which men hold with one another in society, or Conversation. In the first, instruction has been given from the earliest period, while the latter has been left to its own fortune, whether good or bad; profitable or injurious. This was a serious mistake. Conversation should be taught as much as dancing, or reading, or good manners.

"To be sure, Conversation should be natural, and therefore we should be educated in order that we may acquire a natural, easy, and graceful style of conversing. Children are sent to gymnasiums and singing schools, that their bodies and voices may be educated, while their Conversation is left to take its own course. The Conversation Master is as much heeded as the Rhetorician. Correct conversation comes by nature no more than the finished dramatic reading of Mrs. Kemble.

"To talk is natural, but to converse well is an art to be acquired with care and by study. Most men, and some women, talk with great industry, but few talk well. There are more magpies than owls in society. To show the amount of conversation daily and weekly going on, the lecturer went into the following calculation.

"A person can read 20 octavo pages in an hour, and therefore in 20 hours he can read a volume of 400 pages. Now, if we suppose men to talk 3 hours per day, which is a low estimate, in a week they talk the amount of a good-sized octavo volume, and in one year the amount of 50 volumes. If we suppose one half of the 20,000 inhabitants of this city never to utter a word throughout the year, the conversation of the other half during that time will amount to 470,000 volumes, of 400 octavo pages each! A very pretty city library!

"But Conversation has higher considerations. Once oral communications wholly swayed the affairs of the world, and even now, in this age of books, talk exerts a vast influence. There are a thousand talkers to one writer, and each talker has his circle of influence. Books, too, pass into conversation, and thus exert a daily influence to elevate or debase. The dweller in the most secluded hamlet in the Green Mountains, the gold-digger in California, and the inhabitant of Australia, talk as they would not have talked had Bacon, and Shakespeare, and Byron never written. . . ."

Men, being men, can not tell you very much about women. For instance, to the young-man-in-love the opposite sex is all sweetness and light; the bachelor, who has dodged the ladies for years, believes them to be scheming minxes, and the married man is probably afraid to tell you what he really thinks.

Therefore, to get a true opinion of women, you must go to a woman for your information . . . and so we've gone to Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of The Washington Post's woman's pages, to find out about those lovely and sometimes sweet creatures who do so much to make our lives happy and miserable. And Miss Lindsay certainly tells us, and all other readers of The Post, about "The Gentle Sex." You'll find her impressions of her sisters . . . and brothers, too . . . in The Post each Sunday morning to entertain . . . and educate you. Each week she writes this amusing, intelligent column which so satirically punctures so many of our illusions, and which gives us an insight into the devious ways of women.

For example, she outlines the character of Tactful Tillie, who never comes right out and tells her friends they are getting fat. Oh, no! Tactful Tillie merely sniffs, "Are'nt you getting a bit stout, dearie?" Tactful Tillie, Miss Lindsay also reveals, prides herself on being able to find out disagreeable things by a method which is practically painless . . . to her.

Or Miss Lindsay describes the conversation at the Sunday dinner table; and her description is as true to life as the family laundry line. You can recognize Uncle Henry, who wants to talk politics, and Aunt Susan, who simply must tell Cousin Mary about those perfectly darling little needlepoint footstools she saw downtown for only $2.98, or, if you read carefully, you might recognize yourself!

We are sure that Miss Lindsay's sardonic humor will please you as much as it pleases us . . . we think it's one of the best features in The Sunday Post. Gently, oh, so very gently, the barb of her wit penetrates . . . but you're laughing so much you don't mind the sting.

"The Gentle Sex," which has become one of the best-liked columns in The Sunday Post, may be found each Sunday morning on the woman's pages of

Eugene Vidal is in a strange position.

His wife has gone to Reno, but he doesn't know whether the trip is for a divorce.

There has been no open break, of the sort usually associated with divorces, and only a few hours before she left they went to a party together. But she has gone to Reno.

The chief of the Bureau of Air Commerce of the Department of Commerce said last night at his apartment in Wardman Park:

"It is true Mrs. Vidal has gone to Reno. But about a divorce—I don't know. I don't know."

Friends of the Vidals say that a divorce has been probable for months. They have never quarreled seriously and always have been congenial, it is said, but Vidal's preoccupation with his work has caused them to drift apart.

A Busy Man.

He is a busy man and always has been. All-American quarter back at West Point, noted Army flier, commercial aviation executive and finally director of the Bureau of Aeronautics, his career has always been marked by the efficiency that only hard work makes possible.

Thirteen years ago he married Nina Gore, daughter of Senator Thomas P. Gore, of Oklahoma, and one of the most popular debutantes in town, in a ceremony attended by almost everybody of consequence in Washington. Since then they have been pointed out as one of the "ideally married" couples in Washington. They have one son, Gene.

But, friends say, they had comparatively little time to spend together, with Vidal flying all over the country in his work, with his long hours of study over plans to make American commercial aviation as efficient and as safe as science and careful regulation permit, and with the necessity of a great deal of night work.

Moved to Park Home.

For a long time they lived at 4500 Broad Branch road, the Gore home, while the Gores lived at Wardman Park. But a few weeks ago the Vidals moved to Wardman Park, and since that time rumors of an approaching divorce have grown steadily among close friends.

Friday afternoon they attended a cocktail party together. In the evening there was another party. Next day Mrs. Vidal was en route to Reno.

One friend yesterday "believed" Mrs. Vidal had not yet fully decided her course—that she intended to make up her mind during the six weeks required to establish residence, then either file suit or return.

Divorce? He Doesn't Know

Capital Recalls Lindbergh Hop On Anniversary

Field plane which soared over the city, trailing a long piece of bunting. This signal had been arranged in advance.

What followed was one of the strangest emotional outbursts Washington has ever seen. No celebration had been arranged. Therefore the individual had to blow off steam as best he could. Some did it by honking their automobile horns. Some men, ordinarily dignified, exploded with noisy whoops. Flappers—that term was in vogue at the time—shrilled with joy and skipped along the streets.

A month later fame's fair-haired boy arrived in Washington on the cruiser Memphis, and the greatest crowd in the city's history—200,000—thronged the Monument Grounds to get a look at him.

Charles Brown, 69, Dead in Fairfax

Funeral for Ex-Merchant Set for Tomorrow.

Charles Brown, 69, retired merchant of Mount Rainier, Md., died yesterday at Dranesville, Va., in Fairfax County, where he had made his home for the past year. Funeral services will be held in the Methodist Episcopal Church South at Wheile, tomorrow morning, with the Rev. Garland M. Butt, pastor of the Southern Methodist Church of Herndon, Va., officiating. Burial will be in the Chestnut Grove Cemetery at Herndon.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Ray Cockerill, of Hunters Station, and Mrs. J. C. Baker, of Sunset Hills, and a son, Arthur Brown, of Teaneck, N. J., four brothers and four sisters.

4-County Bar Dinner Will Honor 3 Judges

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., May 19.—The members of the Bar Association of Somerset, Wicomico and Dorchester counties will join in honoring the three retiring judges of the First Circuit Court—Chief Judge John R. Pattison, Associate Judges Joseph L. Bailey and Robert F. Duer—at a testimonial dinner at the Dixon Hotel, in Cambridge, next Thursday.

Chief Judge Benjamin A. Johnson has notified the bar association of the four counties of the plans for the dinner, and it is expected that every member of the association will be present to pay honor to the three judges who comprised the bench of the First Circuit during the past 17 years.

Eastern Shore Reports Rich Strawberry Crop

Onancock, Va., May 19 (AP).—It's strawberry time on the Eastern Shore, and business men are wearing broad grins. Northampton County has seen its berries sell at auction as high as $7.35 a crate. Through Thursday last week at Bay View station, over $100,000 worth of berries had been shipped north.

In Accomac County, where picking started last week, the return has been averaging $50,000 daily.

Religious Unity Urged Among China Missions

Disunion among Christian forces in China is the severest threat against social and moral progress achieved by that country in recent years, the Rev. D. Brewer Eddy, evangelist and traveler, told the congregation at First Congregational Church yesterday morning.

Occupying the pulpit as guest preacher, Dr. Eddy spoke on the subject, "China Faces a New Day." Recently he spent several months in an evangelistic tour of the country.

Listing the advances China has made in respect to transportation facilities, and community welfare, Dr. Eddy said:

"A new day is at the door for China. I plead with you to hold to your missionary enterprises, so that its march forward may continue.

Speaks of Objections.

"I am aware of the common criticism of missions in foreign fields—that we are giving people in other countries something they do not want. I think I can cite a few illustrations to prove the contrary. The Chinese do want what Christians are offering them.

"For example, 51 per cent of the college graduates appearing in China's 'Who's Who,' are graduates of Christian institutions. And if you are further interested in figures, I might report that the Chinese last year paid 50 per cent more than they had paid previously for the educational, hospital and other social welfare facilities offered them through the agencies you as Christians are supporting.

"But there is a division in Christian missions. It is manifest there, as here, that the weaknes of Christianity is the fact we are not a unit."

Reports Social Advances.

Dr. Eddy, in reporting the social advances in the Oriental country, said community welfare had superseded individual indifference among the Chinese. Fifty new bus lines had been opened in the last year. New air lines had been established, cutting down the time distances between important cities from several days to a few hours. Clean-up campaigns, organized and launched by Christian schools, had transformed the appearance of whole communities.

In addition to the Christian influence, the present Shanghai government had effected beneficial reforms for the Chinese, according to the preacher.

Religious Education Stressed by Pastor

The business of a college is to fit young people "not for jobs, but for life," the Rev. W. C. Waltemyer, professor in the department of Biblical literature at Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa., declared in a sermon yesterday morning at the Lutheran Church of the Incarnation.

Mr. Waltemyer, a former Lutheran minister in Washington, returned to the city to occupy the Church of the Incarnation pulpit as the guest of the Rev. Henry Menken, pastor.

"A liberal culture requires an acquaintance with and appreciation of the literatures; the sciences, both natural and social; history, philosophy, Biblical literature, and religion," said Mr. Waltemyer.

"In presenting such a program the emphasis is not on the mere acquisition of facts, important as many of them are; nor in developing thinkers, necessary as it is that man and women learn to think clarly and logically; but on the development of the appreciation of the good and beautiful and true.

"When culture is put on a religious basis as it is in every church college, the institution is making no mistake. There is nothing more fundamental nor determining than religion in any society. Spiritual values, which are always supreme, can best be inculcated by a positive religious emphasis."

Gideon Groups' Work Praised by Chaplain

The Gideon Association, through its activity in distributing Bibles in hotels, hospitals and jails throughout the world, has led the lives of countless men and women into careers of Christian ministry and foreign mission teaching, Lloyd B. Hershey, of Lancaster, Pa., chaplain of the Pennsylvania State Gideons, informed members of the congregation at Centennial Baptist Church yesterday morning.

Mr. Hershey was one of more than a score of Gideon speakers who spoke in 50 Washington churches yesterday. The speakers attended conference sessions over the week-end in the Y. M. C. A.

"Not until the organization of the Gideons, 36 years ago, as any concerted effort ever made for the moral uplift and salvation of the traveling man," said Mr. Hershey.

"It is now the only association that is trying directly to bring the Gospel of Christ to commercial travelers, and to all who travel. As a means to this end considerably over 1,000,000 Bibles have been placed in hotels, hospitals and jails throughout the United States and Canada.

"Fifteen hundred Bibles are being placed today in 27 different hotels and hospitals in Washington.

"One hotel proprietor reported that 70 per cent of his guests used the Gideon Bibles. Thousands of letters have been received at the Gideon headquarters. In many cases they tell of suicides being averted, simply because of the reading of a Gideon Bible."

Bonus Backers To Plead Cause At White House

Strong opposition to another farm bill, the Bankhead farm tenant measure, was expressed yesterday by the American Liberty League. The league said htat a "probable result" of the bill would be a "Government-sustained peasantry."

Urges Harsh Measures.

A league analysis of the bill, which has been reported by the Senate Committee on Agriculture, said that many of the share-croppers and tenants lack sufficient training to manage farms successfully and that a large proportion would be unable to keep up their payments. The league argued that unless the Government used harsh measures the farmers would soon be living on public bounty.

"It is inevitable," the statement said, "that political favoritism, if not outright scandal, would follow where large tracts of land, representing a liability rather than an asset to the owners under existing agricultural conditions, might be unloaded on the Government at excessive prices.

"There would be a temptation to locate land settlements at points where they would be most effective in influencing elections. There would be opportunity for all sorts of petty as well as major graft in handling so large a fund.

Sibley Hits Banking Bill.

"The support given by many members of Congress and by the Secretary of Agriculture to a bill involving as much as $1,000,000,000 and contemplating a credit policy which would not be tolerated in any private banking institution or even in any existing governmental agency offers a disheartening commentary on present policies of the Administration. The public should be on guard against the dangers involved."

At the same time, Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, strongly urged rejection of the provisions of the pending banking bill. In a letter to the chamber's 1,500 members Sibley declared that "realization is spreading among business men and their associations that it is important, in the interest of all business, that Congress does not enact provisions of Title II of the pending banking bill."

"More extensive power would be permitted a few men in Washington than is granted to the board of any foreign central bank," Sibley said. "This concentration of control of the principal functions of the Reserve Banks would mean the virtual creation of a central bank in this country, with the present regional banks relegated to the status of mere branches."

Sees Broad Inflation.

Discussing another phase of the measure he said:

"Inflationistic influence would be given broader sway and inflation or deflation or the expansion and contraction of credit would be determinable by a few men in Washington, with less rather than more independence from the interference of partisan politics or sectional influence."

The Senate Banking Committee will continue hearings on the bill today. Hearings on the proposal for extension of the NRA will open before the House Ways and Means Committee, and the House Interstate Commerce Committee will discuss the Administration holding company bill.

Veto Speech Is 54th Read by a President

By the Associated Press.

The message President Roosevelt will deliver to Congress this week vetoing the bonus bill will be the fifty-fourth communication presented in person by a Chief Executive—but the first veto message read directly by a President.

Before Mr. Roosevelt only 6 of his 31 predecessors addressed joint sessions of Congress. His immediate predecessor, Herbert Hoover, addressed the Senate once.

In dropping the practice, of personal appearances, Jefferson wrote:

"In doing this I have had principal regard to the convenience of the Legislature, to the economy of their time, to their relief from the embarrassment of immediate answers on subjects not yet fully before them, and to the benefits thence resulting to the public affairs."

In reviving it, Wilson took the attitude "the President should play the role of an English prime minister."

Ex-Chief of Legion Assails Bonus Lobby

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 19.—Revision of the constitution of the American Legion to place the "welfare of all the people above the interests of its own members as a class" was suggested last night by George Brokaw Compton, attorney and World War veteran, in a letter to President Roosevelt. Compton called "the veterans' lobby National Legislative Public Enemy No. 1."

One of the organizers of the American Legion at St. Louis in 1919, Compton resigned in 1920 as commander of a New York post in protest over the bonus.

Criticizing "bonuses for able-bodied veterans," Compton said it was best to "fight fire with fire." He held that as the veterans' lobby promised to exert pressure at the polls against bonus opponents in Congress, citizens against cash payments for able-bodied veterans should use the same tactics.

Belgrano Appeals For Bonus Pressure

By the United Press.

Fremont, Wis., May 19.—National Commander Frank Belgrano of the American Legion today called upon legionnaires to "see to it, through letters or telegrams, that Congress overrides the President's veto" of the Patman bonus bill.

His address, given on the second day of a two-day legion first annual fishing party, was heard by some 2,000 persons.

"At the Miami convention the American Legion indorsed the Vinson plan for payment of the soldiers' bonus," he said, "and went on record against inflation of the currency as a means of assuming this obligation. We gave our pledge, however, that we would abide and indorse the plan selected by Congress. Now that that legislative group has passed the Patman bill we are wholeheartedly back of it, and it is the duty of every legionnaire to see to it, through letters or telegrams, that Congress overrides the President's veto."

School in Warrenton To Present Pageant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., May 19.—With almost the entire student body taking part, the Warrenton County Day School will present an Elizabethan pageant here Saturday under the auspices of the local garden club. The affair is to be given in the open air theater of the school with a supper following. Receipts will be used as a donation to the Elizabeth Price Martin memorial by the garden club body.

In the pageant the part of Queen Elizabeth will be taken by Eleanor Whitman; William Shakespeare, by Elizabeth Alexandre, and Jessica, by Laura Beatty.

Imagining Pursuit, Man Leaps in River

A soaking in the Potomac River was better than capture by "a couple of fellows" who were "chasing" Richard Crampton yesterday, he told police.

Crampton lives in the 4500 block of Canal road northwest. He was standing near his home yesterday, when, with a quick glance over his shoulder, he started to run. He ran to the river edge and jumped in.

Charles Baggett, a neighbor, went to Crampton's rescue and dragged him from the water. Police were called. Crampton said two men were after him and pursued him into the river. Baggett said he saw everything—except the two men.

So Crampton was sent to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation and drying out.

Visitors Praise Exhibit Home At Clarenford

Praised by its visitors, The Washington Post's popular priced home had a successful showing yesterday on the occasion of its initial presentation. Furnished by the Palais Royal, this house, priced at $7,990, is the product of McGolrick Building Corporation and directs attention to its new development, Clarenford Homes, in nearby Virginia.

It will be open daily from 9 to 9 o'clock until further notice and may be seen by driving out Lee highway 3 miles to Glebe road and at the first traffic light, turning left three-quarters of a mile to the home. Two bus lines pass the property. The house may be purchased for a small cash payment and the balance may be paid like rent. The price includes a detached brick garage.

This exhibit dwelling in a beautifully wooded section of the Virginia suburbs, is the first completed residence of this new operation. It is built of solid brick and field stone and situated on a corner lot, 50x150 feet, with lovely shade trees.

Feature of its construction and equipment are furred walls, brass plumbing, copper flashing, guttering and downspoting, wood burning fireplace, elaborately colored tile bathroom, built-in with glass inclosed shower, domestic science kitchen cabinets, oak flooring, American Radiator Co. hot water heating plant, standard sanitary plumbing fixtures, Johns-Manville roof, steel casement windows, chromium hardware and Magic Chef gas range.

Kiwanians to Hear Gordy.

Administration of the Maryland gross sales tax will be explained by State Comptroller William S. Gordy, at a meeting of the Prince Georges County Kiwanis Club Thursday night at the Beaver Dam Country Club.

19 Feared Dead As Gales Sweep The Southwest

Toll in Lives and Property Mounting in Oklahoma and Texas.

By the Associated Press.

Burkburnett, Tex., May 19.—Texas and Oklahoma counted a toll of 19 persons dead or missing in floods and windstorms today as rain-swollen streams continued to pound the countryside.

Four persons in a motor car were plunged into raging Red River here when an interstate bridge collapsed last night, capping a series of fatalities in the latest spring spree of nature, which has become prodigal in the Southwest after a long period of distressing drought.

The body of Mrs. J. P. Pickerell, 28, wife of a Burkburnett motor car salesman, was found 3 miles below the bridge.

Others known to have been in the car were Pickerell, 28, Chief of Police Bill Garland, about 62, and Mrs. E. O. Reavese, about 24, all of Burkburnett. The empty car was recovered.

Officers said a strip of railroad ties, washed from a bridge upstream, battered down the highway span.

Eight persons were killed in tornadoes that roared over north and central Texas yesterday. The total of known dead in Oklahoma reached three with the discovery today of the body of Mrs. Claude Gowens, 70, lodged in brush near Olustee. Search was on for four other persons believed to have been drowned in flooding Turkey Creek.

Damage Is Great.

Damage to homes, live stock, crops, railroads, highways and bridges in the two States was estimated unofficially around $3,000,000.

Burkburnett police said three motor cars were on the concrete bridge here when it cracked. Two cars backed off the bridge before 150 feet of the span crumbled into the stream, but the third auto was hurled into the water.

Death of Oscar Gilbert, crushed in the wreckage of his home at Beloit, Houston County, brought the Texas torando fatality total to eight. Four other persons trapped in their homes at Weches were near death.

At least 70 other persons were treated for injuries received in freakish windstorms at Teague, Weches, Belott, Cadmor, Headne, Oakwood, Turlington, Gilmer and Timpson.

Skies Brighten.

Sunny skies along the route of Red River, which is the main Oklahoma-Texas boundary line, quieted fears of more rain today and concern over floods was restricted to the movement of crests and accumulation from tributaries.

Ample rains brought mild flood conditions to sections of the dust-ravaged area to the northwest. Farmers in the "dust-bowl" region of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico and Colorado, planned happily to sow spring crops and there was even some hope of small wheat crops as moisture sprouted dormant seeds.

Heavy snows and rains in the mountains west of Pueblo brought flood threats. The Arkansas River at Pueblo was at the highest stage since 1921, when a torrent swept out of the mountains to flood a low-lying section of the city with a heavy loss of life.

Sunday was a day of thanks in churches around Springfield, Colo. The Red Cross hospitals set up there and at Walsh, Colo., to care for the persons suffering respiratory ailments aggravated by dust storms were closed and the patients, now well, sent home.

Bear Creek, ordinarily dry, roared over the Springfield-Lamar highway. Woodward, a city of 5,056 population in northwest Oklahoma, was without drinking water today. The city's mains were washed out by flood waters yesterday.

Residents living in the lowlands along the Guadalupe River in southern Texas were warned to flee to higher ground today as overnight rains swelled the stream.

Engineers of the Central Power & Light Co. at Cuero said the Guadalupe probably would reach a stage of 35 feet. Two weeks ago, 16,000 acres of farm land was inundated when the river climbed to 22 feet.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, May 17.

NOW that Columbia Pictures is an important major studio, the yarn of how it obtained its monicker is being related by several who insist it is a true story . . . When Columbia Pictures started in the small shanty studio in Poverty Row the company was owned by Harry Cohn, Jack Cohn and Joe Brandt. Then the average flicker they made went out under the trade name of the C. B. C. Co. This was the usual program picture, but when this small company made, what was for them a class picture, they used another trade mark. What is one of the words which signifies class to the sticks? Harry, Jack and Joe believed that word to be Waldorf. When the C. B. C. Co. made a class picture it was known as a Waldorf picture.

In 1923 Jesse Lasky started to film an epic called "Hollywood," which was the first of the big flickers about the cinema town. The Cohns heard of this, liked the idea, and decided to film their own epic of Hollywood.

• • • •

The Jesse Lasky "Hollywood" cost $380,000 to produce, but C. B. C. on Poverty Row could spend only $11,800 on theirs. It was called "Mary of the Movies," and told the story of little Mary and how she came to Hollywood to get into pictures and met all the stars. Mary was played by Mary Mack, and she actually would walk up to the then prominent players and while she was talking to one, Director McDermott would ask if he could take a picture of it. Among the stars who appeared in "Mary of the Movies" in this manner, without pay, were J. Warren Kerrigan, Creighton Hale, Barbara La Marr, Rex Ingram, ZaSu Pitts, Marjorie Dawes, Dorothy Dalton, Agnes Ayres, Estelle Taylor, Richard Dix, Wallace Beery and a host of others.

• • • •

"MARY OF THE MOVIES" was finally completed; in fact it was ready for release before Jesse Lasky had his picture "Hollywood" ready. This was the way Poverty Row worked. Harry Cohn looked at the picture in the projection room and declared it lousy.

It was supposed to be a class picture, a Waldorf special, but Cohn wouldn't let it be released under that name. He wouldn't even allow it to be released under the trade mark of C. B. C.; that's how bad he believed "Mary of the Movies" to be.

"Under what trade name will we release it?" Cohn was asked. He decided quickly. "We'll call it a Columbia picture," he said. "No one ever heard of Columbia."

"Mary of the Movies" was the first Columbia picture ever made. It turned out to be a freak hit. The exhibitors wrote in asking for and demanding more Columbia pictures. "We don't want C. B. C.'s and Waldorfs," they wrote, "give us some more Columbias." And so the firm's name and product was changed to Columbia to satisfy the exhibitors.

Charles Laughton is going to make a record of his recitation of Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address," exactly as he did it in "Ruggles of Red Gap," for the Brunswick company . . . Alice Faye, who only a week ago said she would be dancing with Nelson Eddy, was dancing with Nelson Eddy the other evening.

THE younger group of screen actresses such as Jean Parker, Cecelia Parker, Ann Shirley, Mary Carlisle and others in that classification, have a tougher time with their off screen romances than you imagine. These younger actresses are making too much money for their genuine boy friends who are not in the picture business. Many of them are still attending college. The boy friends can't afford to take the screen actresses to the Hollywood night clubs, where they like to go to be seen. And many of the lads refuse to allow the actress to pay the check, although they have offered to do so. This is one of the reasons that Jean Parker and her boy friend from school days had to separate, and it is why Cecelia Parker isn't seen around with her real romantic lead, a college football player.

Joe Calleia has one of the grandest entrance scenes into flickers that any actor ever had in "Public Hero," the Metro picture about Government men. He follows up this entry sequence with a fine performance and will become one of your favorite bad men . . . Irving Berlin tells this on himself: He was playing the piano at home, trying to write a new tune. His daughter, Mary Ellen, age 8, entered and listened to him for a while. Then she asked, "What are you doing?" Without stopping, Berlin answered, "I'm composing, Mary Ellen—I'm inventing a new tune." Mary Ellen listened a little longer, and then said: "What you are inventing sounds very much like the classical piece, 'Hansel and Gretel,' I heard yesterday."

Wall St. Awaits Money Views Of President

Asks Whether He Will Amplify Statement of Morgenthau.

By Claude A. Jagger,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, May 19.—The financial world has embarked once more on the murky and agitated waters of monetary controversy.

President Roosevelt made decisive preparations last week to block the printing of $2,000,000,000 of fiat money in the United States to pay off the soldier bonus.

Secretary Morgenthau set the exchequers, treasuries and central banks of Europe, humming with discussions and arguments over stabilization, with his statement viewed as an open invitation to Great Britain to stabilize the pound sterling.

The first item on the financial calendar for the new week is President Roosevelt's appearance before a joint session of the Senate and the House to deliver his message with his veto of the $2,000,000,000 cash bonus bill.

New York and other financial centers await expectantly for whatever new light the President may then choose to shed upon the monetary program of his administion.

The fundamentals of currency issuing and banking in the United States have been dragged forth for fresh examination and possible drastic alteration with the Treasury Secretary's statement last week that he thought the Government should own the Federal Reserve Banks, and the support his statement received at the White House. Another expression of the Secretary's seen as fraught with significance was his statement he thought the Federal Reserve should be free from political control.

Did those expressions mean that the Administration was leaning toward a Government-owned central bank, for which there has been agitation in and outside of Congress? Or did it mean a leaning toward a "Federal monetary authority," a sort of Supreme Court of money, which has been espoused by F. A. Vanderlip and others?

Bank Issues Show Decline for Week

But Decrease Is Only 0.88 Per Cent.

New York, May 19.—New York City bank stocks registered a small decline during the past week, according to records compiled by Hott, Rose & Troster. The aggregate value of 16 leading issues totaled $1,241,139,000 on May 17, compared with $1,252,318,000 on May 10, a decrease for the week of $11,179,000, or 0.88 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 5.70 per cent compares with a yield of 5.65 per cent on May 10. The current market value is now 1.02 times the known book value against .03 times at the close of the previous week. Based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 11.7 times their known earnings, compared with 11.8 times on May 10.

Shell Transport Pays Five-Shilling Dividend

New York, May 19 (AP).—The Chase National Bank announced today that the Shell Transport & Trading Co. will pay a dividend equivalent to five shillings on the American shares.

Distribution will be in connection with a dividend of 2 shillings 8 pence, ordered by the directors at a recent meeting in London on the British ordinary shares. This disbursement is payable in London on July 9.

1,524 National Banks In Receivers' Hands

The Controller of the Currency, J. F. T. O'Connor, announced yesterday that during April, the receiverships of 13 insolvent national banks were liquidated and finally closed and four receiverships were restored to solvency. During the same month receivers were appointed for two national banks formerly in voluntary liquidation resulting in a net reduction of 15 receiverships for the month and leaving a total of 1,524 national bank receiverships as of the close of business April 30, 1935.

Upward Trade Trend Becomes More Uniform

Public Seems to Have More Spending Money, Say Dun & Bradstreet.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 19.—A more uniform trend in trade last week was noted by Dun & Bradstreet in its weekly review issued today.

"Irregular trade movements of recent weeks gradually are giving way to a more uniform upward trend," it was stated. "Settlement of labor difficulties has permitted industrial operations to hold to a steadier level, and buying in wholesale markets is on the increase, as summer requirements press more strongly for attention.

"In those parts of the country where a lag in retail sales persists, it is attributed largely to unfavorable weather conditions, as the public appears to have more money to spend, which is indicated by the unchecked demand for automobiles, radios, electric refrigerators, and a gain of 20 to 25 per cent in the paid admissions to motion picture theaters as compared with the figures of a year ago.

"Retail sales for the week averaged 5 to 10 per cent larger than for the comparative 1934 period, taking the country as a whole.

"Although lacking strength in a few lines, wholesale volume was larger than that for the week preceding."

Stock Change Proposed By American Zinc Co.

New York, May 19.—The committee on securities of the New York Stock Exchange has received notice from American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Co. of a proposed change in capital stock so that there will be authorized 75,000 shares prior preferred stock, par value $25; 75,000 shares preferred stock par value $25, and 950,000 shares common stock par value $1.

The Bankers Trust Co., as trustee under the Erie Railroad Co. refunding and improvement mortgage dated December 1, 1916, has notified the committee on stock list that it actually holds $36,456,150 principal amount of Erie Railroad Co.'s general lien 4 per cent gold bonds, due January 1, 1966, as collateral subject to the mortgage, instead of the $29,456,150 previously reported.

Robert A. Taft a B. & O. Director.

Baltimore, May 19 (AP).—Robert A. Taft, of Cincinnati, son of the late President, has been elected a director of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the company announced today.

Steel Capacity 45½ Per Cent; Gain of 1 Point

Settlements in Auto Strikes Leads to Higher Output.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 19.—Iron and steel markets reflect the steadying influence of labor settlements in the automobile industry, and last week steelworks operations again advanced 1 point to 45½ per cent, states the magazine Steel.

Chevrolet and Fisher have released a large proportion of the material recently snspended, automobile assemblies for the week increased about 3,000 units to 90,000, and this week full-finished sheet production is scheduled at 60 per cent, up 6 points. Tin plate mills operations have made another gain of 5 points to 85 per cent.

The most significant development in the week was the decision by iron and steel producers to extend prices for third quarter, notwithstanding fresh inflation sentiment, and increased costs due to freight surcharges. This means that there will be no speculative buying this month or in June, such as that which stimulated operations at this time last year.

Of course, what prices eventually prevail for third quarter depends on the fate of NRA and the steel code June 16. The intent in reaffirming prices at this time, apparently, is to stabilize the future markets. Out of the industry's two-year experience with its code there has come a recognizable base of fair prices and practices.

Western railroads will spend $19,000,000 this year on air-conditioning passenger cars, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western has awarded 1,000 tons of tie plates. The official report on rail production for 1934, just issued, shows 1,010,224 tons, two and one-half times the 1933 tonnage and approximately that of 1931.

Finance, Business, Economics

Monetary Stabilization Prospects Brighter; New Rise In Pound May Hasten British Acquiescence; Would Help Stem Inflation Development Here.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, May 19.—While the prospects for currency and credit inflation continue to preoccupy popular attention to a large extent, those who scan the economic horizons closely discern a new fundamental influence which seems likely to influence financial and business conditions substantially before long. This is the greater likelihood of international currency stabilization, with American encouragement and direct aid, before the end of the year.

The financial district is rife with reports that informal conversations are going on between the United States and Great Britain, following the announcement by Secretary Morgenthau last week that this country was ready for stabilization at around the present exchange levels. Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain indicated a few days later that stabilization was an ultimate objective in Great Britain also, and that country will watch for a suitable opportunity to advance this aim.

In the meanwhile, informed bankers say that the British are increasingly concerned over the current sharp rise in the pound sterling well above the old parity of $4.86 to the dollar. This rise is taking place despite selling of pounds by the British equalization account to stop the advance. It results from a considerable flight of capital from the continent, especially France, to London. Peculiarly enough, talk of forthcoming monetary stabilization depresses the gold currencies and advances sterling, in view of the widespread belief in Europe that France, Holland and Switzerland may reduce the gold content of their currencies at the time of general currency stabilization, in order to readjust their relation to the pound and the dollar. Hence, funds are being rushed to London from the gold bloc countries to escape such rumored devaluation.

The resulting danger of a further advance in sterling which might have adverse repercussions on British foreign trade and commodity prices is held likely therefore to hasten acquiescence in the Morgenthau proposal for immediate stabilization, at least on a temporary, "de fecto" basis.

War Debt Settlement Rumors Reviving.

Another significant straw in the wind is the renewed discussion of the war debt problem among members of Congress. The suggestion that the President be empowered to settle this question is strongly favored in financial circles, where it is believed that the whole troublesome issue could probably best be handled by an executive who is not regarded with suspicion by Congress as being too friendly to other nations. Latterly, President Roosevelt has displayed a more nationalistic attitude in some of his pronouncements, which may make Congress more willing to entrust final settlement of the war debt to him. Simultaneous settlement of the war debts would make monetary stabilization more acceptable to European nations, especially Great Britain. Also, it would be an additional incentive to enter into such an arrangement at this time.

A third factor affecting the international economic outlook is the discussion of repeal of the Johnson act, which bars new loans to nations in default on debts due the United States Government. If no final war debt settlement can be reached first, the Johnson act may prove a serious bar to general stabilization, in view of the fact that it would prevent the grant of needed stabilization credits to a number of European nations. Accordingly, it is being urged that the Johnson act be eliminated from the statute books, at least as regards credits for currency stabilization, in order to facilitate a general return to the gold standard on a lasting basis.

Why We Are More Eager For Stabilization.

A definite connection evidently exists between the present increased desire of the Administration to see a general monetary stabilization without much delay, reflected in the Morgenthau radio address and the Hull comments, and the growing fear of inflation in this country. A definite return to the gold standard would, for one thing, enable the opponents of dangerous monetary expedients, like the printing of greenbacks, to point to the resulting threat to the stability of the dollar.

Far more important, however, would be the fact that, with currencies and price levels better adjusted to each other, a runaway price rise in one nation would tend to bring in a flood of imports which would hold back the advance in commodity quotations. If what is now often referred to as a "fear inflation" should develop in the United States and commodity prices should actually embark upon a rapid rise, currency stability would facilitate a heavy increase in our imports, even over our high tariff barrier, which should have a distinctly restraining effect.

Another reason believed here to be behind the apparent increased desire of the country to see the major currencies of the world stabilized is the problem of financing the Treasury deficit. The market for gilt-edged bonds has been ragged and irregular during the past few weeks, despite the expansion in member bank excess reserves to an unprecedented total above $2,350,000,000. The reason for this is to be found entirely in the fear of inflation generated by the bonus agitation and the banking bill of 1935, which has caused switching from bonds into stocks on a material scale. As an antidote to such influences, currency stabilization would tend to encourage investment in longer term obligations, and so aid the Treasury's heavy financing program.

12 Companies File With SEC

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced the filing of 12 additional registration statements under the securities act. The total involved is $32,382,167.07, of which $31,547,167.07 represented new issues.

This total includes a $15,500,000 issue of first mortgage bonds, 4 per cent series, to be dated May 1, 1935, to mature May 1, 1965, of the San Diego Consolidated Gas and Electric Co.

Highest Road To Shut Down

Continental Divide Line of Denver & Salt Lake to Be Abandoned.

The Continental Divide Line of the Denver & Salt Lake Railroad in Colorado will be abandoned in 30 days under a decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has authorized the railroad to use the Moffat Tunnel route exclusively.

The Divide line extends from Newcomb by way of Corona, village of highest altitude in the United States, to Vasquez, a distance of 31.76 miles. It was used for many years by the Denver, Northwestern & Pacific Railway and the Denver & Salt Lake Railroad to cross the Rockies.

Since the completion February 26, 1928, of the tunnel, which was built to cut the grade and decrease the traveling time between the East and the West, the Divide line has been used only once, in 1929, when there was a small cave-in in the tunnel.

There are no intermediate settlements on the line, but it will be kept in working condition in case of trouble in the tunnel.

Beet Sugar Volume 9.4% Under Last Year

New York, May 19.—Deliveries of all United States beet sugar companies are up to schedule with 34.2 per cent of the quota filled during the first four months of this year, but are 9.4 per cent behind last year's volume, according to calculations of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange, made from figures of the United States Beet Sugar Association. Deliveries from January through April aggregated 495,758 short tons of refined sugar, a decrease of 51,259 tons, compared with deliveries during the similar 1934 period.

H. E. Foreman on Bank Board.

Chicago, May 19 (AP).—The American National Bank & Trust Co. announced today that Harold E. Foreman, of the Chicago banking family, would become a vice president. He formerly was chairman of the board of the old Foreman National Bank.

Ford Regains Leading Place In Auto Sales

Displaces General Motors to Which He Lost Top Position in 1931.

New York, May 19.—New passenger car sales in the first quarter of 1935 surpassed by a wide margin the volume in the corresponding quarters of the previous four years and were slightly above the 1928 figure, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Only in the prosperity year of 1929 and the following year did new passenger car sales exceed the volume of the current year.

Actual registration totaled 568,727 cars this year, as compared with 328,416 in the first quarter a year ago, 288,065, the low in 1933, and 839,527 in the peak year 1929. Sales were thus 72.6 per cent above 1934, 149.4 per cent above the low in 1933, but 32.3 per cent below the 1929 level.

A new alignment took place in the motor car industry in the first quarter. Ford, with sales of 206,019 cars, regained first place which it had lost in 1931, replacing General Motors, whose combined sales totaled 183,899. Chrysler was third with a volume of 138,365 automobiles.

The "Big Three," Ford, General Motors, and Chrysler made further inroads in the automobile market in 1935. Sales of the "Big Three" represented 93.0 per cent of the total car sales in the first quarter, as compared with 90.9 per cent for the full year 1934.

New Oil Fields Needed to Fill U. S. Demands

Underproduction Period Is Predicted Unless Reserves Are Found.

New York, May 19.—A period of substantial underproduction may lie ahead of the oil industry unless new reserves are uncovered before the present large producing fields lose their flush production, according to Anderson & Cromwell, Inc., investment counselors. Pointing out that production has been more or less controlled since 1933, when the Federal Government commenced regulatory measures through the NRA oil code and proration, the analysis continues "nevertheless, stocks of oil were declining during the period 1930 to 1933 despite no limitation of production.

"From March, 1930, to the present time oil in storage has declined almost steadily from over 700,000,000 barrels to 565,000,000 barrels in January, 1935, in spite of the flush production from the Oklahoma City and East Texas fields. The number of days supply has diminished from about 360 days to 290 days during this period.

"The new Federal control legislation, designed to satisfy the objections of the Supreme Court to the old methods under the NRA, tightens the regulatory powers of the Government and makes it possible not only to control current production from existing fields, but also to control new drilling. This legislation unquestionably strikes at the root of past troubles in the industry and offers a protection against their recurrence.

"While the price of crude oil has been stable at $1 per barrel for over a year, there are certain strong forces working in favor of higher prices in the coming months. In the first place the market for petroleum products is steadily expanding and promises to exceed all previous records in 1935. Secondly, with increased coperation within the industry and better Federal control of production, the available supply can be kept more nearly in line with the demand. Finally, prices are relatively low today, even after the substantial improvement since 1932. There is therefore room for sizable price advances throughout the industry.

"The outlook for the oil industry, as a vital part of our existence and fulfilling an increasing demand, warrants its representation in a well designed investment portfolio. The stronger producing and well integrated companies with large reserves in the ground are particularly attractive for investment."

Cotton Supply Less But Still Above 1924

New York, May 20.—Supplies of American cotton in this country are considerably smaller than on the corresponding date in recent previous years, but they are much larger than prior to the depression, according to the New York Cotton Exchange Service. A large portion of the supply was under Government control, some of which has been sold since April. The stock of cotton in this country at the end of this season promises to show a further reduction.

Major Angas Offers a Cure For Money Ills

Currency Manipulation Advised by Author of the 'Coming Boom.'

New York, May 19.—The main factors in "The Boom Begins," the book written by Maj. L. L. B. Angas as a sequel to "The Coming American Boom," is "the necessity for a profit motive, advance in prices because of money velocity, the necessity for manipulation of money, and, a combining of open inflationary attitude with a business revival," according to an opinion on the work by J. L. Amberg, economist of Harriman & Keech.

"The major points out the number of 'diseases of money,' including the impropriety of a rigid automatic gold standard; undesirability of a purchasing demand for money subject to mass psychology, as well as the haphazard confidence which governs the supply of money," Mr. Amberg observes. "The last two phases alone can be cured, in the opinion of Mr. Angas, by manipulating the supply of money and then trying to keep in the middle of an inflationary-deflationary road.

Suggests Central Bank.

"The third monetary disease specified is that of our present collateral bank lending system, which, it is thought, can be cured or obviated by a central banking authority of a new sort. Another difficulty suggested is the ordinary difficulties inherent in a dual form of money—legal tender as well as bank balance. When trade declines and prices and wages follow, less legal tender is necessary, and as it flows back into the banks with an increase in reserves, sooner or later bank investments are augmented.

"After a lag, then, there is a turn in the cycle, or an improvement in trade, because of idle balances. The cure for this, Maj. Angas says, is an increase in legal tender when bank resources are strained, providing, of course, price levels are not rising. The last of the money illnesses is that bank reserves or gold may be exported, setting in motion an internal credit currency contraction. The suggested cure is to refuse to use an exportable currency like gold. This, in our estimation, is more easily said than done."

Rock Island Value Made $445,809,449

Final Figure Is Set by the I. C. C.

A final value of $445,809,449 for rate-making purposes as of December 31, 1932, for the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway System has been found by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The road had refused to accept a higher valaution fixed in May, 1934, and the case was appealed. Reductions were made by the commission in the cost of reproduction in several parts of the system. The price of steel rails, estimated at $40 a ton in the first valuation, was reduced to $37.

New York, May 19 (AP).—The bondholder protective committee headed by Jacques Cohen, of Barr, Cohen & Co., New York Stock Exchange members, has completed a reorganization plan for Pressed Steel Car Co. which was forwarded today to the United States District Court, Western District of Pennsylvania.

Home Loan 1½ Per Cents Offered for 4s

Only Outstanding Bonds Will Be Accepted for New Issue.

The Secretary of the Treasury, on behalf of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, announces an offering of four-year 1½ per cent bonds of the Home Owners Loan Corporation of series F-1939, in payment of which only Home Owners Loan Corporation 4 per cent bonds of series of 1933-51 called for redemption on July 1, 1935, may be tendered.

The present offering is strictly on an exchange basis and will be limited to the amount of the called 4 per cent bonds tendered and accepted. Cash subscriptions will not be received, but to the extent the called 4 per cent bonds are not exchanged at this time an additional amount of the 1½ per cent bonds may subsequently be offered for cash.

The bonds now offered will be dated June 1, 1935, and will bear interest from that date at the rate of 1½ per cent per annum, payable semi-annually. They will mature in four years, on June 15, 1939, and will not be subject to call for redemption prior to maturity.

The bonds will be fully and unconditionally guaranteed both as to principal and interest by the United States, and, as more specifically stated in the offering circular, they will be exempt both as to principal and interest from all Federal, State and local taxation (except surtaxes, estate, inheritance and gift taxes) now or hereafter imposed.

Bearer bonds with interest coupons attached will be issued in denominations of $25, $50, $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000 and $100,000; they will not be issued in registered form.

Applications will be received at the Federal Reserve Banks and branches and at the Treasury Department, Washington, D. C. The right is reserved to close the books as to any or all subscriptions at any time without notice.

Capital Society Is Seen at Congressional Country Club Tournament

Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Alexander Wed in South to George Webb

Of interest to Washington is the wedding of Miss Peggy Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vance Jackson Alexander, of Memphis, Tenn., and Mr. George Crockett Webb, of Evansville, Ind., son of the vice chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and Mrs. T. Dwight Webb, of Washington, which took place Saturday afternoon in St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church in Memphis, at 5:30 o'clock. Dr. George Stoves officiated. Special choral music was played preceding and during the ceremony. The altar was banked with delphinium and gladiola against a copper-colored background. Candles and Southern smilax also decorated the church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a Lanvin madonna model of white satin, with a coronet an illusion veil from Judith Barbier. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Marie Meriwether Serves.

Miss Marie Meriwether, of Clarksville, Tenn., who was the maid of honor, wore a gown of delphinium blue chiffon and a flesh-colored lace straw hat. Her gloves were of the same shade of chiffon and she carried a bouquet of carnations in shades ranging from flesh to a deeper shade.

The bride's other attendants were Miss Suzanne Warner, Miss La Una Gay Parkes, Miss Rebecca Ragland, Miss Keeble, Miss Harriette Batchelor and Mrs. William D. Spears. Two of the attendants wore flesh-colored chiffon, two wore rose pink and two wore dusty pink chiffon. They all wore hats fashioned like that of the maid of honor and their gloves matched their gowns. They carried bouquets of carnations in three shades.

The best man was Mr. T. Dwight Webb, jr., of Cincinnati, Ohio, brother of the bridegroom, and the ushers were Mr. Lytle McKee, Mr. Ross Hackney, Mr. McEwen Ransom, Mr. J. P. Norfleet, Mr. Robert Carrier, Mr. Homer Jones, Mr. Joseph E. Maury, Mr. Walter Canada, Mr. Robert Bruce and Mr. Gilmer Winston, all of Memphis.

Bridegroomsmen Listed.

The bridegroomsmen were Mr. Frank Bass, Mr. James Bass, Mr. Vance Alexander, jr., Mr. David Keeble, Mr. Richard Kennedy and Mr. John Connor, all of Nashville, Tenn.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. The dining room table was covered with a bridal cloth of white satin, upon which was a plaque of gardenias and maiden-hair fern. Mr. Webb and his bride left for a wedding trip. The latter wore a Patou model of indelible blue crepe, with white moire trimmings, and white accessories. Upon their return they will make their home at Evansville, Ind.

The bride was educated at the Cour Fenelon, of Paris, France, and was graduated from Rosemary Hall, Greenwich. She is a member of the Junior League of the Girls Cotillion Club, of Nashville. Mr. Webb is a graduate of Vanderbilt University.

Barnard Alumnae Turning to Politics

Barnard College girls are turning from school teaching and other traditional professions to Government work, according to the 1935 alumnae register of the school.

The register reports that the proportion of alumnae who are in some form of Government work (other than teaching) is between two and three times what is was in 1930. It says "more and more of the opportunities available in these days have seemed to lie in economic research and statistical work in Washington or in State and local relief activities."

Statistics compiled by the register also show that Barnard graduates, in general, marry late.

Spanish Group Sets Recital by Harpist

Zabaleta a Noted Soloist Here and Abroad.

The Instituto de las Espanas of Washington has issued invitations for a recital at the Washington Club, Seventeenth street at K street, tomorrow evening at 8:30 o'clock, when the guest artist will be Nicanor Zabaleta, Spanish harpist, an artist of great distinction who has played in many European capitals, having also appeared as soloist with the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra.

This event, the last of the season, will be held in commemoration of the second anniversary of the founding of the chapter.

Grace Haggard Becomes Bride of Coloradon

Former Cheyenne Resident and James Keener Are Married in District.

The marriage of Miss Grace Avery Haggard, daughter of Mr. D. Avery Haggard, formerly of Cheyenne, Wyo., and now of Washington, to Mr. James Henry Keener, of Cripple Creek, Colo., took place yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claude L. Draper, old friends of the bride's parents, who have an apartment at the Westchester, in Washington.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, in the presence of the members of the two families and a few close friends.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a dark blue quilted taffeta suit, with a hat to match and white accessories. She carried a bouquet of white roses, lilies-of-the-valley and gardenias.

Mrs. Kirke Van Clyde Beard, who was the matron of honor and only attendant, wore a costume of chamois-colored crepe, with navy-blue accessories and she carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses. Mr. Kirke Van Clyde Beard was the best man.

A small reception followed the ceremony, after which Mr. Keener and his bride left Washington for a short wedding trip through the South. They will return to the Capital for a few days before they go to Cripple Creek, where they will make their home.

Among the out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were Maj. and Mrs. L. B. Pilsbury, of San Francisco, uncle and aunt of the bride; Mrs. John D. Clark, of Cheyenne, Wyo.; Mr. John D. Clark, of Dartmouth University; Mrs. A. S. Hyde, of Philadelphia, sister of the bride; Mrs. Will Hagen, of Fort Bragg, N. C., cousin of the bride; Mrs. J. O. B. Keener, of Cripple Creek, mother of the bridegroom, and Miss Mildred Keener, of Denver, sister of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Poole to Give Tea Party May 28

Famed Concert Pianist to Play for Her Guests.

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole has invited guests for tea Tuesday, May 28, at 1734 N street northwest. The afternoon will be featured by a group of piano numbers by Norman Frauenheim, well-known concert pianist, who has been heard in the courts of Europe and recently played at the White House. For the past three years has served as president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. She will retire from office at the convention in Detroit, and will leave at once for a short vacation in Canada after which she will return to her home in Brockton, Mass. Later in the summer Mrs. Poole will spend some time in European travel.

Woman's Group to Hear Lecture By Miss Roche

Education Committee of Club to Hold Forum On Thursday.

Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, will be the honor guest at the annual luncheon of the education committee of the Woman's National Democratic Club on Thursday at 12:30 o'clock at the clubhouse. Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, chairman of the education committee, will preside and introduce Miss Roche, who will discuss the opportunities and achievements of the New Deal.

Seated at the speaker's table with Mrs. Costigan and Miss Roche will be Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, president of the club; Mrs. Charles Hamlin and Mrs. Samuel Herrick, past presidents, and members of the committee—Mrs. Ellis Meredith, Mrs. Basil Manley, Miss Mary E. Bakewell and Mrs. Clarence I. Hendricks.

During the club season this committee conducts a forum meeting each Thursday morning for the discussion of current legislation and issues of the day. One meeting each month is given over to Mrs. Robert Nelson's lectures on foreign affairs. The other meetings this season have been conducted according to the reporter plan, the division leaders being prepared for an analytical discussion of their departments with usually a guest speaker who is an authority on the subject. The reporters for the committee are Mrs. Basil Manley, Tennessee Valley Authority; Mrs. John Allan Daugherty, Federal Housing Administration; Mrs. Charles Hamlin, Public Works; Miss Eleanor Connolly, FERA; Mrs. Sherwood Jones, NRA; Mrs. Glen Gifford, Labor Industrial Relations Board; Miss Ethel Ketchum, CCC; Mrs. Adrian T. Busick, Federal Savings and Loan Association; Mrs. Clarence I. Hendricks, Consumer's Advisory Board; Miss Mary Bakewell, AAA; Miss Florence Hammond, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The luncheon on Thursday closes the activities of the education committee for the season and will be largely attended by club members and friends as well as the members of the Thursday morning group.

Deborah Dows Soon to Marry

Wedding to John Burling Is Set for Saturday at Tracy Dows' Home.

Miss Deborah Dows, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Dows, has selected Saturday as the date of her marriage to Mr. John L. Burling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Burling, of Washington. The ceremony will be performed at 4:30 o'clock in the garden of the home of the bride's parents in the presence of the two families and a few close friends.

Miss Anne Eustis, daughter of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, will be the maid of honor and only attendant and Mr. Edward B. Burling, jr., brother of the bridegroom, will be the best man. Mr. Olin S. Dows, brother of the bride, will give his sister in marriage.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Dows and the late Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Olin, of New York.

Mrs. Wright Entertains For Diplomats' Wives

Mrs. W. P. Wright, wife of the chief of the Foreign Domestic Service, entertained with a tea at Olney Inn Friday afternoon. Her guests were Mrs. Jesse S. Ackerman, of Rio de Janeiro; Mrs. Edna M. Kloth, Stockholm, Sweden, and Mrs. Edna B. Criller, of Havana, Cuba, who are also wives of members of the Foreign Service.

Not the Least of Golf's Virtues Is Chance for Dress on Links

One of the pleasant things about golf is that it is such an all-around-the year sport. Another thing in its favor is that it is such an all-over-the-country activity. And still a third thing in its favor is that all the best of people do it. The golfer practically always can make friends on the links. Whether he keeps them some times depends on the type of game he plays.

We left the nicest of all aspects of golf to the last. That is that for playing golf there is such an amazing assortment of clothes that you may wear that, even if golf itself holds only a minor spot in your heart, the chance for dress makes it take on a tremendous importance.

Members of Washington society have been confirmed golf enthusiasts for a long time. Pictured today are several members of smart young Capital society who may be interested in golf for the game itself, but who also present a charming picture while they busy themselves at it. Mrs. Howard Simons was photographed as she played in the tournament at the Congressional Country Club. She was wearing a delightful two-piece jersey suit in a soft shade of henna brown, with a blouse of beige and a hat of brown.

Playing in the same tournament was Miss Louise Claytor, wearing a skirt of dark green topped by a cardigan and soft sweater of chamois shade. The finishing touch was the silk handkerchief knotted about her neck.

Mrs. O. R. Eulsom-Jones, also an ardent golfer, was seen in an interesting attire of flecked gray wool, with a bright rosy-red hat and accessories of the same hue.

For several seasons fashion dictators have been trying to promote an interest in turquoise blue and brown. And it was exactly those colors, the wearing of which takes a particular personality and coloring, that Mrs. William S. Masten chose for her sports wear. The tweed skirt and sweater were of turquoise blue, lightly brushed with brown. The brown accent was picked up and combined with white in the knotted scarf and in the golf shoes. Playing with her was Mrs. C. S. Stern, who wore a brown tweed skirt and matching sweater, complimented by a felt hat and other accessories of the same rich chocolate shade.

Mrs. Jack Scott, a frequent player at the Congressional Country Club, competed in the tournament. She was snapped wearing a brown knit dress, a beautifully executed hand-knit affair, with a brown hat and oxfords of the classic brown and white.

Party Council To Cast Votes Here Tonight

Democratic Women to Hold Annual Election at the Mayflower.

THE WOMEN'S Democratic Educational Council will hold its annual election of officers at a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in room A, mezzanine floor, at the Mayflower Hotel.

Candidates include Mrs. Evelyn Condon and Miss Ida Rigler Mapel for president; Dr. Frances Moon Butts, vice president; Mrs. Alice Deasy, recording secretary; Mrs. George H. Cameron, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. J. C. Burchinal, parliamentarian.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Grattan Kerans, the retiring president, the council has increased its membership and has created a party study group, a reporter plan group and an absentee voters' bureau. Its meetings, with the help of the program chairman, Mrs. Evelyn Conden, have had outstanding speakers.

Mrs. Viola A. Wildermuth will discuss the "Civilian Conservation Corps" at the next meeting of the reporter plan group at the Women's City Club May 27.

Installation Ceremony.

Dr. H. W. Robbins, chairman of the language group and graduate division of Bucknell University, assisted by Miss Carolyn Sparrow and Roland Young, conducted the ceremony.

Members of the new chapter include Dr. M. Margaret Stroh, head of the department of English at Wilson Teachers College; Mrs. Clare Cocke Crandall, Miss Kathleen Crowley, Miss Marjorie Frazier, Mrs. Frances Gibernau, Sam Lubin, Miss Bessie Mills, James Moore, Miss Anne Alden Morrison, Miss Ann Rowell, Miss Mary Tilton, Orson Trueworthy, Miss Margaret Tucker and Miss Helen Williamson.

The officers of the charter group are Miss Marjorie Frazier, president; Miss Bessie Mills, vice president, and Miss Kathleen Crowley, secretary-treasurer.

Pen Women Meet.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE of American Pen Women held its last board meeting of the season Friday morning at the Willard Hotel. After the business session, Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, president, entertained at luncheon in the coffee room of the Willard in honor of the members of the national board from Maryland.

Among the guests of honor were Mrs. Maria Briscoe Croker, Mrs. Eleanor Elliott Carroll, Miss Laura V. Carmine, Mrs. Eleanor Wootten Hemsley, Mrs. Blanche Smith Ferguson, Mrs. Gene Ziegfeld, Mrs. Emma W. P. Slack, Mrs. Lucille Fostef McMillin, Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, Mrs. Lily R. Hunt, Mrs. Kate Speake Penney, Helena Munn Redewill, Mrs. Louise Hartley Wassell, Miss Agnes S. Winn, Mrs. Bess Heath Olmstead, Mrs. Evelyn Norcross Sherrill, Mrs. Clyde Burke Millspaugh, Mrs. Azalea Green Badgley and Mrs. Lila Wood Daniels.

Among those who represented the George Washington Chapter of the Delphian Society at the spring convention of the Eastern Federation of Delphian Chapters held recently in New York were Mrs. Robert W. Howard, Mrs. John Freiot, Mrs. G. P. Rowley and Mrs. Carolyn Rask.

The debating team of the American University held its annual dinner Thursday at the Little Tea House with 47 members attending. E. E. Henderson, of Chicago, whose daughter, Miss Ann Henderson is a member of the team, was the guest speaker. Miss Mary Lesta Waterman was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will head the patron list for the first annual charity ball to be given by the Junior New Dealers Club at 9 o'clock Friday at the Washington Club, 1701 K street northwest.

The Canadian Club of Washington will hold its twelfth annual banquet at 7:30 o'clock Friday night at the Kennedy-Warren. The election of officers will take place.

The Immaculata Junior College will entertain at the annual freshman promenade May 29 at the school under the chairmanship of Miss Frances Humphry and Miss Cleo Browne.

The board of trustees and the girls of the Young Woman's Christian Home will entertain at tea at 4 o'clock Saturday in the garden of the home, 235 Second street northwest.

Present Era Described As Oratory's Golden Age

Not since the days of Patrick Henry and Daniel Webster has America been as speech conscious as it is today, according to Alice O. Hunnewell, instructor of speech at University of California at Los Angeles.

However, modern speechmakers are not so interested in the dramatic declamatory method of old as in perfection of diction, vocabulary and pronounciation, Prof. Hunnewell declares.

Gleanings from Current Verse

Selected by Hope Ridings Miller.

In Praise of the Passing of Time.

NOW I proclaim them, summer, spring and fall,
The vernal and the autumnal equinox.
This earth, so lovely and so lyrical,
Keeps thus a flight of changes, keeps these clocks
To tell when time shall dial green to gold.
Only by sweet grapes do we know the sour;
Midspring, midsummer, by a year grown old;
A flower's fading, by a budding flower.

I can bewail no voyaging in time,
No passing and no birth and no forgetting.
There is an amber instant sealed in rime
That I would snatch for mine, and spoil the setting.
It were perfection to imperfect come
To know one moment, and forget the sum.

Green Bough Bent.

LONG AS THIS strange swift world of ours is sent Spinning upon its age-old carefree way—
As long as stars burn brightly in the firmament
Will love, the bitter passion, be as freely spent;
And spendthrift men will sigh and sighing say—
Only for this—the green bough bent—

Request.

THERE IS A small wild plant that grows
And bears a seed that each bird knows;
Beneath its leaves the songsters stay,
Gossip and dine and sing a lay—
Then fly away.

Oh, when my restless breath is still
And quiet wisdom comes with chill,
Will you then grant my last request—
You who have loved my smile, my jest—
And speed my rest

Come to my grassy grave one day
And plant that small wildflower gay!
So shall my feathered friends have bread
And I their music round my head
When I am dead.

OH, WHITE GULL, more cloud than bird,
More wind than cloud!

Under you the surf's grizzled tusk
Mouths the stony earth that throws
It back, snarling and amazed.
Into the bowl of the sea.

What sight in the jet beads
Of your feathered skull!

Under you is the green flood
And fins glistening in the olive sun
Seeped in under the wave.

Into the deep our eyes blunder,
Seeing nothing.

Only the surf cries our anguish,
Only the edges are loud.

Oh dark eyes, in the steeps of heaven,
On high resting wing, peering,
Tell us of what we have not seen
Under you as the world blunders.

Suddenly are set a-quiver
Where the blackbirds wheel and light,
Settling loudly for the night;
Settling on their slender swings
With their turbulent dark wings
Closing down for rest at last,
The long daylight journey past;
Strong hearts pulsing every berast,
On each wing a crimson crest;
Roused again they chatter, chatter,
As they whir and lift and scatter,
Gathering close again to say
All the happenings of the day;
All the strange exciting things
They have found on racing wings.

THREE THINGS are real:
Life, love and death.
Life hangs upon
A slender breath.

Then love alone
Remains on earth:
Outlasting life,
Predating birth.

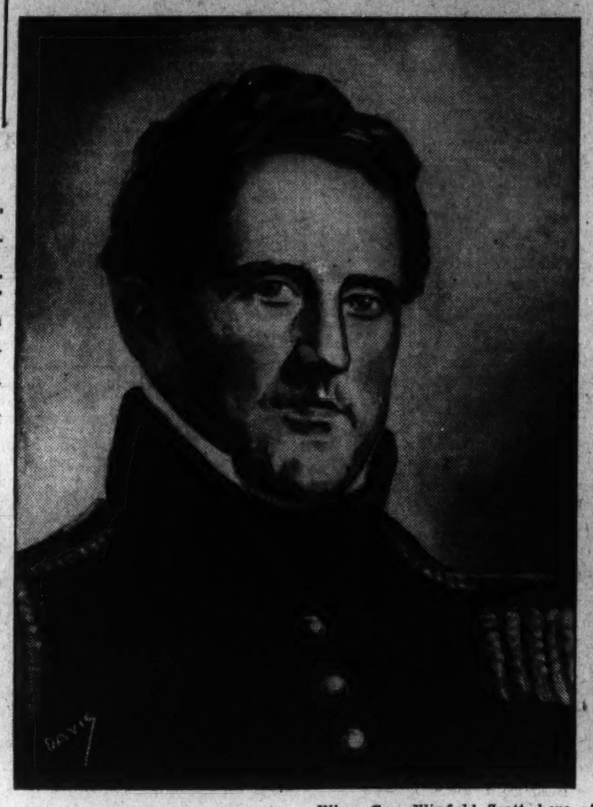
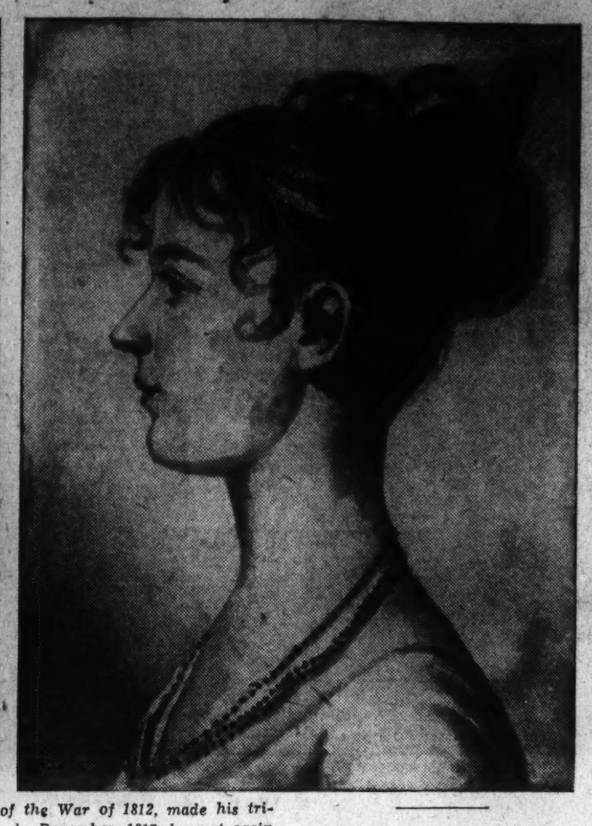
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Gen. Winfield Scott—Maria Mayo





When Gen. Winfield Scott, hero of the War of 1812, made his triumphant return to Richmond, Va., in December, 1817, he met again Mario Mayo, Richmond belle whom he had known when a captain. The two were married the following spring.

Winfield Scott Figures in Love Story of Historic Richmond.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

THROUGH the generations romance has flourished in Richmond, queen city of the south, sitting in aristocratic elegance on the historic James River. The love stories of yesterday and the love stories of today seem intermingled in this town where Time has left a striking imprint in each and every generation. Again and again the old names reappear on marriage licenses and the children of Richmond bear names very often which are rich in historical significance.

The quaint churches of the city have been the scene of brilliant weddings linking together illustrious families of historical fame. In the spacious lovely homes of colonial or classic architecture, the story of this or that romance is told, retold and cherished as part of the priceless heritage from the past.

And no romance is spoken of more often than that between dashing Maria Mayo and the gallant Winfield Scott, who rose high in the ranks of American army officers and left a splendid record of service in several wars.

In quiet Petersburg, Virginia, Winfield Scott was born in 1786. The guns of the Revolution had ceased firing only a few years before the little lad, who was to become a distinguished American general, came into the world. His boyhood was full of interest in those days of nation building and reconstruction after a victorious war which, nevertheless, had taken a heavy toll of human life, resources and other advancement in the colonies. It was in a frugal American home that he was reared.

Though destined for the law from his cradle by a father who cherished the traditions in his family of many lawyers, young Winfield Scott found his interest turning to arms.

From boyhood he adored the military and in 1808 we find him abandoning the pursuits of Blackstone for the profession of a soldier. Through parental influence he managed to obtain an appointment as captain of artillery, so when the war of 1812 began he was a lieutenant colonel in the American army and was sent to the Canadian frontier.

There with his men he gave a good account of himself until he crossed with his regiment to Queenston, where the American troops were repulsed with heavy losses and Scott himself was taken prisoner. The next year he was exchanged and received the appointment of adjutant general with the rank of colonel. In 1814 came a promotion to the ranks of Brigadier General and on July 25 of that year he was wounded severely in the battle of Lundy's Lane.

After the war he was urged to become Secretary of War but he declined and was raised by Congress to the rank of major general. He was one of the outstanding heroes of the war of 1812 and his name was a household word in the land.

For generations the Mayo family had been prominent in the history of Richmond. Its descent in this country dated back to William Mayo, known in family legend as "The Immigrant" who, a graduate of New College, Oxford, in common with many of his fellow students, in the early part of the 18th century saw a chance for adventure and fortune in England's pioneer daughter, Virginia, across the seas.

Broken Hearts.

Great length in any suit provides the urge for large contracts, and freak hands are equally exciting. Yet the very unevenness of distribution in your own hand usually proclaims similar patterns in the other hands. It should be a warning against, rather than an incentive for, slam bidding.

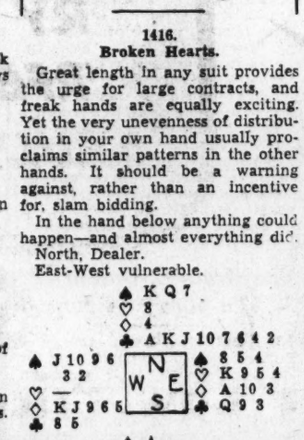
North, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.



The seductive North-South hands left a trail of broken hearts in a recent Duplicate game. Only one North-South pair stayed out of a slam contract. When North got to five clubs, East doubled, and South gleefully redoubled. After cashing the diamond Ace East led a heart, and it was just too bad.

At only one table did North make a plus on the board. South played six hearts undoubled. The opening lead was the spade Jack. In this desperate extremity South found the only way to trap his opponents. He laid down the Queen of diamonds. West played the King automatically, and East, after some groaning, let him hold the trick. And now, by the miracle that West was void of hearts, declarer was assured of getting rid of his three remaining diamond losers. Of course, he lost a trump trick subsequently, going down one. But the 50-point set, the smallest penalty scored at any table, was more than offset by South's honors.

French Centenarians Are Heavy Eaters

EATERS WOMAN'S SAT BOB ..

Of the 66 persons over 100 years old living in France today, the majority have been consistently heavy eaters. Most of the centenarians partake of the bourgeoise cuisine which includes rich country sausages, creamy liquid cheeses and game, according to the United Press. Most of this heavy fare is washed down with enormous drafts of red wine. After the meal snuff is frequently used.

Every centenarian interviewed eats food cooked only over wood fires. This may indicate that food cooked in any other way absorbs some gases which keep longevity away.

One-Piece Frock Is Designed For the Sewing Beginner

No. 929.

THIS "Sew-Simple" one-piece frock was designed especially for beginners who have never done a thing about sewing before. All Herald Tribune patterns are guaranteed perfect in cut and accurate in size, and the large instruction chart makes them easy to follow. But a "Sew-Simple" design is cut in the very simplest terms to require the least possible fitting.

This one, for instance, has short kimono sleeves which require no armhole fitting. And the skirt is plain, except for the four godets giving fullness at the hemline. A gathered frill on the collar and sleeves and a tied girdle give a simple, soft finish. The pattern is cut in sizes 14 to 42. Complete yardage requirements are given on the pattern envelope.

Society Leader Lists Smartest Coiffure Styles

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 14.—Elsa Maxwell said today that the smartest-coiffed head in the world is that of Lady Mendel, of Paris, whose hair is now tinted green.

"Without a doubt, she is the greatest instigator of hair fashions," said Miss Maxwell, who sees the smart heads of both hemispheres at the parties she gives for society.

Lady Mendel, the former Elsie de Wolfe, had blue hair not long ago. She is now wearing diamond curls, alternating them with a curl of natural hair.

Other women outstanding for their chic hairdress, said Miss Maxwell, are Mrs. Reginald Fellowes, who several seasons ago set the slicked hair vogue—a style men adopted; Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, who never has bobbed her hair, and Mrs. Homer Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, who combines cropped hair with a straight bang.

"All fashionable hair is bobbed now," Miss Maxwell said. "Long hair has gone never to return. Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, who recently had her hair cut, is a shining example.

"The most prevalent hairdress is a softly waved bob that lies fairly close to the head.

"A few women, however, are wise in defying fashion and keeping their hair long. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's uncut hair, parted on the side and smoothly waved, with a fairly low knot, suits her, and Mrs. Longworth has one of the smartest coiffures I know.

"Three of New York's handsomest young matrons—Mrs. Allan Ryan, jr., Mrs. John Hay Whitney and Mrs. George Bourne—still have long hair."

The hairdress of Mrs. Breckinridge Long, wife of the Ambassador to Rome, is similar to that of the Attorney General's wife — "schoolboyish," Miss Maxwell said, "and amusing.

Polish Acquired By Soviet Russia

The vogue for full dress at state receptions in Soviet Russia was started by the leaders of the Red workers' movement. It is those same leaders who have advised army officers to learn to dance, department store clerks to be polite. The Soviet Union is taking on polish, according to the Associated Press.

Moscow, however, is certainly not gay. The people, instead of visiting state-operated cafes, attend the theater or opera. Throngs that gather downtown the night before "free day" usually drink wines and champagnes of Soviet manufacture, dance and explode toy balloons.

Caviar Curtails Rickets, Russian's Test Reveals

That caviar will cure rickets is indicated by experiments recently conducted by M. Lepsky, Soviet pharmaceutical chemist. Since cod liver oil, which is rich in vitamin D, has long been recognized as a cure for rickets, Lepsky decided that caviar, also rich in this vitamin, might serve as a rickets remedy. He gave an ounce of caviar every day for a month to 20 babies with rickets. Seventeen were cured by this treatment, he reports.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am engaged to a girl several years my senior. We are to be married this fall. I have recently learned that during my absence from town she has been having dates with married men. She has had these men call at her home; she has gone to dances with them, and several times has met them in a nearby town. These men are friends of mine and husbands of her close girl friends. She insists in these modern times there is nothing wrong in her behavior.

* * * *

I am beginning to wonder if she is deserving of my confidence and respect. Also, what do her good friends think of such conduct? What kind of a wife and mother would such a girl make?

* * * *

Last week she and her boss, a younger man, were found in his private office by the head of the firm, about 8 p. m., with liquor on the desk and all the lights turned out. This man has a very jealous wife, too.

Don't you think I should do some deep thinking? What is your advice?

Yours very truly,
J. C. M.

Food for Thought.

DEAR J. C. M.: When a girl engages herself to marry a man, presumably she pledges herself to keep inviolate—at whatever sacrifice of personal inclination—the dignity, self-repect, integrity and happiness of that man. Such service is fashioned to fit the requirements of the individual man. It has its roots in a capacity for unself-seeking love. If it is to be forthcoming, fundamental compatibility must exist between the two, and they must build their relationship on a mutual concept of what constitutes honorable and considerate conduct.

* * * *

One deduces from your letter ("She insists in these modern times there is nothing wrong in her behavior") that not only have you tried ineffectually to reason your fiancee out of her profligate conduct, but that she feels within her rights in regulating her behavior to suit her own pleasure and no one else's. Which, in my opinion, leaves you no choice but to break the engagement.

* * * *

I am not prepared to say what "her good friends think of such conduct." They may admire it, condemn it, or justify it, according to their respective philosophies. That, however, has little bearing on the case. Whether she is deserving of your confidence and respect is for you to decide. You know better than anyone else what are your requirements in a wife—in the potential mother of your hypothetical children.

* * * *

If you're a man who can spend all for love and regard the world well lost, you may count the companionship of this obviously rather reckless if not actually abandoned young woman worth all it costs in outrage of instinct. But if you demand gilt-edged, conservative social worth in a life partner, you will need to look elsewhere to find it.

* * * *

Two things you might do some deep thinking about are these: Just how important a part do you play in this girl's scheme of life? And, once married, could you shrug off the suspicion, if not the state, of being a cuckold? In my opinion, you are her staked yet unloved claim to conventional respectability—which leads me to believe she is, essentially, not so genuinely unconventional as she is dissolute. Really unconventional persons don't hide themselves behind the cloak of another's name and position; and women in love don't keep secret rendezvous with men other than the man they love.

M. H.

Rural Tot Loses Advantage Over City Brother

Death Rate for Metropolitan Child Found Higher Than Country One.

THE COUNTRY BABY has lost his initial advantage over his city brother in his chance to reach his first birthday.

A chart just issued by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor shows that while the trend of infant mortality has been downward ever since establishment of the birth-registration area, the death rate for city babies has been lower than that for babies in rural areas since 1929.

In 1932 and 1933 the death rate of infants under 1 year of age was 58 per 1,000 in both years. The rate for city babies was 57 in both years. For country babies the rate was 58 in 1932 and 59 in 1933.

"It was long ago said that infant mortality is the most sensitive index we possess of social welfare. The figures suggest that the decline in infant mortality has been checked and that the rate for 1934 may be higher than any in recent years. Moreover, the advantage which the country baby formerly possessed over the city baby has disappeared, so that rural infant mortality rates are now actually higher than city rates.

"When we look for the cause, we find it due largely to the lack of adequate facilities for medical and nursing care for mothers and babies and of public health instruction for mothers, in small towns and rural areas. Recent figures assembled by the Children's Bureau for 24 States representing those probably average or above in public health work, showed that 54 per cent of the population living in rural counties in these States (counties with no city of 10,000 population) were in counties with no permanent county-wide nursing service.

"Of a group of mothers who had no prenatal care reported recently by the Public Health Service, 80 per cent of the rural mothers compared with 37 per cent of the mothers in cities of 100,000 or more population, said they had not had such care because they did not appreciate the need for it."

Duce Oustanding, Barnard Class Votes

He Tops Roosevelt as "Most Important Figure."

The most important figure in world affairs since 1918 is Mussolini, in the opinion of the senior class at Barnard College. In the recent poll conducted among this year's graduating class President Roosevelt received a high rating. He was tied with Lenin. Last honors were divided between Huey Long and Mickey Mouse.

The favorite composer is Beethoven; the favorite books are the Bible, "The Education of Henry Adams" and "Anthony Adverse."

War was condemned by every person answering the questionnaire. The students also were strongly against Fascism and Hearst.

Violet Scented Cream Assures A Smooth Skin

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE WOMAN who has little time and less money to spend on the care of her hands will find that a certain violet scented cream—or in reality a greaseless jelly—suits both her needs and her purse.

It comes in a generous - sized tube, costing only 25 cents, and is highly recommended for keeping the skin smooth, soft and fair. The effect of hard water, constant dish-washing, dusting and sweeping, on the hands, can not be disputed. Even spring gardening exacts its toll. Without proper care, hands soon acquire a work-a-day appearance and become, rough, red, and in many cases scaly.

In order to prevent this, and to keep them well groomed try using a bit of this soothing jelly two, or three times a day. Keep a tube of it by the sink, and by the hand basin and use it each time you rinse your hands.

Consistent use of it not only will keep the hands smooth, but will obliterate any tendency toward overly dry skin. Half our hand troubles are traceable to dry skin which peels, and chaps easily. This jelly will serve as a lubricant, supplying the necessary oils and at the same time lightening the skin.

It is a pleasure to use for two reasons. First, because it goes on so easily, and does not leave the hands sticky and greasy. Almost as soon as it is applied, it is absorbed. Second, because it imparts the dainty, refreshing scent of violets.

A Complete Manicure.

Of course, no amount of hand cream is going to bring out the sum total of hand beauty unless the nails are given a minimum amount of care. If they are brittle, and break off easily, if the cuticle is dry and rough, then hand grooming must begin with the nails.

Your first step must be to see that these unnatural conditions are remedied. Surely any budget, urged by vanity, can extend to the purchase of a 35-cent jar of a certain preparation which has often been described as a complete manicure in itself.

This ever-so-effective cream not only softens the cuticle and removes the dead skin, but even goes so far as to bleach the nails, leaving them as pearly and white as you could desire. Don't be overly anxious and expect all these good things to happen in one day. You must have patience and use it time after time. Your efforts, however, are well rewarded by a remarkable improvmnt in the apearance of your nails.

This excellent nail preparation is ideal for the busy woman. It takes only a few seconds to dab a particle on each nail and rub it in. You'll need just the veriest dab for a little bit goes a long way. You'll be amazed to see how long one small jar will last.

"Camera Kit" Presented.

Whether you spend your summer at Bailey's Beach or Jones' there'll be the same hot summer sun. So whether you brave its relentless glare on the New England Coast or by the Chesapeake, you'll want to give your face the excellent care provided by a certain beauty expert who specializes in preventing aging dryness and discolorations.

She simplifies the question of proper skin care away from home by presenting a stunning "Camera Kit" which contains a rich cream, a soothing freshener, face powder, lipstick and a large bottle of her brand-new sun lotion. The kit comes covered in smart cafe-au-lait fabrikoid and lined in pale green. It's waterproof and washable inside and out. A grand beveled, lid-size mirror permits a "life-size" view of the face.

The new sun lotion is a creamy, greaseless liquid, tinted rachel, so that it is completely invisible on the skin.

It filters out the ultra violet rays of the sun, allowing only the good in sunshine to reach the skin and permits the painless promotion of a lovely, even tan in any desired degree. Delicate skin, for example, requires a thicker film of the sun lotion applied at hourly intervals at the beginning of the season.

New Bath Powder.

What luxury will science not give us! Now it's a bath powder with deodorant properties.

You'd never dream to sniff this powder, lusciously scented with gardenia, that it was anything but an exceptionally fragrant, fine powder. You'll be delightfully surprised when you use it to find that it is a mild, but excellent deodorant.

What could be more appropriate now that summer is turning the corner? We'll have nothing to fear from perspiration as long as we make steady use of this product.

It comes to you in three shades, white, flesh and rachel, in a charming little white box with a large gardenia perched on top.

Questionnaire.

Query—I have a delicate fine skin. Would you advise my using a loofah sponge on my face? V. L. S.

Answer—No. It is likely to be irritating to sensitive skins. Try a fairly soft complexion brush instead, and use the coarse sponge on your back, arms and legs.

Motif May Be Carried Out in Table Decorations and Food, Too.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE CIRCUS is in town and it is time for the gayest party of the year.

First let's consider our table decorations. We might use a white crepe paper tablecloth spotted with splashy red dots like a clown suit. Tie colored balloons filled with gas to the back of each chair and use animal cut-outs of colored paper for place cards.

A circus tent and parade of animal cages makes the table decoration. Take an angel food cake which has been made in a deep tube pan 12 inches in diameter and leave it unfrosted. Cut a cardboard base for the cake and place it in the center of the table. Encircle the bottom of the cake with a red ribbon and draw the two ends almost tight around the cake with one hand. With the other hand, place red and white peppermint stick candy, one-half inch in diameter and six inches long upward around the cake and tie them securely with the ribbon.

Make a large circle on a piece of heavy white drawing paper and cut from the edge to the center in a straight line. Twist the paper into a cone shape, fasten it in place with paste and place roof-like on top of the candy poles. This forms the roof of the circus tent. A finishing touch is the jaunty little flag thrust through the hole at the point of the tent top.

Now for the animal cages. These are made of empty animal cracker boxes. The wheels are small, flat chocolate wafers with a hole in the center, which has been carved out with a sharp-pointed paper knife. The wheels are held together with straight pretzel sticks, which have been thrust through the holes. The cages are held up by balancing across the pretzel sticks. The shafts for the horses are also made of pretzel sticks tied together to form a cross and attached to the wagons through a small hole in the front of each box. Colors of bright string tie the shafts to the horses and the same bright string is used for the horses' reins. Now as to the menu:

The fruit cup may be any combination of fresh fruit piled in sherbet glasses and garnished with a cherry. Just before serving cover the fruit with iced ginger ale. Small clown faces mounted on toothpicks are stuck into each cherry.

1 teaspoon finely chopped parsley
2 cups thin white sauce.

Pan broil the ground beef in the fat. Add other ingredients, including ½ the white sauce. Chill and form into tent shapes. Roll in fine bread crumbs, then in egg, then again in crumbs. Fry in deep fat at 400 degree Fahrenheit until a golden brown. Makes seven croquettes.

Place the croquettes in little nests of cooked and finely chopped spinach. Pour over each croquette enough white sauce to give the appearance of a tent. Top each tent with a small flag.

Circus Sundae.

Serve vanilla ice cream on dessert dishes, using cone shaped server. Cover top with chopped peanuts, and about the base put crushed sweetened strawberries.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

Ellen and Michael Dale are very much in love, but Ellen's mother has never become reconciled to her daughter's marriage. Mrs. Mallory insists that Mike is seeing too much of another girl, but Ellen refuses to believe it until she accidentally sees them together. She won't let Mike explain, but instead goes to her mother and finally consents to file a divorce. Mike is crushed, but when they learn that their first baby is on the way, Ellen withdraws the suit. They do not recapture the happiness of their honeymoon. Ellen continues working at the office and Mike does not object.

THOSE last few weeks were the longest Ellen had ever lived. Looking back now, even Mrs. Benson's sometimes acid tongue seemed kindly and work a haven that had kept her from going wild.

Mama had relaxed her dislike of Michael to such an extent that she often came over to the little house in the afternoon and stayed visting with Ellen—but she always left before time for Michael to return.

Mama had changed. She seemed less bitter toward life.

Ellen thought she looked younger. She had heard rumors from some of her friends that Mama had been to a show or two with Mr. Hardesty and that sometimes, in the long summer evenings (midsummer was upon them) she had been seen riding with Mr. Hardesty—the chauffeur left at home and Mr. Hardesty at the wheel of his big car, looking young and happy.

Love Nearly Recaptured.

Michael bought a new car. They really couldn't afford it, but Michael had to have a demonstrator car and so in the long summer evenings, if he were free from prospective customers, he came home to take Ellen for a long ride.

Once they almost recaptured that long-lost tenderness. They had driven for miles through a moonlit valley. Now, mounting to the peak of the ridge beyond, Michael parked the car so they could look out and down into the valley they had traversed.

Michael tucked a cushion carefully behind Ellen's head so that she could lie back and drink her fill of the silver splendor of the night.

Powerless to Speak.

They sat there in the moonlight. Michael held Ellen's hand. With all his will power he groped for the words he might say to her. He wanted to say, "Ellen, I love you. I've always loved you and I always will love you. I never cared for Marjorie Hutton.

"She's just—another girl to me. She kept wanting to see me. And I tried to get away from her, Ellen. Honest, I did. And then, when I thought you didn't care, it—sort of helped—to believe that someone else did care."

But poor young Michael did not say these things. Instead he turned the car presently and they drove home through the dying glory of the moonlight. Thus, sometimes, are lost forever God-given moments of ecstasy.

Michael took her to the hospital in the evening.

Great Time Came.

"I won't need you, son, Dr. John told white-faced Michael. "Suppose you just wait outside. I'll have all I can do taking care of Ellen, and young Michael and I don't want young Mike's dad fainting on my hands. I'd just have to roll you under the table and go on. So stay outside, son, and try to behave yourself."

And Doctor John went back inside the closed hospital room chuckling to the nurse and telling her that the best innovation any hospital could introduce would be a great big ambitious woodpile where prospective fathers could chop and chop and chop while they waited through those anxious hours.

The moments seemed leaden. There was another prospective father waiting in the little anteroom and his prescence gave Michael a little comfort—someone else was going through the same thing.

They smoked, walked up and down, tried to be quite casual—and each failed utterly.

Everything All Right.

Doctor John came out of the closed room and Michael met him even before he'd closed the door again. "Not yet, son," Doctor John said. "Maybe two or three hours yet. I'm going to rest a little. They'll call me. Yes, everything's all right. Course it's no picnic for Ellen but she's a little soldier—why heavens, son, she's calmer than you are."

He has been kind and considerate. He wished now that he had been loving. He despised himself that he had been afraid. Ellen had loved him once, surely she felt in her heart some of the old tenderness toward him. Surely the great experience had brought her just a little closer to the man who waited outside.

When the gray dawn was breaking, Michael sat with his father in the doctor's waiting room. "But we've been here since early evening, Dad," Mike remonstrated. "You'd tell me—you'd certainly tell me if anything was going wrong, wouldn't you, Dad? You would, wouldn't you, Dad?"

Reassurance Given.

"Of course I would son. Ellen's all right. This is her first baby and things won't be going rapidly. Ordinarily I'd have gone home last night and slept in my own bed and the interne would have called me when it was time.

"But because my patient is our Ellen and the new arrival is my first grandchild, I've stood by all night. Besides, I had you on my hands and you're more of a problem than Ellen. The Lord certainly knew what he was about when He left the details of a human being's earthly arrival in the hands of the womenfolks."

There came a final hour when Dr. John did not leave the closed room. There was much hurrying back and forth, though, by nurses and internes and every time the door opened it seemed to Michael Dale as though something dire had happened.

Child Was a Boy.

Was not the face of the interne rather grave? Did it appear that the head nurse seemed anxious as she came rapidly through the corridor with more hot water bottles?

And finally, when it seemed to Michael that the eternity would never end, the door opened and Dr. John came out. He was in a jovial mood. He had removed the white coat and cap and his face was all one delightful grin from ear to ear. "Where are the cigars, son?" he asked, hoping to set Michael's mind at rest.

Michael's voice was fairly hoarse in intensity.

"Is she—is she—"

"Yes, she is, son. Ellen's all right. And you've got a great big handsome boy in there who looks exactly like his grandfather."

Skin Is Measured By a New Method

Data Aid in Treatment of Thyroid Diseases.

If you average in size, it takes 18.8 square feet of skin to cover your body. This has been determined by a new method developed by two Detroit physicians, for computing this difficult problem. One of the physicians, Dr. John C. Bugher, described the method recently to the American Society for Experimental Pathology.

It involves a camera and a mathematical formula. The patient is photographed in both front and side silhouettes after which the prints are made into standardized sizes. Then a planimeter traces around the borders of the silhouettes, automatically calculating the area within. A chartometer makes a second trip around the silhouettes automatically registering the length of the boder lines.

This new method gives results which are accurate within 1 or 2 per cent, while the error allowances for hitherto used systems was from 6 to 16 per cent.

Skin area measurement plays an important part in the treatment of thyroid and ductless diseases. An accurate knowledge of the body surface is essential for the estimation of basal metabolism.

What Today Means

"TAURUS."

IF MAY 20 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 1: o to 3:15 p. m. and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 11:15 a. m. to 1:15 p. m. and from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m.

Today it might be advisable to control your emotions, for a display of anger or disappointment is likely to create resentment. People who indulge in being finicky on this date, will find themselves in a rather unhappy state of mind. Cash may prove conducive to lowering prices in certain lines of trade, so the shrewd buyer may find it advantageous to try buying on this basis. The wise man or woman, contemplating entertaining, will first figure expenses before plunging blindly into it. Today money should be handled with care, for conditions may be ripe for it to slip away with ease.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those ready to tread the path which leads to the altar, will display good judgment not to let their tongues wag too freely. There may be trouble in saying too much, yet not enough, regarding some personal matter.

If a woman and May 20 is your birthday, it will be advisable not to let your love for pleasure interfere with domestic or business duties. You will be wonderfully successful if you do not ignore the responsibilities of life. Be careful how you treat love, for if you treasure it happiness may come in great abundance. Avoid participating in petty bickerings, especially in club or church organizations, as they might interfere with your popularity. Music, art, as well as educational work, should have a strong appeal for you. You should be a magnetic speaker, capable of holding the interest of an audience. Your married life, through your individual efforts, can be a great success.

The child born on May 20, usually, when it passes from adolescence to youth, requires careful guidance and sympathetic understanding. Inclined to be sensitive this child's feelings can be easily hurt.

If a man and May 20 is your natal day, your sense of humor, as well as insight into human nature, will help you in a business or professional career. Writing, medicine, law, and politics are among the activities in which your personality may stand out to best advantage. You should find a great deal of happiness as a husband and father.

New Homemaking Generation Finds Wives Unprepared

The homemaker of today is of a lost generation, Mrs. Charles E. Gregory, chairman of the division of homemaking of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, declared recently.

"We have outgrown the traditions of our grandmothers who learned from their mothers and passed on to their children the arts of homemaking as they were practiced in their generation," Mrs. Gregory said.

"The women of today belong to a new era for which they have not been prepared. One of the missions of the women's club is to bring together all these aids to homemaking which science and education have set up and make them available to women who have passed beyond the school age.

Healing of Fractures Often a Slow Process

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

FRACTURES have a way of happening when least expected, and how disturbing they are! They destroy function and, because of the very nature of bone, healing is slow. Then again they usually occur when a physician is not immediately available, and no inconsiderable number of secondary injuries result from the sympathetic but unwise helpfulness (?) of bystanders and friends. Onlookers, however, can be of real help, using simple but effective methods of first aid.

Among the many wise aphorisms connected with the treatment of fractures are: "Splint 'em where they lie," "Shock that is caused by fracture is made worse by handling," "First stop the hemorrhage, treat the shock, splint the fracture, and then transport the patient to a hospital," "A fracture properly reduced and held in position is painless."

How do fractures differ and which are really serious? First, there is the so-called "simple" fracture in which no fragment of bone penetrates the skin. Second, "compound," in which the skin is injured so that an avenue of communication is established from the outside of the body to the site of the fracture. Third, "comminuted," in which the bone is broken into several fragments. In this latter type the skin may or may not be broken. Fourth, there is what is known as a "green-stick" fracture, in which the bone is not broken completely through; in other words, the bone appears merely to be bent. This type is more common in children.

Even though a fracture is "simple," we must not think of the injury as involving only the bone. If a blow has been of sufficient force to break a bone then muscles, nerves, ligaments, tendons, and blood vessels have also been torn and crushed and the entire area is usually filled with blood. Therefore, in dealing with injuries we must consider not only the bones involved but all of the soft tissues as well. More pain comes from lacerated nerves, tendons and muscles than from broken bones.

Nature heals bone slowly, and the rapidity with which repair occurs depends a good deal upon the accurate adjustment of the fragments. Furthermore, the nutrition of the patient must be maintained at the highest possible level. Calcium phosphate may be given by mouth and every effort must be made to keep the patient comfortable and in a happy frame of mind. Healing begins rather promptly, and the broken ends are united by the deposit of "callus" (new bone) that envelops the fragments, much as the wipe joint used by the plumber joins two pieces of lead pipe.

Once the patient is in a well-equipped hospital and in charge of a competent surgeon, our worries are practically over. There are types of splints to fit almost every variety of fracture. Special beds are made for the comfort of the patient and bedside X-ray units may be used to check the position of injured bone. By this means the process of healing may be observed frequently.

We must be sure that healing will result in the restoration of normal function. If a limb has been in a splint for many weeks it will be found that the muscles have become atrophied and weakened because of disuse. This means that some form of exercise must be begun as soon as possible. Massage, heat and other forms of physical therapy will need to be employed. Sometimes muscles will need to be stretched, and this requires patience and complete cooperation on the part of the injured person.

Another article on fractures will appear tomorrow.

Warship's Use Asked for U.S. Naval School

Visitors' Board Calls for Permanent Assigning of Training Ship.

Special Dispatch to The Post.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 19.—A modern warship will be assigned to the Naval Academy for practical instruction of midshipmen, if a recommendation contained in the report of the board of visitors, made public today, is carried into effect.

Rear Admiral F. Sellers, superintendent of the Academy, tonight said he had stressed the need of such a vessel when he appeared before the inspecting officials. Sellers said one of the outstanding requisites in training midshipmen is to teach them the "love of the sea." He referred to the fact that when he was a midshipman and for years afterward, a practice ship was assigned regularly for instruction of embryo officers, but in recent years the custom has been to detail only such craft as destroyers for certain periods. Admiral Sellers said he had been urging a practice ship since he took charge of the academy less than a year ago.

"The type of craft I have in mind," he said "is the modern gunboat like the Erie and Charleston which the Navy Department is now building, and for which it would be possible to provide docking facilities at the Academy." In this connection he pointed out that the shallow depth and narrowness of the local channel would not permit larger cruisers or battleships to enter the river.

"The Erie and Charleston," Sellers said, "are twin-screw oil burners, 325 feet long and capable of a speed of 20 knots. They have all modern firing equipment, an anti-aircraft battery and a catapult for launching planes. They also will have a battery of 6-inch guns."

Other Proposals.

Appointment of additional officers and civilian instructors to take care of the proposed enrollment of midshipmen, legislation for the retirement of the civilian teaching staff and more adequate housing facilities for officers were other outboard following their annual inspection of the institution three weeks ago.

The report has been filed with Secretary of the Navy Swanson, who will transmit it to Congress. Other specific recommendations include:

Plans for future development of buildings and grounds.

Enlargement of the hospital and dispensary.

Enlargement of Bancroft Hall and provision for additional recitation rooms in the academic building, laboratory and library facilities and extension of the armory.

"Permanent" Board Urged.

The board also renewed a recommendation of previous groups that membership of the visiting board should be made more permanent, with provision for rotation and continuity of service and setting aside of certain days for visits by members of Congress on invitation.

The inspecting board lauded the standard of discipline and the influence of officers upon general morale.

The report of the board is signed by its president, Dr. K. C. M. Sills, president of Bowdoin College, and 9 of the other 16 members who were here during the four days that the inspections were in progress. These are Dr. Rufus B. Von Kleinsmid, president of the University of Southern California; Edward C. Elliott, president of Purdue University; M. L. Brittain, president of Boston School of Technology; Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University; W. Coleman Nevils, president of Georgetown University; Senator Jesse H. Metcalf and Representatives U. S. Guyer, William P. Cole, jr., and John H. Eagle Greets Peery's Visit To New Park

Governor Is Welcomed From Air in Inspection With Board.

Seashore State Site Is Praised; Officials Continue Tour.

By the Associated Press.

Seashore State Park, Va., May 19. A bald eagle, screeched and flapped its wings in welcome to Gov. George C. Peery and members of the Virginia Conservation and Development Commission here today.

The Governor, members of the commission and a score of invited guests had just begun the first official inspection tour of the State's new chain of six parks when they came upon the nest. Fully 6 feet in diameter, it was perched high in a pine tree.

Suddenly, as the party thought the reception was over, the eagle, with a flutter, sailed off in a sort of salute flight, over 1,100 acres of park stretching from the waters of the Chesapeake to Broad Bay to the rear.

Praises Park.

"A beautiful park," said the Governor, "Virginia should be proud of it," and Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the commission, added "the park has great possibilities and we are going to do our best to make the most of them."

"We hope to open the bathhouse within the next month," said Hall, explaining that the remainder of the park will not be open to the public this year because it is still under construction and there are no funds available at present for the employment of caretakers.

The park thus far has been developed by the National Park Service after the State acquired the land. The Commonwealth also has an option on nearly twice as much acreage for additional park space.

Entertained by Van Deventer.

H. E. Weatherwax, regional officer for the park service, estimated that the park is accessible to more than a quarter of a million persons within a 50-mile radius.

The party was entertaind at tea by Braden Van Deventer, a member of the commission, at his cottage at Virginia Beach. This evening the party were guests of Col. Griffith Dodson, clerk of the House of Delegates.

Early tomorrow the group departs for Westmoreland State Park and participation in the dedication of the restored portrait of William Pitt at Montross, Va.

Priest of 90, Honored by Pope, Rides Old W. Virginia Circuit

Father Quirk Will Be Made a Monsignor Next Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

Weston, W. Va., May 19.—As he has done for 51 years, a 90-year-old priest today made the rounds of his mountains congregations—his last Sunday before he becomes a monsignor by order of Pope Pius.

Tuesday the title will be bestowed on the Rev. Father Thomas Acquinas Quirk at a brilliant ceremony at his little church in the West Virginia hills by the Most Rev. J. J. Swint, Bishop of Wheeling.

For 22 years the priest has ministered to the spiritual and bodily needs of his people by riding the hilly roads and trails on his white horse, Prince.

Together they visited today the three congregations he serves—Sand Fork, Goosepen Run and Orlando—with their 200 parishioners. The ceremonies on Tuesday will be held at Sand Fork.

Born in Ireland, Father Quirk came to the United States from Paris at a call for volunteers by the Bishop of Wheeling.

Workers Unearth Bones of Soldiers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., May 19.—Workmen digging trenches for the new sewer system in Shepherdstown yesterday uncovered many human bones, believed to be those of Confederate soldiers, opposite the Methodist Church, which at the time of the Civil War was used as a base hospital for the Army of the Potomac.

As a soldier would be brought in from the battles, injured severely in the arm or leg, the doctors would amputate and place the parts in a box, burying them outside of the building.

Several of the bones were cut by a saw, it was disclosed.

Labor Group Will Indorse Security Bill

Virginia Federation to Convene Today at Portsmouth.

Constructive Session Is Predicted by President.

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, Va., May 19.—Virginia's labor support of President Roosevelt's social security program was forecast today by leaders of the Virginia Federation of Labor as they met in executive session to pave the way for the general sessions of the convention tomorrow and Tuesday.

J. P. Rapp, of Clifton Forge, president of the State Federation, said he was confident resolutions indorsing the Wagner bill, old age pensions and unemployment insurance would be supported by an overwhelming majority of the 170 accredited delegates.

Prophesying a constructive session, unmarred by serious internal dissension, the president said he believed the union labor representatives not only would vote their approval of security legislation but would urge enactment by the general asembly of appropriate legislation to conform to the national program.

Saying that all delegates were "regular," the federation president said there probably would be no contest before the credentials committee. This committee is composed of S. C. Newbill, of Newport News; E. R. Beisel, of Portsmouth; J. H. Marshall, of Danville; W. E. Butler, of Petersburg, and R. L. Jefferson, of Roanoke.

Among those who will address the convention are John Hopkins Hall, State commissioner of labor and industry; Howard Colvin, of Alexandria, former secretary-treasurer of the State Federation and now connected with the national Department of Labor; Dan Hollinger, business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce; E. A. Snead, of Clifton Forge, former member of the house of delegates; John Saxton, of Norton, president of District 28 of United Mine Workers; Charles W. Cullen, Joseph G. Gillis of the Tobacco Workers' International Union, and George Black of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Shipworkers.

Class Exercises At Westminster To Start Friday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., May 19.—The first of a series of pre-commencement activities at Western Maryland College will be held Friday, when 12 students will compete in the annual Norment speech contest, founded by the late Samuel Norment, of Washington.

The pre-commencement activities will close May 29, when the seniors will be tendered a "farewell."

The sixty-fifth commencement exercises will begin on May 31, when the department of speech will present two plays. June 1, known as "alumni day," will be featured with reunions of classes of 1885, 1920 and 1925; baseball and tennis matches between the alumni and varsity; a business meeting of the alumni association; ceremonies marking the laying of the corner stone of a new dormitory; and the annual dinner of the alumni association in honor of Dr. Albert Norman Ward, president of the college, and Mrs. Ward.

Dr. Ward will deliver the baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning, June 2. The program Sunday night will be featured with "step singing" on the campus by members of the junior class.

Conferring of degrees will take place Monday, June 3, when the Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, D. D., New York, president of the Federation of Churches in America, will deliver the address to the graduates.

The presentation will also mark the fortieth anniversary of the graduation of Dr. Ward and Mrs. Ward, who were classmates at the college in the class of 1895. The portrait is being painted by Hans Schlereth, of Washington.

Employes Hit Grocers' Stand On Labor Bills

B. & O. Workers Condemn Vote of Maryland Retailers to Oppose Measures.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 19.—Local Federation No. 7, Shop Craft Employes, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, yesterday adopted resolutions condemning the passage by the Independent Retail Grocers Association of Maryland, in convention here last week of resolutions opposing the Wagner labor disputes bill and the Black 30-hour-week bill. The association urged defeat of the measures in Congress.

The shop craft resolutions declare these "are the only bills now pending before Congress designed to protect those who work in industry as well as eliminate the necessity for strikes and at the same time hold definite assurance for providing regular employment for many thousands now unemployed," and stated the action of the retail grocers "does not indicate a desire to co-operate with or assist their customers in their efforts to improve their economic conditions."

The grocers' atcion is "interpreted only as an unfriendly act toward organized labor and the officers of the federation feel that we can no longer urge our members to patronize the independent grocers."

The resolutions cite that approximately 85 per cent of the business of the retail grocers comes from men and women who work in industry and that representatives of the federation constantly have urged members to patronize the local independent merchants.

The resolutions are signed by H. A. Powell, president; W. L. Grant, vice president; R. Robinette, secretary; Fred E. Ryan, for the machinists; J. Griese, blacksmiths; F. E. Nierman, boilermakers; J. F. Campbell, carmen; J. W. Korns, electrical workers, and M. J. Brady, sheet metal workers.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 19.—An unusual ceremony was staged here Friday night by Robert White Lodge, A. F. and A. Masons, before a gathering of 125 Masons from over the Eastern Panhandle, when the 21 worshipful masters of the last 21 years of the lodge participated in conferring the master's degree upon John Powers, now member of the faculty of Berkeley Springs (W. Cooper to Talk To Graduation Class of 199

Harrisonburg College's Exercises Scheduled for June 10.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 19.—Dr. William John Cooper, professor of education in George Washington University and former United States Commissioner of Education, will deliver the address to the graduating class of Harrisonburg State Teachers College when degrees are conferred Monday evening, June 10, in Woodrow Wilson Hall.

Dr. E. H. Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Petersburg, will preach the commencement service sermon Sunday morning, June 9. He will also be guest speaker at the Y. W. C. A. services that evening, which will be followed by the seniority services, when seniors bestow their caps and gowns upon girls of the junior class.

One hundred and twenty-one seniors are expected to receive the bachelor of science degree and the collegiate professional certificate, while 78 others, who have completed the two-year curriculum, are expected to receive the professional diploma and certificate. Of the 199 total, 162 are citizens of Virginia.

Final examinations begin Tuesday, June 4, and close Friday, June 7. The graduation program starts Friday evening with a garden party given by the faculty to the senior class and the graduating members of the sophomore class on the lawn of Hillcrest, residence of President Samuel P. Duke. The annual musical recital will follow in Wilson Hall.

Class-day exercises are first on the schedule Monday morning, June 10. Final exercises, at which Dr. Duke will deliver the diplomas and confer the degrees, are scheduled for 8:30 p. m. A dance for the graduating classes in Reed Hall gymnasium will follow.

Allegany Liquor Bill Vetoed by Gov. Nice

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 19.—Gov. Harry W. Nice has vetoed the revised Allegany County liquor control bill, also the measure calling for a referendum for Cresaptown residents on the proposed incorporation of that community. He also vetoed the bill which would have permitted automobile drivers in Allegany County to transport fellow workers to and from industrial plants and to employment for hire.

The Governor signed the bill permitting ten days racing at the Cumberland Fair each year.

Under the Governor's action the amended measure govering the sale of alcorolic beverages in Allegany County is killed and the present law will remain in effect.

Johns Hopkins Doctors Riled By Alien in Their Turtle Race

English 'arf and 'arf Seems to Be Threat at Fifth Running.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 19.—Physicians at the Johns Hopkins University Hospital were up in arms today—in a friendly way, of course—at the possibility of foreign competition stealing honors in their annual "Tartle Darby."

The "Tartle Darby," which translated is "Turtle Derby," will be run for the fifth successive year on Wednesday, and the dopesters today saw the biggest threat in the shape of 'Arf and 'Arf, entered by Dr. Edgar Lawrence, native of England.

'Arf and 'Arf has shown well in early workouts and appears to have an inside chance of crossing the white line of the huge circle on a tennis court well ahead of 47 domestic entries.

Dr. R. Carmichael Tilghman, in charge of the annual derby running, has announced he will take particular precautions against "stimulation" of entries—British champions or no British champions.

He pointed out he suspected no one, but averred there are too many ways of falsely inspiring a winner in a turtle race, such as, he explained, compelling them to sniff pepper, bathing their feet in turpentine and placing irritating ingredients in the paint used to color the shells.

A Nudist at Large Vexes Hagerstown

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., May 19.—Ears a trifle red, Hagerstown police today were debating the best means of capturing a reported nocturnal pedestrian who, irate complainants asserted, is impersonating a one-man nudist colony.

The man has been seen twice clad in no more than a pair of sox. Witnesses said each time he was carrying his outer clothes thrown over his arm.

Poachers Fish for Wild Geese.

Amherst, N. S. (U.P.)—Fishing for wild geese is the latest trick devised by poachers here to outwit game wardens. Police investigations have revealed that the poachers lay out long lines with fish hooks, baited with corn, attached at intervals. The geese, in picking up the corn, swallow the hooks, too. All the poachers have to do is to kill them and take them home.

Roanoke Woman Named Graduate Nurse Leader

Other officers elected were: Second vice president, Mary A. Mastin, of Richmond; secretary, Mary E. Marshall, Hampton; treasurer, Mrs. Jesse Wetsel Faris, Richmond; director, Margaret I. Pinkerton, University. Frances Helen Ziegler, of Richmond, will continue in office of president for another year, the tenure of this position being for two years.

Cumberland Drive Exceeds Its Quota

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 19.—More than the quota set for the Cumberland Community Chest for 1935-36 was attained in the week's campaign just ended under the auspices of the Cumberland Welfare Federation. The amount sought was $57,565 and the amount pledged is $59,503.92. Nine agencies are served.

The industrial division, headed by J. George Smith, reported $29,238.25, practically one-half the quota. Employes of the Celanese Corporation of America pledged $21,000. The women's division, led by Mrs. George W. Legge, wife of the Mayor of Cumberland, exceeded its quota in raising $3,459.37, while the business and professional division, which included all other classes, had a grand total of $26,614.85.

Sleuth to Become Chief Of Police at Lynchburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., May 19.—Capt. Virgil B. Grow, of the detective staff of the police bureau here, will succeed Chief D. C. Smith at the head of the bureau June 1. Chief Smith is leaving the department on two-thirds pay after a service of 45 years.

The office of public safety director, formerly held by Richard F. Wagner, has been abolished. Wagner now is in charge of the city's water and public works departments. The police bureau will install a radio system next month.

9-Month Term Assured For Lancaster Schools

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., May 19.—All white schools and the Julius Rosenwald High School, at Reedville, and the A. T. Wright High School, in Lancaster County, both colored, will have a full nine-month term, W. S. Brent, superintendent of schools in Lancaster and Northumberland Counties, announced yesterday. The Northumberland County school board decided some time ago that the schools in this county could run the full nine months.

The white schools of the two-county division will close Thursday, June 6, and the commencement exercises will be held on June 5.

Paralysis Follows Accident.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 19.—Daniel Stoner, injured when the engine of an oil truck exploded near Williamsport a week ago, was removed to the Washington County Hospital, after he was stricken with partial paralysis yesterday. He was thrown heavily to the roadway by the explosion, but was not believed badly hurt at the time.

Tigers Blast 4 Hurlers to Win, 16-6; Drop Nats Into 6th Place

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

THERE is nothing pleasing to the eye this morning in the American League's vital statistics which reveal the Nats in sixth place, but this department refuses to believe that the Washington Club is that bad. I think the figures are lying a bit. It is no sixth-place ball club that Bucky Harris has at his command.

POVICH.

Right in the face of the figures, where angels fear to tread, I rush in to proclaim that the Nats have first-division possibilities with the pennant among them. Their pennant possibilities, I agree, are not of their own making. What I am driving at is that it isn't much of a league this season. There are no great ball clubs to be beaten. In their darkest hour, six games behind the lead, the Nats can be comforted by that thought.

The Tigers are attempting to repeat, with Schoolboy Rowe, their 1934 big shot, apparently far off form. The Yankees have only one sound outfielder—Ben Chapman—and Johnny Broaca, the 1934 sensation, has not been a consistent winner. Cleveland has its Averill-Johnson faction, a catching problem and a weak-hitting second baseman. The league-leading White Sox, last in 1934, must prove they are more than a two-furlong ball club.

I know the games are played on grass, but on paper the Nats are a first-division ball club. It hasn't hit, but it is a hitting ball team. Except in spots, there has been little complaint with the pitching, although it is far from a pennant-winning staff. A shoddy defense and spotty hitting have alternated in wrecking well-pitched games. And the Nats, on paper, are the best fielding team in the league. I won't take off the rose-colored glasses until I see more of the pennant race.

THE vagaries of baseball were never more strikingly illustrated than yesterday when two pitchers, figures in an even swap a week ago, were scaling the heights and plumbing the depths on different diamonds.

Of course, I speak of Walter Stewart and Belve Bean. The veteran Stewart, whom the Nats were pleased to exchange for Bean in an even swap with the Cleveland club, was making a sucker not only out of the Yankee team but of Manager Bucky Harris who approved the deal. Here in Washington, Bean was lending emphasis to the sour aspects of the deal.

While Stewart was pitching the Indians a 1-to-0, 11-inning victory over the Yankees, Bean, in his debut on the mound for the Nats, was turning in a town-lot performance. He pitched nine hits at the Tigers and surrendered seven runs in four innings before Harris humanely rushed Monte Weaver to his rescue.

And so, in the hour of their great need for pitching talent, the Nats managed to release a pitcher who could shut the Yankees out for 10 innings with eight hits. What is there to say, except that in the only time Stewart started for the Nats this season he was knocked out of the box in the third inning by the Athletics after yielding 10 hits and 9 runs. So what?

DESPITE the futility of it all in recent games, the Nats have been in there swinging, which reminds me of the story of the old ball player who ran so far afoul of the law in a Western State that he drew a death sentence.

The form of execution in that particular community was via the gallows, and the old big leaguer was not taking his fate philosophically, brooding in his death cell as the last long walk neared. The prison chaplain visited him frequently as his final hours waned.

For a while the old slugger listened patiently as the cleric advised him to make hi speace with his Maker and leave this earthly vale with his chin up. Finally he bucked up.

"Never mind any more of that preaching, parson," he said. "Don't you worry about me, now. When that trap is sprung, I'll be in there swinging."

Hadley Hurls for Nats Today As Browns Open 3-Game Stay

THE Nats encounter a welcome change of opposition today, with the St. Louis Browns invading Griffith Stadium for a three-game series.

Against the Browns, the Nats face the prospect of wiping out their home-stay deficit, incurred against the Tigers. In their only two games against St. Louis this season, the Nats won both.

Manager Bucky Harris will send Irving Hadley to the mound in the series opener. Hadley was cheated of a victory over the Tigers when errors behind him despoiled an eight-hit performance.

Manager Rogers Hornsby's pitching choice is Fay Thomas, who is making a clever comeback in the big leagues. After several failures, which included a long trial with the Yankees, the right-handed Thomas came back to the Browns as a consistent winner in the Coast League and has been their most effective pitcher thus far.

With the Browns in the city, possibility of a deal between Washington and St. Louis is strong. Bucky Harris is intent on obtaining a pitcher and the Browns are in need of an outfielder. Fred Schulte may be used in a deal that would bring either Buck Newsom or Joe Knott to the Nats.

The shortstop job on the Nats is still wide open, according to Bucky Harris. The first candidate who manifests any evidence that he can hit consistently can have the job. At the present writing, neither Lyn Lary, Red Kress nor Ossie Bluege has qualified. Harris says he will continue to juggle the trio until one of 'em finds a batting eye.

Loughran Battles In Philly Tonight

Bout With Ettore Is First Since Southern Trip.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 19.—Tommy Loughran makes his first appearance in this country since returning from a successful tour of South America tomorrow night in the feature bout on this week's national program.

Pirates Find Eye, Pound Out 17 Hits

Win 5 of 7 Games in Week, Get 56 Runs.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 19.—The Pittsburgh Pirates, labelled as a heavy-hitting team this spring, finally justified that designation during the past week, as they smashed their way ahead in the National League parade.

During the seven days which ended with today's games the Pirates teed off against the Phillies for 38 runs in three games; then, despite a pair of defeats, finished strongly against Brooklyn to pile up totals of 56 runs and 97 hits. Meanwhile, the Pittsburgh pitchers limited the opposition to 24 tallies and the Bucs won five of the seven games.

Rogell Leads Attack With 4 Blows

Burke, Bean, Weaver, Coppola Are Pounded for 19 Hits.

By Shirley L. Povich.

SCORING six runs in the last two innings, the Nats escaped victory by only a ten-run margin yesterday and won undisputed possession of sixth place from the Tigers who won the ball game.

They held the Tigers scoreless—in the fourth and fifth innings. In every other inning, the Detroit Club was scoring in amounts varying from one to a half dozen. The upshot of it all was 19 hits off four Washington pitchers and a 16-6 victory for the Tigers.

Three Washington pitchers, who were cast in relief roles after Bobby Burke had been bombarded for four runs in the first inning, pitched as though they had been culled from the relief roles, and the 10,000 in the stands were forced to readjust their dinner dates as the game wore on far, far into the twilight.

By the time the Nats got around to scoring against Young Joe Sullivan, the Coast League rookie who beat them in Detroit last week, the Tigers had given Sullivan 13 runs to work with. Going into the seventh inning, he had a three-hit game in his possession.

Parade of Pitchers.

Burke, Bean, Weaver and Coppola was the order of the appearance of the Nats' pitchers and the Tigers didn't discriminate at all, at all. They scored six runs off Burke before three innings were over, slaughtered Bean with a six-run uprising in the seventh, picked up a run against Weaver in the eighth and wound up the game with a two-run flourish against Coppola in the ninth.

Bill Rogell was the chief offender aginst the Washington pitching with four singles, but Hank Greenberg took the opportunity to smack a single, double and triple.

The game began to disintegrate right off the bat—off the Tigers' bats. Cecil Travis threw an error into the first-inning proceedings, which saw Fox line a single to center and Gehringer and Greenberg smack triples to the same sector, and the Tigers had their 4-to-0 lead off Burke.

Bluege's muff of Fox's grounder after Sullivan had walked inspired a one-run rally by the Tigers in the second and singles by Goslin and Rogell boosted their lead to 5 to 0 in the third, in the midst of which Belve Bean made his debut on the mound for the Nats.

Bean Falters.

While the scoreboard was conveying the information that Walter Stewart, whom the Nats swapped to Cleveland last week for Bean, was shutting out the Yankees in an extra-inning battle, Bean was currently occupied with a six-run Tiger uprising in the seventh inning. Eleven Tigers went to bat, two drew walks, Goslin and Hayworth socked singles, Owen smacked a double, Fox whacked a triple and the Tigers had a 13-to-0 lead.

Thus fortified, Sullivan couldn't negotiate his shutout aims in the last two innings. He had yielded the Nats only three hits, one of which was a topped roller by Bolton and another a bunt by Powell, but Heinie Manush, who had made the only legitimate hit by the Nats up to that point, led off the eighth with a triple and the Nats came out of the inning with five runs.

Stewart Halts Yanks, 1-0, For Tribe

Ex-Nat Blanks Foe for 10 Innings as Indians Gain 2d Place.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, May 19.—The Indians' deal with the Washington club last week which brought Pitcher Walter Stewart to Cleveland, paid immediate and highly-pleasing dividends today when Stewart was the hero of a 1-0 11-inning victory over the Yankees.

Obtained from the Nats in exchange for Pitcher Belve Bean, Stewart made his first start on the mound for the Indians today and held the Yankees scoreless with eight hits before he was withdrawn for a pinch hitter in the eleventh. By winning Cleveland moved in to second place in the league standings.

The veteran left-hander was engaged in a brilliant pitching duel with Red Ruffing before 27,537 fans when his mates finally pushed across the winning run. Ruffing had allowed only four hits and had fanned eight before the Indians scored to win their lone victory of the four-game series.

Lloyd Brown, also a former Washington pitcher, finished the game for Cleveland and held the Yankees hitless during the eleventh.

Kamm Leads Rally.

Willie Kamm led off the final inning with his third single of the game and Bozie Berger got credit for a hit when Red Rolfe and Bill Dickey collided in running down his attempted sacrifice bunt. Pinch Hitter Milt Galatzer, batting for Catcher Brenzel, drew a pass to fill the bases and a second pinchhitter, Bruce Campbell, drove a long fly to

U. S. Davis Cupmen Eliminate Mexico

By the Associated Press.

Mexico, D. F., May 19.—The United States Davis Cup team defeated Mexico, four matches to one, in the American zone finals, completed today.

Bryan M. Grant, of Atlanta, trounced the youthful Mexican schoolboy, Daniel Hernandez, 6—1, 6—3, 6—0, but Gene Mako defaulted to Esteban Reyes in the fifth set of their matches because of a severe leg cramp. Mako had taken the first set, 6—1, and the fourth, 6—4, with Reyes taking the second, 6—3, and the third, 8—6. Mako was leading 2—0 in the fifth set when he was forced to quit.

Bowman Tops Welsh With Rally for Title

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., May 19.—Herbert Bowman, the New York Athletic Club shot-putter who turned tennis player, today won his seventh Old Dominion tennis tournament at the Country Club of Virginia.

Bowman spotted Barney Welsh, of Washington, national public parks champion, two sets, and then came from behind in each of the other three to win, 2—6, 4—6, 8—6, 6—3, 7—5.

It was a grand comeback for a man of 38 against a youth of 23, and the final score was a tribute not only to crafty tactics on the part of the New Yorker, but to perfect physical condition that enabled him to outlast his slender opponent.

At the outset it appeared that it would be a walkaway victory for Welsh, but calmly Bowman kept sending him from one side of the court to the other until finally the strain began to tell. Welsh, puffing, remarked once that he should "enter the walkathon." He tried a bit of the same tactics, but he didn't have the strategy of Bowman.

Between the third and fourth sets a ten-minute intermission was to be allowed, and it was there, perhaps, that Welsh, already failinf in strength, apparently, may have made a serious tactical error. Welsh led, 3 games to 1, in the third set, when Bowman turned on the heat to pull up and pass him to lead, 5 games to 3.

It was apparent that Welsh needed rest and needed it badly, and the story might have been different if he had let Bowman take that set immediately and accept the rest. He didn't, however, and through deuced games pulled up to 5-all, and then it was 6-all, with Welsh continuing to tire, Bowman, not bothered by the strain, hammered out the two games to win the set that Welsh might have yielded with far less effort in the interest of coming back fresh for another.

As it was he was thoroughly tired when he came back after intermission. He took the lead, but Bowman came from behind to square the match at 2-all in sets.

The fifth set saw Welsh win his own service and break through Bowman's to lead 2-love and then Bowman broke through Welsh's service and win his own to square it. There was disputed game point as Bowman when ahead 3-2. The ball apparently hit outside, but the lineman stuck to his guns when Welsh protested and that was all there was to it.

Welsh, spurred by the decision, took three games in a hurry to lead again 5-3. At that moment Bowman bestirred himself and ran Welsh ragged from side to side as he won four straight games, the set and match. In all service was broken seven times in the 12 games of the last set, four times by Bowman and three times by Welsh.

Whitehead Annexes Sixth Game, Though Driven From the Mound.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, May 19.—With Rookie John Whitehead pitching his sixth straight victory, the Chicago White Sox downed the Red Sox, 6 to 5, today, to take their first series in the East and maintain their hold on the American League leadership.

For the first time, however, 25-year-old Whitehead, playing his initial season in the major leagues, failed to go the full route. After scattering eight Red Sox hits that produced only one run in eight innings, he was driven out in the ninth.

Singles by Werber and Cronin, coupled with three passes, forced him to withdraw. Whitlow Wyatt took up the burden with two runs already in, the bases filled with one out, and the White Sox leading, 6 to 3.

Almada singled to center to score two more runs and put the Croninmen within one run of tying the score, but Dahlgren struck out and Pinch Hitter Wes Ferrell was thrown out by Hayes.

Ferrell batted for the last of four Red Sox pitchers, Pipgras, who followed Henry Johnson, Welch and Walberg to the showers.

Al Simmons led the Chisox attack with two doubles and a single. Manager Jimmy Dykes drove in two runs, walked twice and collected a double and two singles in his other three efforts. Ray Radcliff had a double and two singles.

32,784 See Scotch Grid Team Win at New York

New York, May 19 (AP).—The Scottish Football Association's picked team won its second victory in as many days today, defeating a selected Eastern squad, 5 to 1, before a crowd of 32,784 cash customers at the Polo Grounds.

Scotch Football Team Worth $500,000, Plays Like Million

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, May 19.—For 20 minutes or so before the international soccer football game between the Scottish Football Association's picked team on tour and a New York-New Jersey-New England-selected eleven at the Polo Grounds this afternoon, two elegant pipers paraded up and down the empty playing field and piped. The crowd complained . . . Where weer the booting men of the old country? Or does impatioence with pomp and ritual and ceremony become immediately grafted onto dwellers in this country of schedule and hurry and rush?

Now, I can always see a soccer football game, anywhere, any time. Pipers I can listen to the live-long day, and I think there is no braver, no more exciting and romantic costume than the kilts. In London I heard and saw the Irish pipers who marched down for the changing of the guards, and I followed them like a small boy until they were once more swallowed up by their barracks.

But the crowd here showed impatience with the fine pipers as the game was delayed. And the sun was shining and the sky was blue and it was warm and pleasant. Perhaps I am growing too old to be impatient any more. And, besides,

Burnett Takes Playoff at Woodmont

Cards 79 to Annex Medal as Hayes, Greene Fall Behind.

By Dave Herman.

AFTER 18 holes of good and weird golf, Volney Burnett, of Indian Spring, otherwise known as the District Firefighter, scored a none too proud 79 yesterday to defeat Dr. William F. Hayes, unattached, and Hickman Greene, Manor star, in the playoff for the medal in the Woodmont Country Club invitation tournament.

Ten strokes over par for the route, Burnett finished two shots ahead of Dentist Hayes and three in front of Greene.

Peacock Foregoes Play.

Roger Peacock, Woodmont invitation champion, who had tied for the medal at 72 with Burnett, Hayes and Greene in the tournament proper, probably would have won the playoff in a breeze had he been able to attend. Again Peacock was burdened with his duties at Indian Spring, and couldn't get away.

It is doubtful if any playoff for a tournament medal has witnessed such a miserable exhibition—from the standpoint of all three players. Greene, fresh from a three-under-par exhibition in his 12-hole final with Billy Dettweiler in the Chevy Chase invitation, looked like a sure thing to win, but he knocked the ball all over the lot, missed green after green, was in numerous traps, and was only a shell of his former self.

Greens Fast, Tricky.

The Woodmont greens were lightning fast and tricky and the three participants failed to solve them at a single hole. The boys were constantly overshooting the green, playing short and three-putting.

Dr. Hayes, short, stocky, red-haired, late of Georgetown University, can attribute his defeat to a four-putt green on the twelfth hole. On the green nicely with his second, he putted like a dub, finally taking a 6. Burnett, over in two, got down in one putt for a par 4 to increase his lead, and Greene took a 5. Hayes also had an unplayable lie on the fourth hole after slicing into the woods from the tee, and here was another 6 that proved disastrous.

At the end of nine holes, Burnett was the only one to break 40. He had a 39, and Greene and Hayes, 41 each.

Par in Next Three.

Burnett shot par golf for the next three holes, Hayes had a 5 on the eleventh and a 6 on the twelfth hole, where Greene took 5s and Burnett took a 5-stroke lead on Hayes and 4-stroke lead on Greene.

Hayes scuffed his tee shot on the sixteenth, but played the greatest shot of the day with his second—a low winging brassie that was just short of the green. He almost holed out for a 3. Greene played shakily for a 6, dubbing his third, and Burnett, trapped on his second, took 5.

Burnett went to pieces on the short seventeenth. He was far to the left with his tee shot, missed his second, and was fortunate in getting down in 5. Here Hayes picked up a stroke by getting on in 2 and putting safely for his 4.

One stroke behind going to the eighteenth, Hayes played two poor wood shots, while Burnett, to the right in 2, sank a 6-footer for a par 4 to clinch the match. Hayes' best was a 5.

Their cards:

Little Defends Crown in Britain

Westerner, 5-to-1 Choice, Tees Off Today at St. Anne's.

Officials Insist Tourney Isn't 'British,' But 'the' Amateur.

By the Associated Press.

ST. ANNE'S-ON-THE-SEA, Eng., May 19.—Fortified by a day's complete rest and a pint of rich milk at every meal for the last week, unsmiling Lawson Little begins tomorrow his defense of the amateur golf championship over the Royal Lytram and St. Anne's course.

Previously, this important event has commonly been referred to as the "British Amateur," but a dignified committeeman of the Royal and Ancient Club, governing body of the sport in Great Britain, today notified the Associated Press it's the "Amateur Championship."

"There's no such thing as the British Amateur," he said severely. "There's an American Amateur and the Amateur and we are very jealous of the distinction."

Claims Even Chance.

Whatever they choose to call it, Little still felt that he had an even chance of being the first champion since 1901 successfully to defend the crown.

That plenty of others felt the same was reflected by the rush to back the husky American at the current short odds of 5 to 1.

Little will not start until 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon after a majority of the field is well under way. His first opponent, T. A. Parker, of Fairhaven, figured to give him little trouble, but the Californian will face a fairly formidable rival in the second round in Eric Martin Smith, a former champion, provided Smith gets past his first-round test.

From there it promised to be easy sailing for the champion until the quarter-finals, where the dope indicates he will meet Leslie Garnett, long-hitting Briton, who carried him to the nineteenth hole in last year's semi-finals.

McLean Favored Finalist.

If play follows form and Little gets past Garnett, he probably will progress to the finals, where his most likely opponent is Jock McLean, stylish Scottish shotmaker.

John Forsman, dapper little member of the Winged-Foot club at Mamaroneck, N. Y., is scheduled to lead the American contingent off the first tee at 9:36 a. m. (3:36 a. m. Eastern standard time) with W. Pharazyn, of Letchworth, as his opponent. Following him will be Robert Barbour, of Paterson, N. J., against R. Kay, of Miri, Sarawak, at 10:24; Robert W. Knowles, jr., of Brookline, Mass., against D. O'Donnell Higgins, of Montreal, at 10:54; Capt. A. Bullock-Webster, of Monterey Park, Calif., against H. Eatough, Burnley, at 1:24.

The only other American slated to play in the crowded first day's competition is Dan Topping, Greenwich, Conn., who will meet C. Anderson, of Northwood, at 3:48 p. m.

LANKY CLIFF KEYSER, Pig 'n' Whistle catcher, broke up a ball game yesterday when he singled one of Joe Stankus' pitches to high grass in left field with the bases loaded in the tenth inning to give his team a 6-to-5 victory over Blue Flame Valet Shop in the day's outstanding battle for Post Association honors in Section A of the National City League.

The defeat tumbled Blue Flame from the select of unbeaten teams and the Pigs now share the sectional leadership with Murphy's 5 and 10 Store, which won from Rinaldi Coalmen by a decisive 9-to-0 score.

Though its ace hurler was forced to retire in the third under the fire of the Typos' hitting attack, Cherner Motor rallied in the last two innings to nose out the Union Printers, 12 to 11, and Miller Furniture defeated the Army Medicos, 7 to 2, in the other A section game.

Five Tie for Lead.

Indications of the wide-open race for Post Association honors in Section B were further shown by yesterday's results, which threw five of the eight entries into a deadlock for the lead. Capital Transit dislodged the hitherto undefeated Warwick A. C. team from its undisputed first-place position by yesterday's 4-to-3 triumph; Charlie Booker hurled the Woodmen of World, Elm Camp, to a 7-to-1 victory over Georgetown A. C.; Stansbury A. C., behind the sparkling pitching of George Glassbrenner, halted David's Grill, 10 to 2, and District Grocery Store beat Lewis Ice Cream Co., 29 to 16.

Joe Stankus was the victim of his own wildness in the Pigs-Blue Flame fracas. Staked to a one-run lead in the tenth, he walked Willie Wolf after Heinie Gorman's single to start the inning. Hamel was hit by a pitched ball and Buddie Nau also was given a free pass, forcing in the tying run. Then Keyser injected his timely bingle, his third hit of the day. It was the third victory for Francis Peffer, who hurled creditably in the relief role.

Singman Bats in Run.

Singman ended the suspense of the Cherner fans when he singled home the deciding run in the last inning of the Printers' fray. Bob Lyons' pitching and the hitting of Sam Hook, Waverly Wheeler and Harry Bassin were the high lights of Murphy's victory over the Rinaldi nine.

Foster Mathias struck out 16 Warwick batsmen and yielded only three hits in a brilliant bit of pitching, the best of his three consistently mound efforts this season. His brother and batterymate, B. Mathias, and Duley and Beach were chiefly responsible for the Transit team's runs.

The David Grillmen also went hungry for runs as Glassbrenner permitted five scattered bingles and fanned ten in the Stansbury-Grill game.

Booker Hurls Well.

Charlie Booker also shared in the pitching honors for the day by his masterful hurling for W. O. W. against the Georgetown A. C. Hubert Bohnke stole batting honors with four hits in five trips to the plate.

Marvin Brown collected two circuit clouts and four other hits in the batting orgy of the Grocerymen against Lewis Ice Cream.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fort Hunt, Va., May 19.—The Fort Hunt C. C. C. tossers bowed to the Bokar team, a ranking Post Association club, 4 to 3, as Harry Ensor, of the visitors, and Orlando hooked up in a sensational pitcher's duel. Statistically, Orlando had the edge, yielding only six hits against 9 and being credited with 12 strikeouts to Ensor's seven.

Hecht's, 10; Palais Royal, 3.

THE two-game winning streak of the Lansburgh's team terminated abruptly yesterday before the fine pitching of Dutch Gaum, who hurled the unbeaten Kann's Sons Co. into the top position of the Department Store League, an affiliate of The Post Association. The score was 6 to 2.

Joe Mills, Tommy Nolan and Bob McVean supplied the scoring punch for Kann's in its late attack against Pitcher Devers in the seventh, when the Kannsmen tallied three times to put the game on ice.

Manager Messink, of the Hechtmen, sent out a new pitcher in the person of Bill "Lefty" Packett, who completely dominated the Palais Royal hitters with his southpaw slants, after Earl Bowman had aroused his ire with a home run in the opening inning.

Only Two Victories.

Despite its victory, Kann's has only two wins to its credit in the official standings. President Mullenberg has declared the Kann's-Palais Royal game no contest, because of a misunderstanding with respect to the eligibility rules. The game will be replayed if necessary.

BALLSTON and Manassas extended their joint domination over the White Section teams of the Northern Virginia League for another week by scoring their third successive victories yesterday. Ballston handed Arlington its first defeat of the season when Pitcher Duff, imported from Winchester, shaded Emmet Busher in a 6-2 game, and Manassas slugged out 14 hits to win from Herndon, 9 to 2. Rhodney Furr and the Middleburg team broke its losing jinx by upsetting Falls Church, 7 to 2, in the other White Section contest.

G. W. Will Play Marines Today To Open Slim College Program

THE spectre of examinations hovers over the campus this week as the college athletes turn from the field of honor to their text books for one more assault on the records—this time the scholastic records. But, while the season reached a climax last week, there are a few odds and ends to be cleaned up.

Georgetown's tennis team has two engagements, one tomorrow with Loyola at the Hilltop, and the other with Navy Saturday at Annapolis. The Hoyas are favored in both, having won six or seven matches.

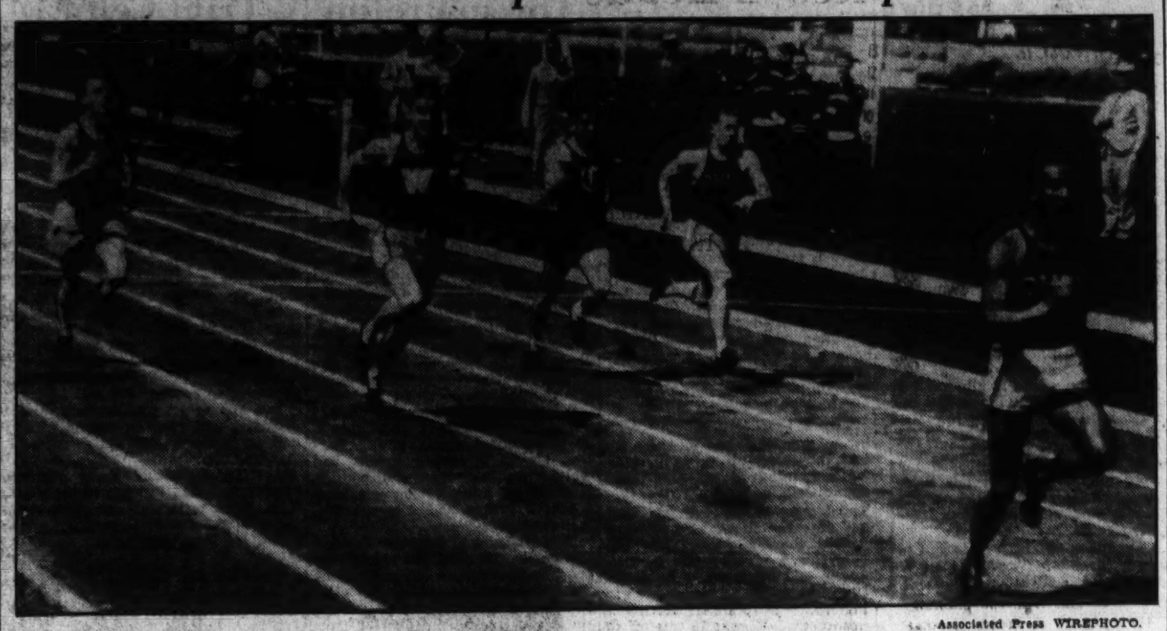
Maryland's baseball team ends a successful campaign Friday at College Park, with North Carolina guest opposition for the afternoon, while on Saturday the Terp trackmen vie with Navy at Annapolis. Maryland's high ranking in the Southern Conference championship games lends added importance to the meet.

Another college diamond season is terminated this afternoon when George Washington faces the Quantico Marines on the Ellipse diamond at 3 o'clock. The Colonials were scheduled to wind up the year yesterday but the game was postponed.

Catholic University's trackmen will run against Randolph-Macon and American University in a triangular meet tomorrow at Brookland, and Saturday the Cards will entertain Gallaudet in the home bowl.

In one brief sentence, the college boys this week are offering one ball game, two tennis matches, and three track meets as an encore, after a fashion, to a highly entertaining spring sports campaign.

World Record Equaled in 100-Yard Sprint



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Jesse Owens (right) is shown as he broke the tape at Evanston, Ill., Saturday to equal the world's record of 9.4 seconds for the 100-yard dash. The dusky Ohio State sprinter finished seven yards ahead of Clem Janicki, of Wisconsin. Merlin Willey, Ohio State, was third. It was a quadrangular meet among Big Ten collegiates.

Two Post Clubs Win First Games

Yesterday's Results.
Bonday, 8; Condor, 6.
Iona, 13; Encore, 8.

The Post Association race tightened up a bit yesterday in the Atlantic & Pacific League as the Bonda and Iona teams broke into the win column with a pair of surprising victories, Iona slugged out a 13-3 score over Encore and Bonda downed Condor, 8 to 6, for their first wins in league competition. The Bokar and Rajah nines were not scheduled to play.

Scafide, Milano, Schuburn and Smith, all touted potent bats in Iona's 20-hit assault on the opposing pitchers. Scafide's home run in the third inning virtually sealed the fate of Encore as Oliver, the Iona pitcher, scattered the nine hits of the opposition with minimum damage. Scarlotta, Encore third-baseman, garnered one-third of his team's total hits.

After Condor had tied the score in the fourth, 6-all, the Bonda batsmen, led by Higgins, Skinner and Nizon, immediately seized the advantage again in the fifth by a scant 1-run margin, and boosted it up to 2 runs in the sixth. Behind this new lead, Pitcher Oliver and his teammates settled down and held the Condors at bay. Both games were prematurely terminated because of the expiration of the time limit for the diamonds.

Hagerstown Racing Opens Tomorrow; Officials Confident

Daily Double Is Offered As Lure

Post Time Is 2 o'Clock; Prominent Stables Enter Horses.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 19.—With close to 250 of the finest horses ever to race here since the sport of kings was revived in the fall of 1929, and the best colony of race riders ever to show on a State half-mile track, the Hagerstown Fair Association can see nothing but success for its ten-day spring meeting which opens at 2 p. m. Tuesday.

Numerous winners during the recent Bowie, Pimlico and Havre de Grace meetings are on the grounds. They will be given ample opportunity to run as 70 races will be offered before the curtain is lowered June 1. Fields in all races will be limited to eight starters. This is being done in order to insure each and every starter a fair chance in the runs around the turns.

Thousands of turfites, who took in the spring mile meetings in this State, are in town, attracted by the fact that they will get a chance to strive for a "daily double," as this form of wagering will be held in connection with each day's first and third races.

Deadline in Double.

In order to be able to post right after the day's opener what every starter in the second half of the "daily double" will pay, Pari-Mutuel Manager Earl Walden will close the "daily double" windows at 1:50 p. m. This means that fans, who intend to wager on the "daily double" must be on the grounds early.

Among the more prominent stables on the grounds are those of Mr. and Mrs. M. Nelson Bond, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bowes Bond, Mr. and Mrs. J. Merryman Black, G. C. Obercash, Everett Brining, Buck Willson, Donald Yates, G. L. Stryker, Mr. and Mrs. William Shrewbridge, Mr. and Mrs. Al Getz, Charles Feltner, Kenneth N. Gilpin, R. L. Hanna, H. C. Vaughn, Donald Christmas, "Buttons" Forehand, Bob Jackson, Bob Crawford, Bill McNair, J. M. Bell and Basil Hall.

General Manager Bester has had the entire plant spruced up for Tuesday's opening. He is confident of playing host to a 10,000 opening-day crowd as the various automobile bus companies of Baltimore, Washington, Frederick, Cumberland, Martinsburg, Charles Town, Berryville and Charlottesville are sending over their fleets. This same service will be available throughout the meeting.

Year's Best Race Balked by Waves

Champ Unnamed, Crews Abandon Sprint Cup.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 19.—The greatest sprint regatta of the current Eastern rowing season is the one that now will never be held.

The wind-tossed waters of Cayuga Lake balked all efforts to run off the Carnegie Cup regatta at Ithaca yesterday and turned the debate over the relative sprint merits of the varsity crews of undefeated Navy, Yale, Princeton and Cornell into an academic discussion without a satisfactory answer.

After waiting for hours for the rough waters to subside, officials abandoned the regatta for the year and left the Eastern sprint title for Navy and Pennsylvania to fight over in the Adams Cup races at Annapolis on Saturday. Harvard, third competitor in this race, does not figure to press either the Tars or the Quakers, who likewise are undefeated.

Golfers Qualify Today.

Chicago, May 19 (AP).—Chicago's district qualifying round for the National Open golf tournament, postponed from last Monday because of record rainfall which flooded the Medinah Country Club courses, will be played tomorrow.

Bolton Sluggers Triumph.

The Bolton Sluggers defeated the Cardinals, 20 to 4, yesterday on the Raymond School diamond. Bill Hough hurled for the winners.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Rockingham Park, May 19.

A. G. Vanderbilt, the young millionaire, seems to have set the highest turf honors as his objective. Not only has he one of the largest stables in training, but he added several Audley Farm horses to his string when that establishment put its charges on the auction block yesterday. Although he was off to a late start, we may yet see his cerise and white colors installed as the leading money-winning banner at the end of this year. He collected a small fortune in purses in Maryland, and, under Trainer Bud Stotler's charge, Vanderbilt horses have been scoring at both Belmont and Rockingham. From reports, Discovery is in winning form, being the victim of poor racing luck yesterday, and will cut a big figure in the handicap circles this year. Vanderbilt not only will have a group of formidable 3-year-olds to send after the big purses next year but he is reported to have a crop of coming juveniles that will dazzle the eye. And, too, Vanderbilt has something that many rich owners have lost. That is a keen interest in his horses. There was no more regular patron of the Maryland tracks than the likeable young man and he has been dividing his time since between Belmont and Rockingham. He is said to have designs on next year's Derby and Preakness. But before that, he would like to see Discovery win next year's Santa Anita Handicap. Three winners for Bennings, Inc., yesterday. BILL.

First race—Kowtow ran into the money last out and appears to be ready to graduate from the maiden ranks. Bromide seems headed for second money in the small field. Advocate Junior carries 118 pounds and may find the burden too great in the stretch.

Second race—Maid Well is said to have worked briskly and seems to have found a field in which to score. Twenty Karat has had numerous opportunities to enter the win column and has failed. Be There, breaking off the rail, may have something to say about the purse distribution.

Third race—Alwintour has that burst of early speed so necessary in these short sprints. With the proper ride, I expect a win mutuel. Immune and Starogan to hold the others safe.

Fourth race—Zulu Lad gives away many pounds to this field, but he is in that rare form that his recent win suggests and I expect him to score. Minna and Gifted Lady for the place and show.

Fifth race—Wayward Son will like this mile route. He has operated in better company. Sun Erwin has demonstrated that he is not far away from a winning effort and looms as a contender here. Brillfallon for the show.

Sixth race—Saint Kitts, in shape can defeat this kind. That last effort was too dull to be true. I'm going right back. Top High and Popo to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Tarsan Betsy is not a reliable filly, but she can turn on the speed at times, particularly when the price is right. I'm putting her on top tomorrow. Fair Verbena and Weedidit for the other awards.

Eighth race—Pass is the figure horse in this group, although the small field and the distance seems to fit Olamay. Gay Party was rounding into shape in Maryland and may upset the dope.

Barnett Battles Tow in Prelim Next Week

Western Md. Giant Fights on Brown-Everett Program Here.

Bobby Tow, Alexandria's bus-driving and beak-busting heavyweight, will return to the wars in a ten-round co-feature added to the support of the Natie Brown-Buck Everett bout at Griffith Stadium a week from tonight. Tow's opponent will be Norman Barnett, the former Western Maryland boxing and football star.

A sparring partner of Primo Carnera who boasts 12 knockouts in 20 professional starts, young Barnett stands 6 feet 4 inches and weighs no less than 210 pounds. Himself no midget, Tow stretches 6 feet 3 inches and hits the 204-pound mark.

Barnett showed here on the last Brown-Everett card, but not to very good advantage. His opponent, Steve Collucci, was built very close to the ground and emphasized his squat construction by fighting from an exaggerated crouch. Crouch and all, Barnett was very lucky to look as good as he did against Collucci.

Barnett is managed by Al Thoma, trainer of Steve Hamas, who has great faith in the big boy's future.

"You'll see all the difference in the world when Barrett fights Tow," Thoma promises. "Against a boy of his own height and proportions, Norman will look like a different fighter. Once Bob gets the range, he's a mighty dangerous piece of punching machinery. I think he'll get the range on Tow."

Jewish Center Stages Bouts Thursday

AN amateur boxing show will be held at the Jewish Community Center, starting at 8:30 p. m. Thursday, for the benefit of the Jewish Community Center building fund. Eight bouts are listed.

In a 118-pound clash, Hal Peterson, of the Jewish Community Center, is scheduled to swap swats with Eddie Saugstedt, A. A. U. champion. Peterson dropped a close decision to Saugstedt in the finals of the A. A. U. championship tournament.

Leon Shube, of the Jewish Community Center, who held the District amateur lightweight championship in 1934, will meet Willie Feary, Olympic A. C., the 1935 titleholder, in another bout. Shube was unable to defend his title this year because of illness in his family.

Meet in Third Bout.

Bob Rawson, 145-pound champion, will meet Steve Thompson in a rubber match. The two have tangled twice before, each taking a decision. Dick Strickler will engage Bob Coughlin in a heavyweight encounter.

Following the amateur bouts, Marty Gallagher and Natie Brown, outstanding local heavyweights, will participate in exhibition bouts against other opposition. A wrestling card may be arranged for the program.

An admission charge of $1 will be made. The affair is open to the public.

Chesapeakes Trim Celtic Nine, 4-3

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., May 19.—In the most thrilling games seen here in years, the Chesapeake A. C., from West Point, Va., today scored a 4-to-3 ten-inning victory over the St. Mary Celtics. More than 800 fans witnessed the battle.

Chesapeake's winning marker was scored when Coffee hit a hard grounder to second, the ball taking a bad hop to get by Langford, and Phoenix, who was on second after getting a base on balls, scored standing up.

Alexandria High School's athletic teams conclude their schedules this week. Tuesday the baseball team meets Roosevelt here in a return game and then travels to Ballston for the final game of the season with Washington and Lee Thursday.

Capt. Paul Shu will lead the track team in an attempt to defeat the Washington and Lee combination Wednesday in the final meet of the season.

Race Scrambled In Montgomery

Nine Baseball Games Are Slated for Week.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School may blame Mike Godfrey, of Montgomery Blair, for not having a strong claim to the baseball crown of Montgomery County, for it was Godfrey's work Friday that knocked the Bethesdans out of the undefeated class and sent the county race into a scramble. Blair, in a temporary lead with a victory in one start, plays Poolesville this week in its only inter-county game. Eight other ball games are carded, as are two tennis matches and the county track meet.

Tomorrow is a big day, with four games carded. Gaithersburg at Sherwood and Damascus at Clarksville. Bethesda will wind up its season at Eastern and Blair entertains Poolesville. Damascus at Sherwood and Blair at Hyattsville are carded on Thursday, while Friday finds Rockville at Hyattsville. Poolesville at Damascus and Devitt at Gaithersburg. Bethesda visits in a pair of tennis matches, Roosevelt on Tuesday and Rockville Thursday.

The biggest event of the year, the annual track and field meet for all schools, is carded on Saturday at Rockville.

Braves Tumble Before Dean's Pitching

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 18.—Dizzy Dean, pitching despite a slight knee injury, turned in his fifth victory of the season today as the world champion Cardinals defeated the Boston Braves, 7 to 3, in their series finale before 12,000 Sunday fans.

The Dizzy one, enjoying a good day on the mound, held the Braves to seven hits and put the finishing stitches on his own triumph by taking the leading role in the four-run Cardinal rally in the eighth inning. With the bases loaded, J. Herman knocked a hot single to Lee, who had replaced Babe Ruth in left field, and Davis and T. Moore scored. Lee misjudged the bounding ball, and Durocher also came home as Dizzy reached second. Martin's single brought the elder Dean in with the final run.

It was Kamm's first appearance in the Cleveland lineup. He went to third base in the absence of O'Dell Hale.

By his victory, Stewart illustrated that he retains his mastery of the Yankees. It was his frequent triumphs over the New York club while with Washington that figured prominently in the Nats' pennant drive in 1933.

Cumberland Given 10-Day Race Meet

Annual Fall Session Is Increased by Bill.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 19.—Cumberland's fall racing season was increased from five to ten days when Gov. Harry W. Nice signed House Bill No. 60, which grants the Cumberland Fair Association, Inc., permission to conduct ten-day meetings each year at the Fairgo half-mile oval with betting privileges.

The bill was introduced in the House of Delegates by C. William H. "Solly" Baer, of this city.

According to Harry A. Manley, president of the Cumberland Fair Association, this year's meeting will start the week preceding fair week. The first five days of thoroughbred racing will be conducted August 13 to 17, inclusive, and after idle days on Sunday and Monday the meet will be resumed Tuesday, August 20, and concluded Saturday, August 24.

Cumberland is the second half-mile track in the State of Maryland to be granted permission to hold a ten-day race meeting. Hagerstown introduced similar sessions two years ago and its 1934 spring meeting will get under way next Tuesday.

Trojans Seek Cash To Send Team East

Trackmen Need $4,900 to Reach Cambridge.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, May 19.—The question of whether the West's greatest track and field team, the University of Southern California squad, will be able to compete in the I. C. A. A. A. championships at Cambridge a dozen hence, will be answered this week.

With only $1,100 of the necessary $5,000 in the coffers, campus leaders will launch an intensive final campaign tomorrow, confident they can collect enough money to send 20 members of Coach Dean Cromwell's squad east in quest of the title they are favored to win.

Coach Cromwell is convinced by the performances yesterday at Palo Alto, when his team walked off with the California collegiate championship at the expense of Stanford, defending I. C. 4-A champions of California, that his men can win the Eastern event if enough money can be scraped together for the trip.

AUCTION SALES

NOTICE OF SALE OF PROPERTIES OF WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE AND ANNAPOLIS ELECTRIC RAILROAD COMPANY

By virtue of a decree of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, dated May 8, 1935, and passed in a cause therein pending entitled R. E. Duvall Company, Incorporated, versus Washington Baltimore and Annapolis Electric Railroad Company, the undersigned Special Master will offer for sale at public auction on Friday, June 14, 1935, at 10 o'clock A. M., at the Courthouse door at Annapolis, Maryland, the properties constituting the railroad system of the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Electric Railroad Company. That such sale of said properties will be offered in separate parcels and in the following order:

FIRST—That single track portion of the defendant Railroad Company's system known as the Annapolis Short Line and extending from and including Bladen Street Station in the City of Annapolis, Maryland, to Anne Arundel County, Maryland, a distance of approximately eighteen and one-half miles; and in connection therewith all the right, title and interest of the Terminal Real Estate Company of Baltimore City and the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Electric Railroad Company in the real estate constituting the former right-of-way of the Baltimore and Annapolis Short Line Railroad company from Shipley to and in Baltimore City.

This parcel will be offered subject to the lien, operation and effect of—

(a) Mortgage to the Fidelity Trust Company, Trustee, of Baltimore City, and the bonds and coupons secured thereby in an aggregate amount of $1,225,000 with interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum from February 1, 1935, and

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

It's All Done By Deep Breathing.

("Dr. Samuel A. Weisman, of the University of Minnesota Medical School, says that brain power is in ratio to the chest size. Children who are the smartest in school invariably have the deepest chests, he states."—News item.)

Our Otto was a backward child—
Quite stupid was his patter;
He couldn't say the simplest words—
We cried, "Oh what's the matter?"

He couldn't learn a single thing
And grew worse by the minute;
His head looked like a normal head,
But there was nothing in it.

We called physicians great but they Seemed quite as dumb as Otto;
We feared the kid would go through life
Just goofy, blank and blotto.

Then came a medico who said,
"No wonder he is dumbish!
"Look at that chest your Otto has—
"It's far, too far Tom Thumbish!"

"Nobody with a sunken chest
Can ever be quite brainy;
Unless the kid develops it
He'll always be a zany."

To have his chest expanded;
Our Otto now has grown so bright
A Brain Trust Job he's landed.

* * * *

But now, alas! he knows so much
That he's an awful pest, sir;
We mourn the day we ever did
A thing about his chest, sir!

Trek to Chaco Is Arranged By Dukhobors

15,000 Members of Odd Russian Sect Plan to Desert Canada.

By the Associated Press.

Weary of the religious persecution which they charge to Canadian authorities and have publicly resented by parading in the nude, 15,000 members of the strange Russian sect of Dukhobortsi are planning to leave their Saskatchewan homes for the wilds of Paraguyan Chaco.

Preparations for the mass migration will be started tomorrow in New York. Dr. Enrique Bordenave, the Minister from Paraguay, will discuss plans there with a delegation of Dukhobors—the advance guard which will select a locality for the new colony.

Heartened by reports of the success of the Mennonite experiment in the Chaco, which has grown in ten years to a community of 6,000, and guaranteed complete religious freedom by Paraguayan law, the Dukhobors have decided to rebuild in an even stranger land the life they started 35 years ago in Canada.

They are remnants of a sect expelled from Russia about 1885. Literally, the name means "spirit wrestlers." Some went to Canada and others to Cyprus. Dukhobors have no stated places or ceremonies of worship, no holy days and no ordained ministry. They deny the Divinity of Christ, and give mystical interpretation to the Scriptures.

Frequent clashes with Canadian authorities have kept these people before the public in recent years. Their retaliation has taken the form of nude processions in public places and has resulted in the arrest of some of their leaders.

Several months ago a representative of the Saskatchewan colony conferred with Harry A. Dae-English, Paraguayan Consul in Los Angeles, concerning the prospects for settling in the Chaco. The letter was referred to the Paraguayan Government through the Legation here, and a decision reached to afford the future immigrants the advantages of a large area far from the war zone where Paraguay and Bolivia are struggling for mastery of the untamed wilderness.

Dr. Bordenave said his government would welcome the peaceful invasion of the Dukhobors, just as it did the Mennonites. They see in the Chaco, he said, an opportunity to cultivate the fruits and vegetables which comprise their entire diet.

The land would be purchased from private interests at prices ranging from $2 to $3 an acre. The Dukhobors are said to have arrived 35 years ago in Canada owning nothing but the ragged clothes they wore, and now they claim aggregate cash assets of more than $10,000,000. This money would go with them to Paraguay.

The government there, in addition to religious liberty, guarantees foreign settlers and their children exemption from military service and freedom from taxation for 10 years.

Inquirendo Club To Give Banquet

Japanese Ambassador to Attend Wednesday Event.

The Inquirendo, men's club devoted to discussion of current economic and social problems, will hold its sixth annual dinner at the Mayflower Hotel Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.

After dinner speakers will be Justin Miller, head of the Attorney General's crime commission, and the Japanese Ambassador, Hirosi Saito. Harold A. Lafount, former member of the Radio Commission, will review the activities of the club. The toastmaster will be Camden R. McAtee. Speakers who have addressed the club during the year on various phases of the New Deal will be guests of honor.

At the last regular meeting of the Inquirendo officers were elected as follows: Louis G. Caldwell, to succeed Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman as president; J. Gilmer Korner, vice president; Stanley Suydam, secretary-treasurer; Joseph Conrad Fehr, chairman of the membership committee, and McAtee, as an additional member of the executive committee.

Wallet Reported Lost By Farm Rally Delegate

L. N. Bond, a member of the Arkansas farm delegation, told police yesterday that he lost a wallet containing $12, railroad and bus tickets, gallery passes to the House and Senate, a $5,000 insurance policy, a check for $55 and a Mexican $5 bill. He lost the wallet in the New York avenue railroad yards, Bond said.

KEEP YOUR HUSBAND'S LOVE

THE best of men get tired of irritable, complaining wives. If you are weak, nervous and rundown you cannot do your share to make a happy home. Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. Barbara Speers of Akron, Ohio, says, "I had no pep, and was in poor spirits. Your Vegetable Compound eliminated that awful tired feeling. My husband says I am my old self again."
